Gwynns Falls students shine in annual oratorical contest

"This is our protest to those who believe that inner city black children are only capable of learning some black special ghetto language.

"We are Americans and know full well that our students must compete with other Americans and must be able to handle the American language."

The speaker was Isaiah E. White, principal of Gwynns Falls Junior High No. 81. The protest to which he referred was the fourth annual oratorical contest held in the school auditorium on Hilton St. earlier this month.

Named for the principal, the contest featured presentations by some 20 seventh, eighth and ninth graders. Their electrifying performance before an auditorium filled with fellow students, parents and community workers brought frequent applause and cheers.

First place winner was Daniel Elliott, 14, a ninth grader. His selection was from 'The Battle' by Principal White. Excerpts:

"The enemies ship came into view,
Manned by her eager, slant-eye crew.
Then soon we heard the challenged shot,
As she hit our vital spot.
"So there in morning's early light,
Two men at wars were poised to fight.
And as we closed in for the prey,
We heard our chaplain start to pray."

Second place went to Cynthia Watkins, 15, also a ninth grader, who did an original 'King Heroin Plus,' inspired by, "Themes from James Brown." Excerpts:

"Start me off with refers, popping pills, and sniffing glue.
Try me out and be gone.
Who am I? I am heroin.
"I came to the country without a passport,
And every since then, I've been hunted and sought.
Everyone is looking me up to get a fix, to soothe their needs, and get their kicks.
My little white brains are nothing but waste,
Soft and deadly and bitter to taste. . . ."

Third place honors went to Warren Hill, 16, also a ninth grader. His selection was his original poem, 'Growing Up.' Excerpts:

"Growing up today isn't as easy as it was years ago,
because today everyone wants to act grown.
Acting grown in the wrong way only makes you hate your love ones.
It puts the innocent in jail,
And it hurts the not guilty. . . ."

Contest judges were, Mrs. Ruth Barksdale, Coppin State speech instructor; Mrs. Barbara Hill, regional specialist; Charles Allen, English specialist; the Rev. Marion C. Bascom, pastor of Douglas Memorial Church, and Mrs. Elizabeth Fletcher, a parent.

Other contestants and their selections were—Shari Gulliver, 'If' by Kipling; Shawn Alexander, an original, 'Three Dreams for Mankind;' Robin Williams, an original 'Dear Abby Dialogue;' Crystal James, 'We, the People,' by Allah; Reginald Howell, 'Simon the Cyrenian,' by Countee Cullen;

Also, Cheryl Jones, 'The Resurrection,' by Jonathan Brooks; Chereise Butcher, 'You Can See Me In The Dark,' by Delta Chandler; Patricia Lee, 'Let Americans Be Americans Again,'' by Langston Hughes; Gwendolyn Dudley, 'For My People,' by Margaret Walker; Sherry Heard, an original poem, 'Don't condemn;' Melody Sulivan, an origin 1, 'The Indian;' Pamela Sykes; 'We Have Been Believers,' by Margaret Walker;

Also, Edward Jones, 'The Creation,' by James Weldon Johnson; Cheryl Grimes, 'Go Down Death,' by Paul Lawrence Dunbar; Kemma Gamble, 'I, Too, Sing America,' by Landstone Hughes; Jolene Graves, an original, 'A Massage to the Black Man,' and Barbara Jennings, an original, 'A Teenager Speaks Out.'

The Board of Directors of the United Fund of Central Maryland has announced the allocation of $321,000 for fiscal 1975 to 12 PUSH (Project for Urban Self-Help) agencies.

These allocations were made from the nation-record-setting $11.8 million contributed to the United Fund in 1973.

The largest grant, $52,000, went to the Citizens Planning and Housing Association. This was followed by an allocation of $42,775 to the Northwest Baltimore Corporation.

William L. In past years the PUSH group took its requests directly to the Fund Board.

Founder-publisher of LA paper dies

LOS ANGELES — Leon H. Washington Jr., one of the last of an era of founder-publishers of black newspapers, has died at the age of 67.

His death, at St. Luke's Hospital in Pasadena, came just a few days before the 34th meeting of the National Negro Publishers Association in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Reportedly the journalist had been ill for about a month.

During the 41 years since he founded the weekly Los Angeles Sentinel, acclaimed as the largest ethnic newspaper in the West, Washington had become known as a fighter for civil rights and had received several awards and citations.

He and his paper were credited as being instrumental in the fight to integrate the city fire department and school board.

He himself ran for a city council seat but was defeated in a runoff.

Washington published the slogan, "Don't Buy Where You Can't Work."

During the 30th anniversary year of the paper in May 1964, then Gov. Edmund G. Brown told testimonial dinner guests:

". . . Leon is one of the most distinguished leaders in the nation. He has been a crusader in behalf of decency and civic betterment in his own community in ways that have been of benefit to all."

AIRMAN JAMES M. JOHNSON, son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Johnson, Sr. of Baltimore, has been assigned to Sheppard AFB, Tex. after completing basic Air Force training in mission, organization, customs and human relations. He is a 1973 graduate of Northwestern High School.

NAVY SEAMAN RECRUIT GARY GARDNER, son of Mrs. Servila Gardner of Baltimore, has been graduated from recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill. He will now report to a formal school for speciality training or to a ship of shore station for on-the-job training.

Letters

On September 9, 1974 my fellow classmates and I met Mrs. Lorraine B. Hayes for the first time. She greeted us warmly and as days rolled by we became as one big family. She has been like a mother to all of us. Since that day up to the present time she has done so many wonderful things for us. And she is so understanding she has been fair in every way.

There were times when we weren't so fair. But as a mother would discipline her children, she knew how to cope with that too.

She has taken us to some very interesting places, but the most interesting place to me, and I am sure to my classmates was the Juvenile Court, to sit and listen to the cases there. I really hate to leave Mrs. Hayes, but we must move on. And I would like to say to the fine principal, Mrs. Shirley A. Gerhardt, and all of my former teachers and staff and for everyone at Edgewood Elementary School from the bottom of my heart! Thank you.

Sorry fellows! Last week in my story on the first Jazz Festival by the Left Bank Jazz Society No. 534 at the Maryland House of Correction, I left out the names of some very important people . . . the musicians in the band.

On drums were Gaylord Wilson and Joe Baker; on guitars, Clarence Freeman and "Curly Head" Joe; on organ, Willie Roberson and on rhythm and lead guitar, Lloyd Snooky Cauthorne. Right on you fine musicians.
