Tri-state Murphy strike 'OK' says union boss

According to Gil Feldman, organizing chief of Local 692, (Retail Store Employees), the picketing of G. C. Murphy Stores in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Youngstown, Ohio and Fairmont, West Virginia has come off "very good."

Feldman said that the most effective demonstration is taking place in Pittsburgh where 13 Murphy Stores are being picketed.

"We've heard reports from Pittsburgh that the delivery trucks will not cross the lines," he said, adding that customer reception there has been "fantastic."

The tri-state picketing is in support of the six-week-old strike against three Murphy Stores in Baltimore.

Since March 22 over 240 employees of G. C. Murphy Stores at Mondawmin, Liberty Road and Erdman Ave. have been on strike protesting what they claim are low wages, inadequate medical plans and non-retirement benefits.

Union officials claim that management has refused to approach the bargaining table since the first day of the strike.

Feldman says that the only way to make the company negotiate is to expand the strike to neighboring states.

The union boss predicts that by the middle of next week Murphy Stores in both Warren and Kent Ohio will be picketed.

Gun victim may miss long awaited prom

By Willie Egyir and Roman Hankewyez

Northwestern seniors preparing for their prom next Thursday may miss the friendly and warm smile of Michael Briscoe, 19, 5500 block Robin Ave.

Police state the 12th grader, due to graduate next month was shot in the upper abdomen at 10:45 a.m. while sitting with other students in the school library.

He remains in satisfactory condition at the Sinai Hospital after an 11:15 a.m. surgery.

A hospital spokesman told the AFRO young Briscoe's wound is "superficial" and that he is expected to recover soon.

Homicide police state an 18-year-old senior and classmate of the victim is being held for questioning.

School authorities refused to comment on the shooting but reliable school sources reveal Michael, an employee at "For The Record," a records shop on Howard St. downtown was shot at a very close range and immediately carried to the nurses' office for first aid.

They claim the shooting occurred during a reading class in the presence of the class teacher who was about 20 feet away.

Northwestern police said the youths were apparently passing the gun around when it suddenly went off.

Denying there was a scuffle, police state the .38 caliber bullet was recovered from the hallway.

While school authorities remained silent over the incident, an unidentified staffer called the AFRO and complained about the breakdown of discipline in schools, especially the Northwestern High.

"Sometimes, we teachers are afraid to reprimand students. They get high on dope and do what they want," the anonymous teacher caller charged.

The caller, a female, wondered why the "awful things" happening in the Northwestern are never published. The year before last, she said, a student was shot and nobody reported it to the press.

She blaming lack of discipline in school on administrators "who don't pretend to know what is happening and condone shooting, dope and other criminal acts by students."

As the teacher bemoaned the condoning attitude of administrators, student friends of Michael were regretting the shooting.

Allen Redmond, 18, present during the shooting stated: "He was well-known and liked. He didn't participate in any outside activities except working at the record shop."

Celeste Bennett, 19, described Michael as being the "quiet type" and said further "Everyone is so upset that they don't want to go to class. How could the school be safe?"

Michael's parents could not be reached for comment.

School Board votes 5-3 to make Poly co-ed

By Bill Rhoden

By a vote of 5-to-3 the Board of School Commissioners Thursday approved a motion which will co-educationalize Polytechnic High School as of September, 1974.

The action came after the board was unable to decide on a motion introduced by Commissioner Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy Moss which called for the abolition of all unisex schools in Baltimore.

Commissioner Larry Gibson then introduced the new motion which mandates that as of September, 1974, female students will be permitted to enter Poly on the same basis as males.

As expected, Mrs. Moss (who was absent when the last vote was taken) voted for the motion, as did Mrs. Sheila Sachs, James Griffin, Robert Schaefer and, of course, Larry Gibson.

Neither Mrs. Sachs nor Mr. Schaefer agreed with the phraseology of the motion, but both admitted that they were tired of having the matter postponed.

Said Schaefer, "The motion doesn't address the whole issue but once (sex) discrimination is ended at Poly it will be ended at all schools and then maybe we can deal with the real problem of education in all schools."

But the cheers which accompanied the motion's adoption were stifled when Board President Dr. John Walton read a list of school desegregation recommendations which the board will submit to the school superintendent.

Of particular irritation to black members in the audience was point No. 2 of the guidelines which stated that there should be no forced busing at the elementary school level for the purpose of achieving integration.

"If there's no busing on the elementary school level then there's no desegregation," said Mrs. Joan Parker, adding that it was inconceivable to think that certain parents would volunteer their children for such a plan.

