MR. AND MRS. JAMES GREEN
at gala 25th wedding anniversary

-Sunshine at Greens' party

Arena Players' fame read an original poem which said in part: "These two people are close, just where God wanted them to be. We are awfully glad that God allowed you two to be born."

Mrs. Mamie Jones, who helped to arrange the celebration, described them as a "precious two," who found nothing is too much to do for family and friends and acquaintances, too . . . finer couple I have never met . . . I guess you could say they are members of the finer set because they are always the same, kind, friendly, gentle, Marjorie and James."

A. Paul Moss and his wife, Betty, also praised the couple. Mr. Moss read a tribute to Mrs. Green for her leadership role in the YMCA Camp Kings Landing Mothers' Club, which she has served as treasurer since its creation 10 years ago.

Mrs. Moss hailed Mrs. Green's friendliness and sense of humor and her kindness as evidenced by the newsy AFRO columns she writes about activities at Social Security, Woodlawn.

The Greens' only child, James Jr., called "Pepp," 23, brought sustained applause when he said, "Thank you all for helping my parents celebrate their 25th anniversary.

"During my life I have gone off sometimes on the wrong road, but always they have been there to help me. Thank you for 23 years of happiness you have given me."

There was a musical salute by Miss Deborah Jacobs, who sang "My Love." She and Artartus sang, "The Best Thing That Ever Happened To Me," a duet which brought sustained applause.

In their response, Mr. and Mrs. Green told the audience, "God Bless all of you for coming out today. And thank you for helping us make this a very happy and memorable occasion."

The invocation was by Father Maurice Blackwell of St. Bernadine's Church. The Rev. Thomas A. Taylor of New Bethlehem Baptist Church, gave the benediction.

The Rev. Arthur J. Payne, who married the couple was unable to attend.

The Greens are members of Concord Baptist Church. Members of the Official Board were present. The minister, the Rev. Matthew Silver, was out of town.

Winkey Studio graduates 30

Some 30 potential top fashion models received diplomas from the Travis Winkey Modeling Studio on Sunday as nearly 900 witnessed the presentation.

Each of the graduates displayed their talents during the various segments of the program as Carolyn Wainwright, a model, commentated.

The Sunday ceremony, the second annual graduation produced by that school, was highlighted by special presentations to community figures.

Awards were presented to the two best dressed men, Dr. Stanley Madison and Dr. James Priest; community service, Bruce Dunlap, National Bowling Co.; Man of the Year, Dr. Aaron Jenkins, and Fashion Editor of the Year, Marie P. Cooke.

Guest speaker for the commencement was Allen Quille, owner, Quille's parking lot chain. Joe Gordon, owner of Flair's Men's Wear, was cited for his dedicated service to the studio.

The three youngest members of the '74 class were Monet Scales, and Dackas Owens, both 4; and Eric Allsup, 8. In addition to receiving their diplomas, they were also awarded with trophies.

Other class members included Danyell Winkey, Martin Winkey, Andrea Robinson, Roland Douglass, Richardo Rennie, Lynette Gordon, Deborah Gladden, Joyce Gladden;

Sherrie Wongust, Gary Wilder, Gregory Johnson, David Young, Deborah Young, Pat Lynch, Andre Boyer, Marsha Johnson, Diane Tunstall, Vanessa Hall; Betty White, Allen Hunt, Vinica Baker;

Isis Cole, Tonya Clark, Donetta Young, Russell Davis, "Happy" Fioretta Mitchell and Mary Keets.

Ruth J's has new home

By Michele L. McRae
AFRO Staff Writer

Can you believe you can still purchase quality clothes at moderate prices? Well, I didn't believe it but you can at the Ruth J's Boutique: which is now located in the Woodmour Shopping Center, 7000 Liberty Rd.

The store was previously housed in the 3350 block of Arydale Ave. in West Baltimore where it began in 1967 with a fashion-model couple, Mr. and Mrs. Robert (Ruth) Croxton.

The idea, thought of by the late Mrs. Croxton who died in February 1972, was to establish a dress boutique that specialized quality clothes at a moderate price.

Since that time the business has grown with Mr. Croxton and his son, Randy, 24, a graduate of Morgan State College a business management major.

