Cherry Hill power struggle may result in court battle

By Bill Rhoden

It may take a court battle to do it, but Mrs. Rudell Martin, president of the Cherry Hill Co-ordinating Council, says she is determined to make sure that her newly elected administration is recognized as the only administration.

During a stormy meeting in Cherry Hill May 18, the 35-year-old mother of two was elected to succeed Shephard Burge as president of the council.

Prior to the election, Burge had announced that if his resignation would calm things down he would relinquish the presidency.

Moments later Burge, along with members of his executive body, walked out of the meeting. An election was held soon thereafter and Mrs. Martin emerged the winner.

* * *

But Burge has refused to recognize the new administration and has failed to turn over documents and financial records.

"We have asked attorney William Murphy, Jr. to help us get the matter straightened out," said Mrs. Martin, "Because he once lived in this community and he knows the background of the council."

Mrs. Martin, who also directs the Cherry Hill Welfare Rights Organization, said her staff sent registered letters to members of the old administration requesting that they turn over all papers relevant to the council.

Burge refused his letter, according to Mrs. Martin.

"People are asking for receipts to show that their membership money war received, but I can't give them what I don't have."

There is also a possibility that the State Department will audit the council's books, especially in the area of vouchers and mileage records connected with the mini-bus operation in Cherry Hill.

* * *

During a June 10 meeting, the Council raised $80 toward court costs and made known its threat to file suit.

A board of directors was set up during that same meeting, as was a housing committee. Both groups are designed to act as liaisons between community and the Council.

The new officers of the Cherry Hill Co-ordinating Council are: Mrs. Rudell Martin, president; Carl Campbell, 1st vice president; Mike Brown, 2nd vice president; Sophia Ross, recording secretary; Mrs. Lorraine Johnson, treasurer; Mrs. Ruth Wilson, executive secretary.
