structure," formerly restricted to Baltimore now enlarged to include the entire metropolitan area.

"But the problem is in Baltimore City. The unemployment is not in Baltimore County or any of the surrounding counties," he argued.

Baltimore cooperates in a consortium with Baltimore, Anne Arundel, Howard, Harford and Carroll counties.

The purpose of consolidation to form a metropolitan plan, he further explained, was according to a complicated government equation. Metropolitan programs are given a 10 per cent bonus in federal appropriations.

The theory being that if the city "single shot" it would receive less money, he said.

However, the government's appropriation formula is based on the unemployment rate within a given district, he rebutted.

Since the unemployment rates of the surrounding counties are much lower than that of Baltimore, the overall effect is that the metropolitan plan would receive funds based on an unemployment rate significantly lower than actually exists in Baltimore City, his argument went on.

"Baltimore's larger percentage unemployed would gain more money if it went alone," he protested.

"It's politically expedient for them to hook up together," he said citing the close-out of CEP as conclusive evidence.

CEP which "was run by blacks" and the "Mayor's major manpower delivery system" has been phased out and replaced by a massive "superstructure" where more "deals are made between the metropolitan areas and the city," he asserted.

Previously CEP employees were civil service personnel, now, Mr. Williams cautioned, these persons would be appointed by the Mayor without the benefits of civil service.

He further pointed out that in restaffing its manpower delivery systems, only two former CEP employees had been hired by the city.

For seven years, he noted, Baltimore CEP was the leading manpower organization in the country according to a goverment report.

"They're watering down the program. The people that should be getting help are just not getting it," he declared.

The incident at Model Cities Area F headquarters, 1515 Argyle Ave., by all accounts, involved about 15 youngsters who were told on Monday by staff personnel that no jobs were available for them.

The youngsters were told that the applications that they had completed in April were filled-in incorrectly, some discrepancy over work permits and social security cards.

Tim Conway, chairman of Council of Area F, attributed the delays to "bureaucratic hassles."

"Nobody knows what she's doing," he disclaimed in an obvious reference to Mrs. Pipes.

"She changes everything. You told me it was the Baltimore Summer Corps. I've been calling it NYC," he continued.

"I just don't thin'k they have enough jobs when I have kids here protesting because they can't get jobs, he said.

"If they wanted to they could open up jobs within the city," Mr. Conway protested.

members range in age from 15 to 82 years. Oldest member is Mrs. Lottie Reeves who recently celebrated her 82nd birthday. He said, "They enjoy practicing and everyone was excited as they prepared for the great occasion."

Father Offer added that practically all of the members of the choir are Catholic, but all do not belong to St. Francis. The director, Mr. Allen and the pianist Phil Stancil are non-Catholics.

Mrs. Alice Deshazo is the organist; Mrs. Madelyn Redden, vice president and Miss Jeanette sister of the president, trains the dancers.

Many members of the choir are related among them; Mrs. Pauline Hargroves; her brother, James Nicholas and her daughters, Miss Polly Hargroves, Mrs. Mae Cobb, Mrs. Roxie Baker, and Mrs. Blanche Anderson.

Mrs. Dorothy Mello, her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lee (Gertrude) Lewis. Miss Grace Mello and Mrs. Barbara Wright.

Also, Mrs. Doris Pinnick, Mrs. Mary Braxton and son, Ronald; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Turner (Justine), and daughter, Dannece; Valerie Hudgins and Kim Evans, cousins;

And Mrs. Dorothy Butler, her daughter, Miss Avis Butler and daughter and son-in-law, Mr and Mrs. Eugene, (Sonia), Owens.

The members include: Raymond Thompson, James King, David Brown, Walton Smith, Mrs. Teresa McDougald; Mrs. Doris Ralph; Mrs. Jacqueline Brown; Mrs. Helen Johnson, Mrs. Martha Burns, Mrs. Frances Chapman; Mrs. Brenda Harris, Mrs. Glynnis Harris.

Father Offer explained that in addition to the gospel music, the church also uses jazz spirituals, traditional Protestant music and traditional Catholic music. Sometime they have dancers, who dance along with the gospel music.

He added, "We are trying to find a medium, whether it be music, art, dance or drama to relate the message of God's love and the coming of Christ."

Other music for the ordination was provided by the Cathedral Choir and the Combined Folk Groups of St. Margaret, (Bel Air) and St. Mary Star of the Sea, (Baltimore).

Patterson files complaint against city auditor

School Superintendent Roland N. Patterson has filed a grievance against Daniel Paul, the city auditor for a report submitted by the latter last month which hinted that the school system was guilty of fiscal mismanagement.

According to Dr. Patterson, Paul's Special Audit which was released May 31, lent itself to a furherance of misconceptions "by its vague, confusing and hyperbolic language."

Dr. Patterson said that the audit was immediately constructed by the media to say that material supply funds have been used to pay administrative salaries "and that the Department of Education has hired unauthorized administrative personnel."