Young Mr. Croxton who manages the new boutique told this writer, "We cater our clothing toward the working woman between the ages of 25-55. Oftentimes women come in looking for something special and can't find it there, so we provide them with personalized service. We make special trips to New York to purchase exactly what they're looking for."

Walking through the boutique one might find such designers names as Gino Paloi, Gay Gibson, Greenlea Moods, Psis, and Julie Miller.

Styles for all occasions ranging in prices from $35-$185 can be found at Ruth J's with a board new line of fall and winter coats and jackets with fur, suede and leather trimmings.

On the subject of new lengths in clothes, Mr. Croxton said, "Many of our customers don't really like the new lengths. Their going more toward the feminine look. Customers are buying more and more pants."

Since the two gents have been so successful in selling women's attire, I also asked Mr. Croxton how he and his father thought of opening up a men's boutique and he commented, "We have given it a thought or two, but right now it's in the air."

At the new location the boutique has a mixed clientele of customers, in addition to, the many customers who have traveled with the store from its Arydale Ave. location. Mr. Croxton calls those customers "dependable."

To assist buyers in their selection are the Croxtons and a longtime friend of the family, Mrs. Alma Ball who has been with the boutique since its beginning.

The boutique often gives fashion shows at luncheons, cocktail sips, dinner parties with its own models, Gloria Cross, Lyn Dobson, Evelyn Douglass, Margaret Mason and Ann Wallace.

Columbia Capers

The Oakland Mills Other Barn was the scene of the National Council of Negro Women Howard County section's Annual Membership Round-up last Sunday.

Registration commenced at 3 p.m. and lasted for one hour, rounding up some 35 new members. In addition to the newcomers, more than 100 old members and friends came to hear the NCNW guest speaker. She was Ruth Bates Harris. Washington, D.C., Deputy Administrator for Community and Human Relations at NASA.

Mrs. Bates spoke briefly on "The Plight of the Negro Woman." She felt that black women should reach out for unity; and people belonging to organizations and the strength one would receive from such an organization as the National Council of Negro Women. She further added that black people should continue to struggle for equality; she stressed human relations and being qualified for jobs.

The new president for the Howard County section is lovely Leola Anderson. Mrs. Anderson told the audience that the Howard County section NCNW was the largest black organization in the county with a total of 73 members.

Two years ago when the section was organized, it was under the name of the Columbia section of NCNW. The name was recently changed from the Columbia section to Howard County section of NCNW. According to Mrs. Anderson, the change came about because of the membership growth which has given a broader reach into the community . . .

Members and friends didn't rush home after listening to the speeches.

They circulated and chatted among themselves and sipped champagne from a free-flowing fountain and tasted a variety of cheeses and sampled fruit from decorated bowls.

The affair was coordinated by Yvonne Howell, a very capable membership chairman who also introduced the speaker.

Guests would not leave the room without stopping to view a "wall put together scrapbook prepared by Mary Day, Wilde Lake High School business instructor. The book contained pictures and numerous articles dating back to the beginning of the section to the present time.

A reception was held at the home of the president of NCNW, Mrs. Anderson, in honor of the guest speaker.

Executive officers are Leola Anderson, president; Bernice Long, first vice president; Yvonne Howell, recording secretary; Margaret Langford, corresponding secretary; Iris Stevens, assistant secretary; Gerdine Johnson, financial secretary, and Joan English, treasurer.

Martha Lee, chaplain; Deloris Thomas, historian; Georgia Goslie, parliamentarian.

A NCNW general meeting will be held Wedesday, October 16, at the Interfaith Center, Room 11.

Thought for Today

"I know what pleasure is for I have done good work." — Robert Louis Stevenson.

"She has done all this while raising her own family of six children!"

Mrs. Henson: "Community worker, volunteer, housewife, mother" — all of these describe Mrs. Henrietta Henson, first runner-up in the 1974 Woman of the Year Contest.

"Her community involvement includes sitting on several boards such as that of the Southwest Outreach Emergency Food Center, Workers Allied Toward Community Unity, Inc.

"She is actively engaged in plans to renovate three buildings in her neighborhood which will serve as a multipurpose complex of Probation and Parole, a Day Care Center, a health area, and a center to help rehabilitate male alcoholics.