Dr. Samuel Bank, who served as desegregation task force vice-chairman, said the eight proposals were an "absurdity" and a "colossal mistake" which would put the Baltimore public school system "in a state of defiance with the law."

Dr. Roland N. Patterson (school superintendent) did not comment on the proposals themselves, although he did say his staff would "carry out the policies" which the board recommends.

The Board of School Commissioners will vote on the desegregation proposals at their next meeting, (Tuesday, May 28 at 7 p.m.), at Coldstream Elementary School.

2 foster parents cited as best

Mrs. Doris Dixon, 3606 Cottage Ave., and Mrs. Eva Brooks, 4325 Washington Blvd., have been cited as recipients of the Judith Ann Hochreiter Memorial Award as best foster parents.

Mayor Schaefer presented the awards April 9 in a ceremony held at Constellation Pier as part of Maryland Action For Foster Children Week.

With her husband, Albert, Mrs. Brooks has been a foster parent for 15 years, during which time she has cared for 28 foster children.

Mrs. Dixon, a widow for 25 years has been a foster parent for 15 years and has cared for 27 children.

Mrs. Dixon reared her two children, Mrs. Robert Brown, 26, and Mrs. Cleo (Velma) Brooks, all by herself.

Mrs. Dixon is an active member of St. Ambrose Roman Catholic Church and participates in Park Heights community neighborhood activities.

Mrs. Brooks, formerly of Baltimore, has moved to Forge, Pa., and by special arrangement took with her her six foster children.

Mrs. Brooks and her husband have four children, all grown up. Mr. Brooks now shares a catering business in partner ship with his son and he is a retired employee of the Baltimore County Board of Education.

REAL MOTHERS—Honored for their compassion and love as foster parents are from left Mrs. Doris Dixon and Mrs. Eva Brooks.

Shore couple refuses extradition

The white couple charged with the kidnap-murder of U. of-Md. Eastern Shore art professor Jimmie Mosley has refused extradition according to Baltimore FBI Director Thomas Farrow...

David Anthony Wentworth, 36, and his wife, Mrs. Louise Ann Wentworth, 24, were apprehended without incident May 5, in a pre-dawn raid at a motel near Mountain Home, Idaho.

The pair is refusing to return to Maryland to face charges of murder, kidnap and robbery. No date has been set for a removal hearing which will be held later in Boise, Idaho.

The Wentworths are being held in custody in the County Jail in Boise, Idaho, on a federal warrant for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

* * *

The Wentworths had eluded a 50-state police search since they fled the Eastern Shore early April 4, following the gangland-style execution of the acclaimed professor.

Maryland State Police reports show Mr. Mosely, 47, was shot in the back and head eight times with a .357 Magnum handgun and a .22 caliber revolver stolen from his trailer home.

His bullet riddled body was found face down in a ditch beside a lonely Somerset County road the morning of April 4.

Bus station murder trial postponed

The trial of Miss Mary Washington Brown, 16, charged with murder, has been postponed until June 19.

Miss Brown, 4800 block Snader Ave. was scheduled to go on trial Thursday before Judge Robert Karwacki. She is accused of the Jan. 19 knife murder of Miss Charlottee Lessem, 68, Fayetteville N.C., in the Baltimore Greyhound Bus Station.

According to the prosecutor Steve Tamburello, the trial has been postponed because one of the state's witnesses, Det. Tom Egger, is in the hospital.

Police reports claim when Miss Lessem went to the second floor restroom at the Greyhound Bus Sta-

Youth gets 30 years for killing infant

A Clifton Rd. teenager has been sentenced to 30-years in prison for murdering his girlfriend's 11-month-old baby last October.

Criminal Court Judge James A. Perrott ruled Tuesday that Michael D. Wright, 18, be examined at the Patuxent Institution. According to the prosecutor Mark Kolman, Wright pleaded guilty to second degree murder of the infant, Andre R. Burnett, on Oct. 2, 1973.

The court was told Wright was unable to tolerate the baby's crying and decided to bash his head against a wall.

It was testified that Wright told his girlfriend he was going to the store and then disappeared.

Art Museum's 60th birthday

To celebrate its 60th birthday, The Baltimore Museum of Art will hold a gala party on Sunday, May 19 from 1 to 5 p.m. Exciting events and activities, both inside and out of the Museum, will be offered for the entire family. All activities are open to the public without charge.

Highlights include a program of African music presented in the auditorium by Assistant Conductor of The Baltimore Symphony Orchest a, Darrold Hunt, a dance program performed by The Maryland Dance Theatre, including a number especially choreographed for the Museum's 60th birthday; a jazz band under the direction of Mike Campbell of The Peabody Conservatory of Music; and a croquet tournament open to all.