The 45-year-old school superintendent requested the Maryland State Board of Public Accountancy to rule that the controversial report was "not prepared in accordance with generally accepted auditing and accounting standards."

Although Paul had earlier admitted that his report was grossly misunderstood, Dr. Patterson said that a certified public accountant in Paul's position "should follow generally accepted auditing principles" and should also "prepare a report which is clear, unambiguous and not easily susceptible to misleading interpretations."

He added that Paul's audit was "written in a manner such that its principal impact has been to confuse and to compound the misconceptions which it could have and should have removed.

The audit, as reported in the media, showed that the school system had underspent over $3 million in the areas of materials, supplies and building maintenance.

The report indicated, however, that most of the underspending was a result of transferred funds used to cover a deficit from a previous fiscal year.

conversation with either of the girls.

Following her arrest, she claimed, Det. Walter Egger Jr., promised to let her go if she told the truth. Det. Egger denied ever making that promise.

However, in Tuesday's testimony, Det. Egger did admit that he stacked the lineup and identification photo packages with persons and photos of older, and larger women with different hairstyles.

He also testified he jotted down only "bits and pieces" of her confession because she talked so fast. Further, he admitted to showing photos to the security guards just two days prior to the Feb. 26 lineup.

futed, "Catholics have sold candles for thousands of years," the motion declares such testimony had no bearing on the case.

Before Judge Perzoti imposed sentence, he asked the defendant, "Father Franklin, do you have anything to say?"

Standing beside his attorneys with his hands on the table, Father Franklin simply nodded his head no.

Borders installed as Baltimore's new Archbishop

By Roman Hankewycz

Trumpets blared, choirs sang, and the entire Catholic Cathedral of Mary Our Queen was filled to capacity as clergy, prominent citizens, and laymen gathered for the installation ceremonies of Baltimore's new Archbishop William Donald Borders.

The Wednesday seremony lasted from, 4-6 p.m., more than 2500 people sat in awe while red and white clad clergy performed one of the most spectacular masses in Baltimore since his Emminance Laurence Cardinal Shehan was crowned.

The event was attended by six Cardinals his Eminence Lawrence Cardinal Shehan, Terence Cardinal Cooke, of New York John Cardinal Dearden of Detroit, John Cardinal Krol of Philadelphia, Humberts Cardinal Medeiros of Boston, and Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle of Washington, D.C., and other Archbisops and clergy too numerous to mention.

This is not to mention dignitaries such as Governor Marvin Mandel, Rabbi A. Shusterman, and the Rev. and Mrs. Melvin C. Swann Rev. Swann being the official representative of the Interdenominational Ministers Alliance.

There was a moderate involvement by blacks, as two black deacons, brother James Avante of St. Martins and Deacon Americus Roy of St. Ambrose, participated in the mass.

Also, the Choir of St. Francis Xavier sang the Gospell, the first time ever for a black choir in Baltimore, dressed in red, black and green of Black America.

Representatives of the 145-year-old Oblate Sisters of Providence, oldest order of black nuns in the U.S. were present.

Led by Mother Mary of Good Counsel, they were Sisters Mary Alice, Mary Reginald, Mary Celestina, Mary Paul, Mary Brenda, Mary Marguerita, Mary Zoila, Mary Virginie, Mary Veronica, Mary Juanita and Mary Charlotte, who was a member of the steering committee for the installation.

"Mission through Unity and Diversity" was the theme of the Archbishop's lecture, and diversity certainly was at hand during the ceremonies not only in the added involvement of blacks unlike years before, but that the crowning ceremonies were held during the mass itself, with a folk group singing througnout.

Archbishop Borders was installed by the Most Rev. Jean Jadot, Pope Paul VI's delegate in Washington.

During his lecture, Archbishop Borders noted Cardinal Shehan's great leadership throughout the years, and then tended to stay to what the clergy and people should do to help build up the Church, and how we must be united.

"Whether we experience a deep pride of our Black race or an uncertainty of a recent immigrant people, we are one in Christ," said Baltimore's new Arch bishop.

He added: "the unity that was the objective of Christ's prayer was not a uniformity based on a culture, a structure, or a law, but a unity rooted in faith in Christ and his teaching and healing, springing from His redemptive love."

Archbishop Borders said leading up to his main theme "If the Church of Baltimore is to continue its leadership in mission, this bond of unity must be strengthened." calling for a unity between blacks and whites before an audience where blacks were sparse.

The Archbishop also called for a deeper love of Christ in a world were many things are phony or put on "if the love of Christ is not shared realistically and continually, Christ and his love will not be recognized as real."

The 60 year old Archbishop, who has been Bishop of Orlando, Fla., since 1968, replaces his Emminence Lawrence Cardinal Shehan, who has been Archbishop of Baltimore for 13 years, until his forced retirement under the new council rule.

In the following months after his installation, it is expected that Archbishop Borders will concelebrate mass at parishes throughout the regions of the Archdiocese.
