said he could not determine the possible number of men to be laid off until after the work schedules were processed on Thursday afternoon.

In addition, another blast furnace may be out of operation bringing the total to seven.

Originally, there were two furnaces out prior to the coal strikee with four more shut down since it began.

A list of grievances was presented by Mr. Dennnis and Bernard Paris, the local union's international staff representative, protesting the company's refusal to pay workers supplemental unemployment benefits and short workweek benefits.

Mr. Dennis explained that since the steelworkers are not directly involved in a strike, they should not be denied these benefits.

"We are not dependent on the coal tied up in the immediate strike," said Mr. Dennis.

He added that he had received a letter of the minutes from a previous Bethlehem Steel meeting that stated that coal was still being bought from British Columbia and West Germany.

As of today, Friday, negotiations have beeen made between the miners and the coal industry and coal miners may begin work early next week.

However, Mr. Dennis said that Bethlehem Steel stated their men could not return until coal has actually been shipped into the plants.

To date, there are 3,6000 steelworkers out of work due to the mine workers strike.

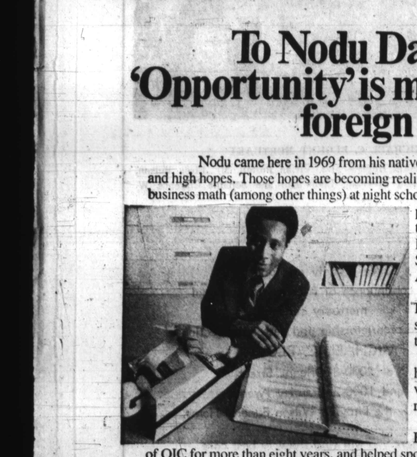
AN EQUAL-OPPORTUNITY, AFFIRMATIVE-ACTION EMPLOYER

To Nodu Dambreville, 'Opportunity' is more than a long, foreign word.

Nodu came here in 1969 from his native West Indies with a suitcase, no English, and high hopes. Those hopes are becoming realities right now. He learned English and business math (among other things) at night school. He studied accounting and billing procedures for two years at the Opportunities Industrialization Center school in Brooklyn, and, on graduation, joined The Sperry and Hutchinson Company as Accounting Clerk.



He's been promoted three times. Evenings, he continues his studies at a seminary, for his ultimate goal is to enter the ministry.

Among the thousands of words in his new language, Nodu understands very well the meaning of opportunity. He realized it through OIC.

His employer, Sperry and Hutchinson, has been a major supporter of OIC for more than eight years, and helped sponsor the training centers that prepare men and women like Nodu for skilled employment in the business world.

"We need the skills OIC's program teaches, so we've seen firsthand how this mutually beneficial program works," says Frederick A. Collins, Jr., president of The Sperry and Hutchinson Company and himself a member of OIC's National Advisory Council and Chairman of the New York Council.

Helping people grow is one of the most important ways The Sperry and Hutchinson Company grows. It makes good sense for all of us!

Sincere and true in heart and mind,
Beautiful memories he left behind.

But this they wipe out never,
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.