Waxter Center dedication

Mrs. Jacqueline T. Sunderland, chairperson of the Mayor's Committee for the Dedication of the Waxter Center and Mrs. Isaac Hamburger, dedication coordinator, have announced more than 1,000 people are expected to attend the ceremonies on Sunday, May 12 at 4 p.m. at the center at 861 Park Ave.

The new, municipal complex for the elderly is named in honor of the late Thomas J. S. Waxter, the first chairman of the Baltimore City Commission on Aging.

The facility is the first of its kind in the nation having been funded by a $3.8 million dollar bond issue approved by city voters in 1967.

The ceremonies include a ribbon cutting by Mayor Schaefer, his mother, Mrs. Tailu Schaefer; Mrs. Thomas J. S. Waxter Sr.; her grandson, Thomas J. S. Waxter III and Miss Esther Lazarus, chairman of the Waxter Center Planning Committee.

An address by Mayor Schaefer will be followed by Mrs. Sunderland's welcoming and introduction of honored guests.

Jack Ossofsky, executive director of the National Council on Aging in Washington, D.C., is slated to deliver the keynote address.

Clifton S. Murray, chairman of Baltimore City Commission on Aging and Retirement Education and Dr. Delores Hunt, vice president of the Metropolitan Senior Citizens Center (the Waxter's pilot project) will introduce the main speakers.

A showcase display by Meals on Wheels is scheduled to take place in the dining area of the center immediately following the ceremonies.

The dedication opens a week of special events at the center. On Monday, May 13 at 2:15 p.m. Mayor Schaefer will present awards for the Senior Citizens Art Show.

The exhibit is presently on display throughout the center. It is being sponsored by the Bureau of Recreation in conjunction with Maryland National Bank.

A Salute to Volunteers is to be featured on Tuesday, May 14. Special exhibits by the Junior League of Baltimore, Inc., the United Fund of Central Maryland and the Volunteer Action Center will be on display. At 1 p.m. the Retired Senior Volunteers Program (RSVP) will give a slide show.

A Festival of the Arts is slated for Wednesday, May 15. At 11:00 a.m. the Walters Art Gallery will give a slide show. At 1:00 p.m. there will be a concert sponsored by the Peabody Institute. This will be followed by a slide show by Center Stage. Ongoing sketching exhibitions by students of the Maryland Institute.

A Waxter Center Showcase is the feature for Thursday, May 16. From 10:00 until 2:00 tours of the building will be available to the public. Special displays of creative skills including a 1:00 p.m. ballroom dancing performance by the center dance group will be on focus.

From 1:00 to 3:00 p.m. a pinochle tournament will take place as well as a swimming pool demonstration.

Nab 2 teens in Mitchell shooting

Two teenagers have been arrested and charged with robbery and assault by shooting Clarence M. Mitchell Jr., father of State Senator Clarence M. Mitchell III.

Mr. Mitchell, chief of the Washington NAACP Bureau and veteran civil rights leader, suffered a bullet wound of the right hand when he successfully warded off attackers in front of his home May 2.

In custody are Robert H. DuBoise, 19, 500 block W. Preston St. and a juvenile, age 17, both apprehended at their homes Wednesday by Robbery Squad detectives.

Sunday is Lillie Jackson day

Mayor William Donald Schaefer will visit Dr. Lillie M. Jackson on Sunday, at her home 1321 Eutaw Pl. Sunday has been proclaimed Dr. Lillie M. Jackson Day. Individuals, groups, organizations, ministers, churches and persons who know Dr. Jackson and appreciate her 60-years of Community Service will honor her on Mother's Day in their own way. She has been the "Mother of Freedom" to thousands of citizens who enjoy new opportunities.

Miss Josephine Young, Secretary of the Freedom House Board of Directors and Chairman of the Freedom House Planning Committee for Dr. Lillie M. Jackson Day, reveals that Governor Marvin Mandel has issued a Distinguished Citizen Award to be presented also on Sunday to Dr. Jackson.

Dr. Jackson has been confined to her home since last May at which time she had a stroke. Although her physical activity has been curbed she remains her alert self as she tells us, "We are Americans, All, and as Americans we seek our full citizenship rights."

Dr. Jackson has been a brave, courageous, fearless freedom fighter throughout the years for any individual or need of any people without race color or creed being the yardstick. Just because people are people and because there was a need, Dr. Jackson acted right then.

Many advancements in our Society here in our neighborhoods, City, State, and throughout the U.S. are credited to Dr. Jackson's foresightedness and vision.

