foreclosure on their homes to pay for consumer debts.

2. The creation of a state small business administration to aid and protect small businesses.

3. A bill to de-criminalize possession of marijuana.

4. A measure giving the Board of Supervisors of Elections the authority to extend voting hours without having to call on the Attorney General.

5. A bill calling for the appointment of a sub-committee of the Judicial Proceedings Committee to conduct an investigation regarding the spying on police espionage.

State Senator Verda F. Welcome lists among her proposed legislation

1. Two bills to encourage rape victims to testify against assailants. One would permit the judge to close such a trial to the public and press. The other would provide for the hearing of evidence on the victims sexual background by the judge and would allow him to make a ruling on such evidence in closed quarters.

2. A bill providing for gun registration. The bill would also provide for the issuance of certificates allowing to the user to purchase ammunition. No ammunition can be sold to one without a certificate.

Among the senator's other legislation are bills providing for the elevation of Morgan State College to university status; allowing the State Human Relations Commission to assess damages in cases; prohibiting the penal institutionalization of children under the age of twelve and many others.

State Senator Clarence W. Blount D (41st D) lists among his proposed legislation the following:

1. A bill requiring that training programs have jobs available for graduates. This measure would make sure that people who have gone through such programs will not be left without a job upon graduation.

2. A bill that would set up a mechanism for state handling of fair credit reporting. The bill is twofold. It provides for the protection of an individual being investigated and keeps such information from being loosely disperses.

The senator is also working on legislation which would provide for the licensing of debt collection agencies; the extension of warranty of habitability; and other bills which have not been thoroughly ironed out as yet.

Delegate Lloyd "Ike" Dixon (38th D) has stated that he is concentrating his efforts" on the Dept. of Personnel as it relates to the employment of minorities and women in state agencies."

He said, "Recent reports have shown that the agencies are way below any significant levels of hiring and minorities and women. It's scandalous and I hope to bring this to the attention to the Ways and Means committee."

Dixon pointed out that he has brought up the matter 3 or 4 times. He hopes he'll be success ful this time.

Dixon also plans to work on changes of the state automobile insurance fund. He contends that the present one is hurting the little man.

Delegate Walter R. Dean Jr. (6 1st D) has indicated that he is concerned about the economic viability of the community. He hopes to introduce legislation that will preserve and increase that viability.

He also noted that he is interested in housing legislation; and plans to work on legal mechanisms to preserve the old neighborhoods especially stable black neighborhoods. Dean is also concerned about the plight of the business during today's hard times.

He lists among his proposed legislation the following:

1. A bill providing for an automatic cost of living increase for welfare recipients.

2. A bill providing veterans to purchase homes at a reduced interest rate and others.

3. Delegate John W. Douglass (D 45th D) intends to concentrate on measures of "a fiscal nature." Among his proposed legislation are:

1. A bill providing for a metropolitan tax sharing program. This program would allow Baltimore city to get some of the revenue for commercial and industrial property in the metropolitan area though not necessarily in the city.

2. An income tax reform bill.

He also list a measure allowing students to use credit cards for school purchases and to pay tuition in state colleges; A home improvement guarantee fund to provide for homeowners who have work done by contractors, and a bill providing for the fining of parents of minors who commit crimes. This bill is an effort to place more responsibility on those parents.

Other legislators have also begun to prepare legislation for the coming session. These are but a few of those measures.

sum for the death of her father.

Describing Sutton Place as a multi-unit luxury apartment building, Miss Scott said Del. Scott was not provided proper protection as a tenant when his death occurred.

According to record placed before the court, Del. Scott was gunned down by assassins during the early morning hours and within minutes after he had parked his car in the underground parking garage at Sutton Place.

Miss Scott's petition before the court states that as a resident occupying an apartment at Sutton Place, her father was due reasonable safeguard.

She states, "Sutton Place owed James Aubrey Scott Jr. the duty of due care in reasonably safeguarding the premises and taking reasonable precautions in the evening and early morning hours of maintaining a reasonable number of guards and other security measures."

Miss Scott further states to the court, "The death of my father was caused by the negligence of the defendants.

