Sunday afternooner benefits Provident's heart department

By Marie P. Cooke
AFRO Women's Editor

History was made on Sunday afternoon. For the first time in history, a benefit affair was held to help the cardiology department at Provident Hospital. At least it was an effort, says Pinnie Ross, co-sponsor of the project, which drew a crowd of pre-holiday fashion shows goers to the Baltimore-Sheraton Inn for a most delightful afternoon.

It was an effort on the part of Ms. Ross and Mrs. Ann Drayton who came up with the idea to support the heart department.

Mrs. Drayton, a longtime milliner in the Catonsville area, was unable to witness the event due to illness. She has been confined to Provident Hospital for the past few weeks. Mrs. Ross says she carried out her share of the work right from her hospital bed — ticket reports, et all.

Luncheon guests did not just see fashions. Dr. Elijah Saunders, chief of cardiology at Provident and president of the Central Maryland Heart Association, presented a short, easy-to-understand filmstrip on hypertension.

The slide presentation, says Dr. Saunders, is still in the making. The Regional Medical Program supplied a grant for developing the filmstrip which will eventually be viewed in four parts — Hypertension, Dietary Aspects, Drugs and High Blood Pressure and A Sympotomatic Patient.

Filming is being shot on location, at the Provident Hospital complex, and should be completed early next year.

(Editor's Note: Dr. Saunders is considering writing a series of articles for the AFRO. Hypertension is the major killer of blacks and since this is THE black press, we feel that we should spread the word to our people through this media.)

Back to show

The Ann Drayton and Pinnie Ross models surely put on an interesting show. Outfits for the wee ones were shown by Pinnie's little princesses, including little dresses and pantsuits for everyday wear and the holidays, too.

Models were Diana Toomer, Charmein Hugh, Andrea Smith, Allyson Harris.

Teen models wore creations just for juniors while the young adults were a bit more mature in their selections.

And they were Karen Cornick, Donna Hill, Tomai Webb, Edna Hill, and Debbie Mott, Rae Ross, Maiti Franklin, Carolotta Moore, and Yvonne Stewart.

On stage after some years was the charming Maggie Watkins who took the lead with the senior models. Many remember Mrs. Watkins back in the 60's.

Others were Maggie Watkins, Betty Brown, Pat Bernard, Virginia Thomas, Jean Paign.

Travis Winkey and Gary Wilder were the male models.

Commentators for the day were Helen Mae Chamberlin from the Drayton group and Joan Ridgely from the Ross Studio.

Hostesses for the day included Pauline Jenkins, Carmelite Coombs, and Catherine Gregory.

Original designs from the Walburton Pulley Unlimited winter and spring collections were shown throughout the show; as were creations by Mary Buster and hats by Ann Drayton.

Other outfits came from Linda Lynn and Dandy Line Immorts.

Another highlight of the afternoon was the drawing for door prizes, a money corsage and an original Drayton hat. Terri Hill, Miss U.S. Teen Maryland selected the winning ticket stubs.

It was learned this week that some $200 was profited from the affair which will be handed over to the cardiology department.

Season's greetings!

AFRO staff photographer, Benjamin M. Phillips, caught little Donyle DeShazo, 3½, on the knee of Santa at Mondawmin Shopping center this week. A reminder to all parents: It's that time of year.

MR. AND MRS. RONALD BROOKS
(former Miss Mary K. Justis)

Miss Justis-Mr. Brooks speak wedding vows

Miss Mary Katherine Justis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Morton of Baltimore, was recently wed in a double ring ceremony at the Saint Pius Catholic Church to Ronald Brooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Brooks, also of Baltimore.

The ceremony officiated by Father Joseph Deldeckin was most unique, doing away with the traditional giving away of the bride by her father.

When the wedding procession began, Father Deldecckin was escorted down the aisle by two altar boys, followed by bridesmaids escorted by ushers, then the ringbearer.

The bridegroom on the arm of his mother and father walked down the aisle to await his bride.

The bride attired in an Ivory colored gown of peau de soie, trimmed in pearls with Belgium lace was escorted by her parents who kissed her when they reached the arch and gave her to the waiting bridegroom.

