—Take body from grave

of the crime police theorize occurred during the night of Aug. 12.

Homicide Lt. Stephen Tabling told the AFRO, "It's a strange story. We can't explain it but that's how it was. Nothing was stolen from the grave."

Police state the coffin was left in the grave covered with soil. Looking for clues, police said they combed the whole cemetery and examined every available object for finger prints without results.

Deputy chief medical examiner Dr. Irvin Sopher who said an examination was performed to ascertain the identity of the woman stated:

"She was not assaulted in any way but she was naked. There were no injuries on the body. It's certainly a strange case."

The medical examiner said the "whole thing might be some sort of a prank. There are people like that. Some people get kicks out of costly jokes."

Relatives refused comment and the cemetery administrator could not be reached for comment but unidentified cemetery workers told the AFRO the grave might have been exhumed between closing time Monday evening and Tuesday morning.

Police said the burial ground is surrounded by a high wrought iron fence and has a night attendant.

The corpse was discovered at 9:20 a.m. by two workers who told police they found the victim resting against the statue in the St. Patrick section of the cemetery.

Police records reveal there were lacerations, about three inches each, on the right side of the woman's neck and stitches on the lower part of the body.

Armed with court order, police state they uncovered the soil filled grave and took the body to the city morgue to examine it.

After positive identifications by relatives, the funeral director and the medical examiner the body was reclothed and reburied.

great shock to the family. They believed that it was inevitable.

Funeral services for Mr. Yuspa were held Thursday.

Ms. Parker sadly remembered Mr. Yuspa's reply when she told him that he should move after several robberies he had had over the past few years.

He said to her, "They may kill me, but if that's the way God wants it, that's the way I'm going to have to go."