In addition, she has been an outstanding wife, mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, teacher, churchwoman, pioneer and a great lady. In 1967 she was the AFRO Mother of the Year.

All citizens are invited to join in honoring Dr. Jackson. Cards, flowers, tributes, citations Whatever you choose fitting, will serve to inspire Dr. Jackson on her first day in the city of Baltimore.

Senior designer, Odessa Allen was awarded the 'Senior of the Year Award' at the Friday night Maryland Institute Fashion showing at the Mt. Royal Station. She is shown helping, Kimberly Bray of the Pinnie Ross Charm Studio, Columbia, Md. before she went on stage to display her creation.

MARYLAND INSTITUTE DESIGNERS

Co-eds show spring things

By Michele L. McRae
AFRO Staff Writer

"I started when I was only six-years-old, making doll clothes. When I was in high school I found I really was interested in fashion and designing."

Miss Odessa Allen, senior fashion and design major at the Maryland Institute in Baltimore had this to say when asked how she became interested in fashion at the Institute's annual showing.

She continued, "I enjoy creating for children most and have found that my family is most critical of my work. They have seen some of my creations, criticized them so severely that I just destroy the idea."

Miss Allen, who someday hopes to open up her own boutique, was the recipient this year of the 'Senior of the Year Award' for her outstanding designing and creations throughout the year.

Another fashion and design student, Elvin Edmonds, a junior, once designed clothing for the men's store, Othello's, once located on Paca St.

Edmonds says, "I've been designing since I was a kid. I tried to get into window displaying in several downtown stores but they told me I would have to secure at least two years of college training. So I went to Maryland Institute and since then have been awarded the 'Junior Designer Award.'

Edmonds enjoys creating designs for the 'woman in mind'. For ideas he prefers to see a person face to face to decide what type clothing is best suitable for a person's shape, size, personality and occupation.

After a year of concentration, trial and error, the fashion and design students of the Maryland Institute put on a showing of their creations.

Some of the other designers displaying their works at the Friday night showing at the Mt. Royal Station were: Sally McCann, Romona Ridgely, Constance Hill, Monica White, Gary Wares, G. T. Little, Hillary Figinski, Deborah Kelling, Roxcy Gaither, Ann Anderson, Laurel Schnitzer, Stephen Vardas, Toni Zito, and Susan Fox.

Other awards went to Toni Zito, 'Outstanding Sophomore Award'; Hillary Figinski, 'Fashion Faculty Merit Award'.

Participating models at the annual showing were: Mary Bansky, Brenda Betkey, Dorothy Johnson, Paulette Roecker, Trina Taylor, all of Patricia Stevens Modeling School.

And, Delia Alston, Verna Brooigen, Carmelita Coombs, Pat Lynch, Florella Mitchell, Michele Paradise, Eric Von Adams, Monet Scales, Eric Alsup, and Travis Winkey, all of the Travis Winkey Modeling Studios.

Other models include: Carter Bryant, Elvin Edmonds, Cee Cee Stokes, Rosalind Ford, Deborah Johnson, Chandra Lewis, Karen Carter, Vikki Costello, Laura Philippart, Carroll Kelley, Dale Dulaney, Mary Beth Armbuster, Leslie Allen, Tracey Holley, Monica Fleary.

And, little Kimberly Bray, Tammy Rice, of the Pinnie Ross Models; Nancy Roecker, Chris Miller, Ilene Watson, Jody Segal and Roxcy Gaither.

Model, Karen Carter wears a wrapped one-shoulder dinner dress, designed and created by senior designer, Ramona Ridgely. Here Miss Ridgely is shown, sitting making final touches for the showing of the garment at the Friday night Maryland Institute Fashion showing.

New trends in hair care; five-part series begins soon

By Marie P. Cooke
AFRO Women's Editor

Are you still washing your hair every other week and packing grease on it in between shampoos? Then it's time you got your head together.

The dynamic Francis Johnson, who is now manager of one of the Glemby Co. chains located in the Hochschild Kohn beauty salon in Columbia, Md., will explain the new trends in hair care to AFRO readers in a five-part series beginning soon.

Included in the articles will be pointers on how and when to shampoo, conditioning, straightening, and relaxing and the latest styles for the coming seasons...

If you're wearing a natural (Afro), wear it proudly and beautifully, says Mr. Johnson. The second in the series will deal only with naturals and their upkeep.

In Part Five, Mr. Johnson will talk about the growing opportunities for black hair stylists, the education needed for managerial positions, the job market and salaries.

Mr. Johnson brings to the AFRO some 14 years of experience in his field.

