Milton Allen to address League confab

MILTON ALLEN

Baltimore State's Attorney Milton Allen is among a number of speakers at the 66th Annual Conference of the Urban League July 31 in San Francisco.

This year's theme: Full Employment as a National Goal, is chosen because the question of unemployment is of concern to blacks and other minorities.

The keynote speaker is Vernon E. Jordan Jr., and the Rev. Jesse Jackson of Operation PUSH will address the annual banquet as the conference closes on Wednesday night.

Other speakers will include Vice President Gerald Ford, I. W Abeln president of Steelworkers Union; Professor Charles V. Hamilton, Columbia University; John Powell, chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and many others from the areas of education, business, civil rights, industry and government.

Mondawmin gets new tire store

After twenty years of service with General Tire and Rubber Company, Mr. James H. Wilson, has gone into business for himself.

Mr. Wilson said several weeks ago, he was contacted by one of the larger tire dealers in Baltimore and was offered the opportunity to become the first black to have Tire Franchise in the state.

The new company, Mondawmin Tire Sales, will carry Schenuit Michelin, Firestone, Goodyear and other major brands plus a complete line of wide white wall tires to fit all size cars.

By obtaining the old Sears Service Center in Mondawmin, Mr. Wilson has formed a corporation to service cars, tires, batteries, etc. The Service Center aas 14 bays to assure customers of prompt service. His slogan i' Where you stop we start."

His shop manager is John Davis and his assistant, Woodrow Graham, formerly of General Tire Company.

Mr. Wilson lives with his wife, Helen M. Wilson, and three sons, Ronald, Kevin and Garland in the Ashburton area. He also has three daughters and one son married, James Jr., Shirley Jewett, Marie Henderson, and Priscilla Whithead.

Girl, 2 suffers burns

Debbie Thomas, 2, 2500 block Aisquith St., was severely burned on both feet when she accidentally walked into a fire at the Druid Hill Park on Independence Day, July 4.

Mrs. Stella Thomas, Debbie's mother told the AFRO, the fire had been left by a woman who barbecued there earlier in the day.

"We didn't know there was fire in there, we thought it was out," said Mrs. Thomas. They did not know the woman and cannot recognize her when she meets her, she added.

It is estimated that over 1,000 persons visited the park on July 4. The little girl was treated and later released from the Union memorial Hospital.

What? Sip Bacardi before you mix it?

Sure. It's surprisingly dry, not sweet. Light-bodied, not heavy. Delightfully smooth. And so good mixed, it's got to be good un-mixed, right? Try it.

DOUBLE TROUBLE — In UPI photo Gov. Mandel and Police Commissioner Pomerleau hold press conference on grave problems which arose from police officers walking off the job, the first such experience in any major U.S. city since 1918.

Can Mandel ignore black votes?

The governor's decision not to fill two recently created vacanices on the Court of Special Appeals until after the September primary can only be construed as blatant disregard for Maryland's black electorate, according to one unnamed state legislator.

He said, "The governor might be thinking that he doesn't need the black vote to win the primary."

"I thought the governor would have named Dave Mason before the primary to insure that he got the black vote," the lawmaker further declared.

The name of David T. Mason, state secretary of Employment and Social Services, has been one of those most frequently mentioned for one of the two seats.

As recently as two weeks ago, Mr. Mason made emphatic denials to AFRO questions that he had been approached by the governor for the post.

He was unavailable Thursday for comment on this the latest round of speculation.

* * *

Mr. Mandel laid the blame for the delay in the hands of Judge Robert C. Murphy, chief judge of the Court of Appeals, and Joseph Sherbow, head of the Appellate Judicial Selection Commission.

The governor disclosed that they informed him that the new judgeships need not be filled until the state's second highest tribunal reconvened for its fall term September 9, one day before the September 10 primary.

The number of judges on the special appeals court at the urging of the governor has been raised from 10 to 12 by an act of the last session of the General Assembly ostensibly to lighten the burden of the already overworked court.

* * *

In its last session, the court handled nearly 1,400 cases or more than 100 cases per judge, which is more than double the number recommended for appellate jurist by bar associations.

Still, skeptics view the move as an attempt by the governor to enlarge his already vast patronage powers.

Since city black political leaders are anxious to have Mr. Mason or another black attorney named to the court, Mr. Mandel's obvious hedging may, it is believed, have serious political consequences.

Elected officials lash Pomerleau

Several black elected officials, this week, lashed out at Police Commissioner Donald Pomerleau for firing 82 probationary policemen for participating in the recent police walkout.

Among them were State Senators Clarence M. Mitchell III, Robert Dalton, Clarence Blount and Delegates Hildegardeis Boswell, Lena K. Lee and Walter Dean.

SEN. MITCHELL

State Sen. Clarence M. Mitchell III called upon Gov. Mandel to fire Commissioner Pomerleau. In a statement to the AFRO, he said:

"In the years Pomerleau has served as police commissioner, he has demonstrated a total lack of sensitivity for the needs of the people in this community. His ineptitude has been consistently demonstrated by his poor administration of the department. His operation of the department consistently keeps Baltimore in the headlines across the nation as one of the most poorly administered police departments in the country.

