Chenier's supporters ponder All-Star voting

LANDOVER, Md — The latest figures on the voting for the Eastern team in the NBA All-Star game, incredibly, do not list Phil Chenier among the East's top five guards.

Most players and coaches around the NBA agree that Chenier and Walt Frazier are the two best guards in the league. But ahead of the 24-year-old guard are (in order): Frazier, JoJo White, Earl Monroe, Pete Maravich and Ernie DeGregorio.

The facts make Chenier's low standing almost impossible to believe. Only Monroe and Austin Carr among NBA guards are ahead of Chenier in scoring. And scoring is only a small part of Chenier's game. He is an excellent defensive guard and a clutch shooter.

The following statistics show how Chenier ranks in comparison with the five guards listed ahead of him in the All-Star voting:

Scoring

1.	Monroe	23.0
2.	CHENIER	22.6
3.	Frazier	20.1
4.	DiGregorio	18.9
5.	Maravich	18.9
6.	White	17.9

Field Goal Pct.

1.	DiGregorio	.543
2.	Monroe	.494
3.	CHENIER	.467
4.	Frazier	.465
5.	White	.415
6.	Maravich	.384

Steals

1.	Frazier	2.9
2.	CHENIER	2.2
3.	Monroe	1.6
4.	Maravich	1.4
5.	White	1.3
6.	DiGregorio	1.2

Free Throw Pct.

1.	Monroe	.862
2.	White	.839
3.	CHENIER	.800
4.	Frazier	.792
5.	Maravich	.777
6.	DiGregorio	.700

Assists

1.	DiGregorio	8.2
2.	Maravich	6.2
3.	Frazier	5.5
4.	White	5.2
5.	Monroe	3.5
6.	CHENIER	3.2

Rebounds

1.	Frazier	6.8
2.	Maravich	4.43
3.	Monroe	4.42
4.	White	4.3
5.	CHENIER	3.8
6.	DiGregorio	1.8

Chenier is also No. 1 in blocked shots, with 19, compared to 11 for Monroe and seven for the next best guard. Only Chenier, Monroe and Maravich lead their teams in scoring.

Subjective category, but Frazier and Chenier are well-known for their defense. Understandably, much of the voting is based on past reputation, but the voting is supposed to depend on the kind of season the player is currently having.

DiGregorio has played only six games. Maravich is admittedly having his worst year. White is 13 points below his career average. Only Chenier (22.6 to 17.8), Monroe (23.0 to 19.2) are above their career scoring averages.

Bullet fans say if one asks the players around the league who are the best guards in basketball, the bet is that they would say Walt Frazier and Phil.

Even Frazier has said that, "Next to me, Chenier is the most complete player in basketball."

The recently retired Jerry West said Chenier "is as good as any guard I have faced in this league.

I GOT IT—This is what Morgan's Marvin Webster (40) appears to be saying to Pat Edwards (22) as both went up for the rebound in the second half of the final game of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference clash with the Southwestern A.C., last Saturday evening at Morgan's Hill fieldhouse. Morgan lost to Jackson State University by a score of 90-70. In these AFRO sports photos by Benjamin M. Phillips IV, Miss Valeria Henry, senior at Morgan from Baltimore, and Miss Shirley Basfield, Morgan alumnus from Baltimore, looking on excitedly in some of the better moments of the game for Morgan. The Bears lost to the Tigers after having previously defeated the SWAC's Alcorn Braves, 84-76.

Morgan, UMES in Detroit meet

The basketball teams of Morgan State College and Maryland, Eastern Shore (UMES) arrived in Detroit Thursday preparatory to competing in the Shaw Classic.

Shaw Tech hosts the tourney every year and once again the Bears will enter as favorite. Morgan won the event last year.

Coach Nat Frazier's youngsters rebounded from a defeat at the hands of Jackson State last weekend to whip Hofstra University, 67-56, on Wednesday. It was their fifth victory in six essays.

Meanwhile, the Hawks have yet to win in the young season after having played to 24-2 last year.

India erred in Davis Cup boycott of S. Africa: Ashe

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tennis star Arthur Ashe, probably the best known black athlete to have competed in integrated sports in South Africa, says that India erred in not contesting the Davis Cup final in the apartheid-governed republic.

South Africa, which had the home advantage, won the Davis Cup by default when India pulled out of the competition rather than let its team play in the republic where segregation of the races is the law of the land.

"I think it was a poor strategic move on India's part," the 31-year-old Ashe declares. "Much good could have resulted had India traveled to Johannesburg. By not playing, normalization of tensions between black and white has been set back between two and three years."

• • •

Ashe, just back from the republic where he lost in the final of the South African Open for the second successive year to Jimmy Connors, says he had been allowed complete freedom of movement during his stay "They (the South African government) use me and I use them. We both know it.

"I don't make inflamatory speeches, nor do I burn by bridges. I just want to see life on a multiracial basis," asserts Ashe, who first ran up against the "color in sport" problem 21 years ago when his entry for the Richmond (Va.) City tournament was rejected.

• • •

Ashe admits he had felt pressure in South Africa, "because it would have been a disaster had I been eliminated in the first round." But outside the competition. "I was not bothered. You have to look to see apartheid at work."

Asked if he believes the day of a multi-racial society in South Africa was near at hand, Ashe replies: "They (South African whites) may not believe it, but I think it could happen in my lifetime."