Maid of honor was Linda Hall along with bridesmaids, Bonita Gatewood, cousin of the bride; Paula Faust, Diane Brooks, sister of the bridegroom and Bernadette Jones. Junior bridesmaid was Deborah Dorsey.

Best man was Theodore Brooks, brother of bridegroom; and ushers, Kenneth Jones, Randolph Smith, Wendell Boyd, Melvin Singletary and Edward Justis, brother of bride.

Ringbearer was Brian Brooks newphew of bridegroom and flower girl was Tiffany Ailor, cousin of bride.

A reception followed the ceremony at the LaFontaine Blue where some 150 guests greeted the newlyweds. Hostess was Alice Morell. Billy Sdynor was the organist.

Yule season spotlighted with gala Wajamii party

By Pinnie L. Ross

The Yuletide season was ushered in last Friday night, when the Wajami (circle of friends) had their Christmas party at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Emerson (Celonia) Walden.

The weather was bitter cold and rainy, but it didn't deter the members and their husbands from attending the party.

Mrs. Walden greeted the members in a long kelly green hostess gown. The Semi-loose fitting, A-line gown was made of raw silk material. She chose green and black suede velvet slippers covered with miniature gold beads.

Guests were directed to the huge clubroom where each member put her covered dish on a long table. The table was overcrowded with such goodies as collard greens, pig knuckles, fried chicken, and so on.

Who worried about calories with such delectable food — not the charming ladies of the Wajamii — Later for calories, they said.

So much for chatting and eating: it's time to dance said the hostess. She disappeared, shortly returend with small slips of yellow paper which contained a variety of numbers, and passed them out saying, "When this number is called that couple start dancing; different wives with different husbands." The purpose of the party was to get to meet the husbands of the members.

The guests quickly got down to serious business and the fun began. Believe me, they were so relaxed, until some partied until 3 a.m. — Oh, what a morning!

Members of the Wajamii are: Mrs. Emerson (Celonia) Walden, president; Mrs. Thomas (Roberta) H. Briscoe, secretary; Mrs. Ernest (Shirley) J. Colvin, treasurer; Mrs. Henry (Ruby) Martin, Mrs. Arthur (Zola) T. Boone.

Mrs. Alfred (Janice) F. Fisher, Mrs. W. (Ricky) Delaney, Mrs. Warren (Iris) R. Jones, Mrs. Arthur (Norma) C. Lamb.

Mrs. Charles (Suzann) K. Price, Mrs. William (Pinnie) A. Ross, Mrs. Hulbert (Janice) Skinner, Mrs James (Iola) A. Smith, Miss Sandra Smith, Mrs. William (Lula) E. Wade, Mrs. Harvey (Ozella) Webb, Mrs. Philip (Luce Marie) Webster, Mrs. George (Ada) F. Woodland, Mrs. Fred (Kay) Black.

Mrs. Henry (Ruby) Martin, Mrs. Kline (Bebe) A. Price, Mrs. John (Grace) C. Payne, Mrs. W. Ernest (Charlen) Jarvis, and Mrs. Philip (Lus Marie) Webster.

A birthday party was held at Woodward and Lothrop in the Columbia Mal recently in honor of cute little Tammy Rice. The party began at 3 p.m. and lasted until 5 p.m.

Little Joel Clark, a D.C. resident, shared in the celebration with Tammy. Since her birthday was the same day.

Sharing in the celebration and having lots of fun were George Johnson, Gary McClurkin, Robie Crawl, Jeffrey Pinkler, Kali Crawl, Camarl Walker;

Derek Reid, Kenneth Murray, Rene Jones, Nicole Jones, Stacy Johnson, Michelle Henderson, Courtney Henderson, Gilesa McKinney, Sonja and Simone Blake, and Juliet Gilliam.

Tammy Rice is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William (Donna) Rice. Tammy, the honoree, Simon, Sonja Blake and Gilesa McKinner are little princesses from the Pinnie Ross Charm Studio.

Get well wishes go out to Mrs. Zola Boone, who has been confined to bed for two weeks at her home in Columbia. Mrs. Boone is on the staff at Coppin State College.

Oops — I made an error in one of my recent columns by leaving out the name of the secretary of the Delphites, daughters of the Columbia Chapter, Delta Sigma Theta. The secretary's name is Michelle Willis
