Del. Boswell critical of voter purge

Delegate Hildagardeis Boswell, a declared candidate for the Maryland Senate, was openly critical of a "voter purge" which she claims wrote off more than 72,000 persons, mostly, blacks, from voter rolls.

In a recent media statement, the 38th District Democrat complained that "about 22 per cent of the city-wide population has been dropped from the voter rolls."

Concerned citizens of the district, she said, have gotten off their apathy and mobilized city resources" to conduct a massive voter registration drive.

The Salvation Army has lent the group one of its Kettle Booths to be used as a Voter Registration Station, she went on.

The station is located on the corner of Dolphin St. and Druid Hill Ave. Its hours or operation are 9:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Monday-Sunday.

• • •

Del Boswell stated that a special vote of thanks go to five young men from the community who are maintaining the station. They are: William Johnson, Kermit Carter, David Leighton, William Avery and Melvin Wright.

"If you live in the 38th District these young men want to see you," the statement concludes.

Blood tests for marriage offered

Dr. David Glasser, director of the City Health Department's Bureau of Communicable Diseases, has announced that Baltimore City residents intending to marry in states requiring premarital blood tests for syphilis may obtain proper certification easily.

Blood tests can be obtained from the family physician or by attending any of three City Hall Department clinics that specialize in drawing blood for the serological test for syphilis.

The clinics are held in the Western Health District Building, 1 W. Lombard St., 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.; Northeastern Williams Druid Hill District Building, 1 W. North Ave. Tues. 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.; and the Eastern Health District Building, 620 N. Caroline St. Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

In the event there is an urgency in obtaining certification, the individual may have his blood drawn and hand carry it to the state laboratory, 16. E. 23rd St., where testing will be done promptly and a certificate issued.

YCC program to get jobs for youth

The Youth Conservation Corps has begun as a three year pilot program to provide summer employment for young people.

Corps tasks include clean-up of recreation areas, clearing trails, improving camp sites, tree planting and other environmental quality enhancement projects.

The $10 million budgeted for YCC this year, although almost three times greater than last year's funds, still falls far short of the $60 million authorized by Congress in 1972 when the original Youth Conservation Corps Act of 1970 was amended to expand the initial pilot program.

Nixon's administration did not budget enough money this year to expand the corps to operate this summer with approximately 5,500 youth of both sexes, ages 15 through 18. The program is accepting only about one in 20 of the expected 100,000 applicants.

Friends talk about King murder suspect

DAYTON, Ohio — Several people who claim to have known the accused killer of Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr. are coming forward with information about Marcus Wayne Chenault.

Reportedly he was a member of a group of college educated black militants which believed blacks must deal with ministers "who tell lies" as severely as they deal with drug pushers.

And Bill Meyer, a reporter for the Greenville Daily Advocate who knew Chenault from college said the suspect had a "fragile" ego that was chronically in need of reassurance.

• • •

The Dayton Journal Herald, in a copyrighted story written by reporter Ariene Gordon, quoted a friend of Chenault, 23, as saying Chenault belonged to a group called "the Troop."

The friend, who did not wish to be identified, also said that Dr. King Sr. had been Chenault's original target, but replied "no comment" when asked "if he had ever discussed an assassination attempt with Chenault.

The newspaper quoted the friend as saying there are five members of "the Troop" living in Dayton and others in Cincinnati, Youngstown, and Columbus, Ohio. He said all were black and all had college backgrounds.

• • •

Reporter Meyer said he knew Chenault when both were first-year students in 1969 at University College at Ohio State University in Columbus.

"Marcus was a memorable person," Meyer said. "He's one of the few people living in Steeb Hall that I have definite memories of. Perhaps it was because he was so different."

Meyer said Chenault was not a personal friend and doubted that the two had ever spoken.

"But he stands vividly in my mind," said Meyer, who described Chenault as [illegible] feet, with a high pitched voice.

• • •

"Marcus was given to dramatic posturing" Meyer said, adding that he became somewhat a local fixture at Steeb Hall.

"All the students in Steeb Hall, black and white, knew Marcus, if not by name, at least by face or voice or reputation," Meyer said. "Unfortunately, what I deemed his attempt to elevate himself also led to putdowns and practical jokes from other students.

"I am sure his ego must have been a fragile thing. He seemed to go to great lengths to protect it.

"I haven't seen Marcus for five years, but when I heard he was the accused slayer of Mrs. King, I noted sadly that that was not out of character with the young man I knew five years ago, who, from what I saw, needed so desperately to reassure himself of his own importance."

• • •

In the interview in the Journal Herald, the friend quoted in the interview said the King family "is one of the richest families in Atlanta.

"Instead of helping out the poor people of the South, they just sit back and get rich keeping all the money for themselves," he said.

"We must rid the black community of all ministers who are telling lies," he said. "The one way we must rid the community of the pimps and drug pushers.

"When I was younger I used to go to church every Sunday, used to see my mother taking her last dime and giving it to the church. But I couldn't understand what the church was doing with the money because people in the community were still poor."

Chenault's friend repeatedly referred to black ministers as "political pimps" and to biblical passages dealing with warnings of false prophets and punishment meted out to them.

Fireworks are against the law

The Annotated Code of Maryland, Article 38A, Section 16 states that it is [illegible] for any person to discharge fireworks without a permit and unlawful for any person to sell firearms without a permit.

Any person found possessing or discharging firearms shall be fined not more than $250; any person found selling firearms shall be fined not more than $1,000.

List narrows field in court namings

A list of recommendations from the Judicial Selections Commission to Governor Mandel has significantly narrowed the field of contenders for two of three existing vacancies on the District Court for Baltimore.

Before its July 1 statement, there had been wide speculation regarding who the commission would recommend.

Black partisans citing the under representation of blacks on the court — four black judges of 22 — have insisted that Governor Mandel name further black judges to the Bench.

The commission nominated seven persons including one black attorney. They are:

James L. Bundy, a black attorney and assistant in the Attorney General's Office.

Judge C. Warren Colgan, Chief Judge of the Orphan's Court.

George J. Helinski, an attorney and one time deputy state's attorney.

Joseph A. Matera, a legal aide atorney.

Alan M. Resnick, member of the House of Delegates from Baltimore.

Gilbert Rosenthal, an attorney.

James J. Welsh, an attorney with the state's attorney's office.

Mr. Bundy was recommended by the Maryland State Bar and the Monumental City Bar Associations.

Two of the vacancies on the bench result from the elevation of Benjamin Brown to the post of City Solicitor and the recent death of Paul A. Mason, Jr.

The third vacancy was created by the naming of former Administrative Judge John R. Hargrove to the Supreme Bench for Baltimore.

The commission is commencing its process to select suitable candidates for this position.

At the induction ceremonies, Judge Hargrove was escorted to the bench by the Honorable William H. Murphy Sr. and the Honorable Solomon Baylor. He was seated to the left of Chief Judge DuLaney Foster.