POPE PAUL APPOINTS BALTIMORE JESUITE PRIEST

Fr. Marino becomes first bishop

By ART CARTER

"I hope this will be a source of encouragement to black Catholics as it is something they have been aspiring to for years . . ."

This was the immediate reaction of Father Eugene A. Marino, who this week was appointed one of the two auxiliary bishops for the Archdiocese of Washington. He is the first black bishop appointed to the high post.

Also appointed by Pope Paul VI was Monsignor Thomas W. Lyons, pastor of St. Thomas Apostle Church in Washington. Father Marino presently is vicar general of the Josephite Fathers, headquartered in Baltimore.

Both men will serve as auxiliary bishops to Archbishop William W. Baum, who made the announcement in a press conference at the Archdiocese Headquarters here Tuesday.

The elevation of Father Marino climaxes a four-year fight to have a black person as auxiliary bishop in the Washington diocese. Archbishop Baum, who has been without any assistants for nearly a year, declined to say that Father Marino was his "personal choice," reminding newsmen that the Pope makes the appointments.

However, in his formal statement, Archbishop Baum declared Father Marino's experience as a member of a Religious Society will bring unique insights into the needs of the universal church and of our own Archdiocese."

Monsignor Lyons declared, "I express the joy of all that Father Marino will be one of us in the Church of Washington. I look forward with pleasure to working closely with him under the leadership of Bishop Baum."

* * *

Continuing his remarks following the annoucement, Father Marino said, "I hope the larger effect will be helpful in bringing the need of blacks to the Church and helpful to Archbishop Baum in unifying the problems of the black and white Catholics."

He added that "this appointment is a recognition of the faith of the black Catholics of Washington. I urge them to work for the spread and the growth of this faith, so as to bring the entire Church of Washington the service of our witness."

The consecration of Father Marino will take place about Sept. 11, although the date has not been definitely set. Also left open is the church to which he will be assigned.

* * *

Early reports indicated that he would be assigned to St. Gabriel's Church, but Archbishop Baum said the assignment was still undecided.

Father Marino will be the third black bishop in the American Catholic family of more than 300 bishops and the youngest bishop in the United States. He is 40 years old.

Heads rolled as Mrs. Pines built manpower empire

By Fletcher Roberts

Once upon a time before the coming of the Mayor's Office of Manpower Resources, a Kenneth D. Hines headed the Public Employment Program, aptly nicknamed PEP.

When all of a sudden, Mrs. Marion W. Pines, CMR director, sprang open her manpower umbrella, records show, Mr. Hines had lost his head — figuratively speaking — and Mrs. Ruth Schwartz named his successor.

And Mrs. Schwartz, well, according to an informed source, she and Mrs. Pines are "dear, old friends."

Poor Mr. Hines, the AFRO has learned, has left town, jobless.

* * *

There are reports that his accusations of "empire building" leveled at Mrs. Pines placed Mr. Hines' name at the top of the manpower "blacklist."

A former PEP associate of Mr. Hines' informed the AFRO last he for months after his abrupt discharge "tried to stick it out in Baltimore, but he couldn't find a job doing what he was interested in."

Mr. Hines was fired Aug. 27, 1972 by Mrs. Pines because as a letter she wrote to him explains "I was not satisfied with your (his) execution of the administrative requirements of PEP."

In his defense, Mr. Hines reputedly claimed that she never made clear to him the exact nature of her dissatisfaction with his performance.

He blamed office interference and Mrs. Pines' interest in empire building for his demise.

Ultimately, the $2.8 million PEP program was taken over by OMR in 1972, and even newer problems cropped up.

A one-time PEP planner complained to the AFRO recently that he had been overlooked for a promotion and a young lady was brought in to fill the vacancy.

The source said that the lady brought in was Mrs. Marie Henderson the

Olympic hero awards trophies at local meet

By Dennis Schatzman

Jesse Owens, considered the greatest track star ever, thrilled over 500 spirited youngsters Thursday afternoon as he personally awarded trophies and certificates at the 10th Annual Track meet which bears his name.

The Jesse Owens Track Meet, sponsored by Atlantic Richfield and the Department of Parks and Recreations, was held at Walbrook Senior High School. Individual winners will be flown to the championship meet next month in San Francisco.

When the AFRO greeted Owens and Atlantic Richfield Community Programs Director, Eddie Bell at the Baltimore-Washington Airport Thursday morning, a tear came to this reporter's eyes as he shook hands with the hero of the 1936 Olympics.

Now a self employed public relations man in Detroit and Phoenix, Arizona, Owens sprints by plane across the country promoting "the winning attitude" to thousands of inner-city youths. In addition, he does extensive publicity work for Atlantic Richfield and Sears, Roebuck and Co.

* * *

Owens was a national celebrity well before he helped shatter Adolph Hitler's dreams of a superior Aryan race. Prior to winning four gold medals in Munich (1936), Owens set four world's records in one day.

That event occurred at the University of Michigan on May 25, 1935 when he broke the records in the long jump, 220-yard dash, 220-yard low hurdles and