Upon graduation from Essex County High School in 1960, he immediately enrolled at the Apex Beauty School where he trained under the able hands of Mrs. Ethel Paige. He continued his studies at the Baltimore Studio for Hair Designers and learned techniques for treating all types of hair. During that time, Mr. Johnson travelled from coast to coast as a beauty consultant for Apex Cosmet-

AFRO staff photographer, Benjamin M. Phillips, snapped this photo of hair stylist-manager Francis Johnson in the Columbia (Md.) Mall where he works in the Hochschild Kohn salon. A five-part series on new trends in hair care will soon be featured in this section. Mr. Johnson admitted, after this photo was taken, that he isn't too fond of dogs, but does enjoy hunting in his spare time.

Speaking of today's women...

Assistant U.S. Attorney for the State of Md., Virginia S. Draper gave the keynote address at the annual Founders' Day luncheon of the Baltimore Lawyers' Wives on Saturday.

The Niagara Falls, N.Y. native told her listeners:

"One of the consequences of our constant pre-occupation with corruption has been a harmful regression from a public attitude of mere toleration to a more unhealthy disposition of indifference. This is characterized by the pervasive sentiment that 'they all do it'.

"When I hear someone endorse that slogan, my unspoken reaction is that this individual himself is not living up to a very high standard of personal conduct."

The Lawyers' Wives, headed by Dorothy (Mrs. Solomon) Reddick, marked its 23rd year at the Saturday affair, where guests filled the Governors Club to its capacity.

Mrs. Draper held the attention of her audience as she spoke on systematic corruption.

"In terms of criminal economics, the burglar and the robber are probably the menace. We can insure ourselves against the theft of our cars, but how can we insure the integrity of our banking officials and our business leaders, and what insurance will redeem our society if we continue to systematically corrupt the people who lead us in government?

"But perhaps the dearest price of all is the one we pay with the young people of our country.

"As they grow and mature, they discover that the moral code they have been taught is itself dishonored by those who taught it to them; they also find that the law is violated by those who make and administer it."

The speaker carried out the theme, "Young America Lead the Way" set by the Lawyers' Wives.

Attorney Draper, wife of Dr. Robert Draper, is a 1967 graduate of Howard University, Washington, D.C. and received her law degree from the same in 1970. She holds membership in several bar associations and is an active civil rights worker. In addition, she works with youth groups. She was appointed to her current position last year.

Mrs. Martha Allen and her husband, State's Attorney Milton B. Allen were the recipients of a plaque and gift from the Lawyers' Wives. For some four years Mrs. Allen served as president of the group.

Accolades went to Mr. Allen for "keeping his promise to the community," said Judge Benjamin Foreman who made the presentation. In his remarks, Mr. Allen said he would "keep on keeping on."

Chairwoman Helena Hairston (Mrs. Alonzo P.) and her committee were responsible for the day's activities.

Included were: Lorraine Hayes (Mrs. U. Theodore); Zodie Roger (Mrs. A. Briscoe); Grace Walker, (Mrs. William); Clarice Parrish (Mrs. George).

Morgan State bids farewell to longtime instructors

By Benjamin M. Philips
AFRO Staff Photographer

Wednesday evening found the Morgan State College family bidding farewell to 18 of its long-time faculty members.

The setting for the black tie affair was Blue Crest North where some 300 well-wishers turned out for the testimonial dinner.

During the 7 p.m. social hour, this writer talked to four of the honorees about retirement. Here is what they had to say:

DR. G. JAMES FLEMING: "In a sense, all retirement means is less work. There is still plenty to do. The college has asked me to teach one course on the graduate level and, of course, I still write a column for the AFRO."

DR. DONALD BRANDON: "One cannot work forever. I just feel about ordinary. I'll be occupied around home catching up on my reading. I'll also be doing some travelling."

DR. BENJAMIN A. QUARLES: "I feel that I'm not retiring fully, but just channeling energies in a different direction. I'll be doing more work in the field and less teaching."

THEODORE STILL: "I have mixed emotions. I have a lot to do with my hobbies."

* * *

Other honorees were Mrs. Martha Johnson, Lorenzo P. Perry, Mrs. Patricia Taylor, Dr. Maxwell Brooks, Harold B. Chinn, Morris Eisen, Dr. Nick Aaron Ford, Ms. Ola M. Ford, Benjamin Gardner, Rev. Thomas Hughes, Dr. Frederick Jackson, Arthur Lamb, Reuben Rosenberg, and Mrs. Mary Spellman.

Honorable mention citations went to military instructors who included: Capt. David Branch, Capt. Thomas Fairfull, Cpt. Joseph Gelthorpe, SGM Ellsworth Patterson, and SSG Elton L. Perkins.