"Mrs. Henson is a VISTA volunteer, serves as a member of the Concerned Citizens for Better Living Conditions, and just this summer organized eight blocks in her area for the Clean Block Campaign.

"In addition to all of this, she finds time to work with the PTA at the school her 12-year-old-daughter attends, involve herself in activities at New Abyssinnia Pentacostal Holiness Church, hold down a paying job, and solicit free tickets for circuses, bus trips, etc. for youngsters in her neighborhood."

Mrs. Atkins: "Mrs. Jeannette Sykes Atkins is called "a beautiful person and our woman of the year" by youngsters who have come to know her during her 10-year directorship at the Johnston Square Recreation Center.

"Aside from her many self-imposed extra duties in programming and supervising wholesome recreational and religious activites throughout the Baltimore area, Mrs. Atkins undertakes numerous side involvements with young people.

"One of these is the Jae-ettes, an interracial girls group which, under her direction, has evolved into a quasi-professional company. The youngsters, ranging in age from 14 to 19 years, have performed in churches, hospitals, schools, fashion shows and other community projects. They also have repeatedly appeared before inmates at women's reformatories.

"She has exerted her influenc in the rehabilitation of school dropouts, and done tireless work in the area of locating meaningful jobs for needy teenagers."

The group of six women who judged the 50 or more ballots which came into this office during the Woman of the Year drive, report that it was by no means an easy task selecting the three names.

The judges were Elizabeth Williams, Elva Edwards, Mary Robinson, Vivian Washington, Elaine Nolan and Lillian Bell. They, too, were present at the ceremony. Mrs. Edwards presented one of the awards as did AFRO columnist Pinnie L. Ross (Columbia Capers) and this writer.

Hiram Grand Lodge

Twenty-eight men were presented distinguished honors on Friday night when the Hiram Grand Lodge held its annual Awards Night dinner dance.

Two of those awards were bestowed upon community figures who are members of Hiram. They were Congressman Parren J. Mitchell and Judge Joseph C. Howard who received the Political Service and Community Service awards respectively.

"Every black man who has achieved has done so on the strength of those who have proceeded us," commented Congressman Mitchell as he addressed the audience. Mr. Mitchell was speaking of the Grand Master Emeritus Clarence Wycoff and his predecessor, John V. Thornton. Mr. Wycoff was cited for his more than 30 years of service to the masonic organization.

Toastmaster for the annual event was Brother Columbus McNeil who introduced the officers and their counterparts to the guests. They were Past Grand Master and Mrs. John H. Thornton, Grand Master and Mrs. John V. Thornton, Mrs. Clarence Wycoff, Grand Matron Helen V. Benton.

Some 26 special citations went to Hiram brethren. They were Brothers Luther Ford, Eureka No. 1; Julius Richburg, Cherry Hill No. 2; Wilbert Charity, King Solomon No. 3; Rufus Mitchell, King David, No. 5;

Robert Jackson, Keystone, No. 7; William H. Clanton, Hiram Abiff No. 8; Charles Banks, Widow's Son No. 9; Charles D. Edlow, Mt. Zion No. 10; Trust Brown, New Bethlehem No. 11;

Herbert Wilson, Alpha No. 26; David Tanner, Ritorgo Figlio No. 27; Andrew Gamble, Leonard E. Hicks No. 28, and Richard Weaver, Hiram Glee Club.

Also at the affair were dignitaries from other points. Like Grand Master and Mrs. William R. Bryant from Pa.; Grand Matron Ruth Rucker, Pa.; Grand Master and Mrs. William R. Dames, N.Y.

The evening also marked the kick-off for the building expansion fund. Proceeds from the affair went to that project. Some $4,500 was donated that evening, $2,000 from Hiram and $2,500 from the Medina Temple No. 1. (More about the building-expansion drive in a coming edition.)

Neighborhood Club

The Neighborhood Club of the 1100 block Carrollton Ave. celebrated its 35th year and honored its residents, both past and present, at a recent gathering.

Guests arrived at the Holiday Inn-Downtown at seven for cocktails and dinner at eight. They then danced until one to vibes of the Ken Brooke's Experiences.

Several birthdays and anniversaries were acknowledged. Mr. and Mrs. James A. Owings were celebrating their 33rd anniversary Dr. and Mrs. Douglass celebrated their 49th.