"Pursuant to a least between my father and Sutton Place, there was a contract obligation to preclude him and his person and property from criminal attack by securing all entrances, garages, halls, ways and other areas of common use.

"The defendants had promised to hire an adequate number of security patrolmen and place a monitoring system prior to my father's death.

"On the date of his death, the TV monitoring system was malfunctioning. No security guards were on the premisse.

"The failure to keep the TV monitoring system in state of operating repair and to provide the proper security guards amounts to a breach of the implied warranty owed James Aubrey Scott Jr.

"Due to the foregoing, the death of my father was caused."

Through her attorneys, Miss Scott told the court she as her father's surviving child is entitled to recover for his wrongful death.

She states in her petition that she has been forced to suffer and endure great mental anguish, emotional pain and suffering and has been permanently deprived of the services of her father.

Stating that her great loss and damage is all due directly and proximately to the negligence of the Sutton Place defendants, she asks that the court award the $50 million sum, "for the lost society, companionship and counsel of my father."

more Institute of Musical Art, 1900 block of Druid Hill Ave., Neighborhood Association.

In addition she was a founder of the Business and Professional Women's Club, Inc., an honorary member of the Iota Phi Lambda Sorority.

During her active years she belonged to numerous other organizations including the Urban League, the Citizens Committee for Justice, the Citizens Committee for Underprivileged Children, the Cooperative Women's Civic League, the Citizens Planning and Housing Association of Baltimore, the ladies of Morgan State College and served on the Advisory Board of the Department of Public Welfare and Planned Parenthood Clinic of Baltimore.

In an AFRO interview, in 1960, she confided that one of her happiest, most gratifying events in her life was the naming of elementary School No. 162, then at Barre and Warner Streets in honor of her husband, Josiah Diggs.

Mr. Diggs owned a number of properties in Baltimore as well as theatres and related business. Mr. Diggs died in 1938.

Mrs. Diggs activities also included annual leadership in the Baltimore NAACP membership campaign where she frequently chaired the annual fund raising drive subcommittee, and for the past three decades reported the highest number of new members.

Mrs. Diggs also sought public and ran an unsuccessful campaign for what was then called the first colored woman candidate for the house of delegates from the fourth district in 1938.

She remained active in Republican circles up until the end.

Attorney Juanita Jackson Mitchell, National NAACP Legal Committee member and Civil Right's lawyer said in a tribute: "Mrs. Sarah Diggs was one of our Mary-land heroines of the civil right's struggle.

"For more than 35 years she served as Baltimore branch NAACP vice president and was active up until her death in campaigning for membership in the NAACP.

"She was a leader and active in every battle against "jim crow" and successfully fought with us to eliminate racial segregation in the public school system, the public beaches and to end restrictions based on race in housing.

"She never grew weary in the struggle. She will be greatly missed.

Burial will be Sat. 10 a.m. in Arbutus Memorial Park. Arrangements by the Nutter Funeral Home.

Mrs. Diggs is survived by her twin sister, Julia Fernandis of Atlantic City and a nephew, Ambrose E. Briscoe of Denver, Colo.

46, hired to do Watergate legal work, was acquitted of conspiracy and obstruction of justice, the first Watergate defendant to go free.

Neither Nixon, an unindicted co-conspirator in the case, nor President Ford had immediate comment.

After 13 hours deliberation, the jury of eight blacks and four whites returned the verdict to U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica late in the afternoon of the trial's 63rd day. It was 30 months after five men were arrested with bugging equipment inside democratic party offices at the Watergate.

The five men stood erect and motionless at their tables in courtroom No. 2 as Clerk James P. Catanzaro read the counts and a series of "Guilty . . . Guilty . . . Guilty."

The convictions brought to 17 the number of Nixon aides found guilty of Watergate crimes.

When Parkinson's acquittal was announced, Mitchell turned and whispered congratulations. Haldeman, his wife Jo and their daughter Susan were typically emotionless. Susan, a law student who sat next to her father at the defense table, broke into tears as she left the courtroom.

of the Emancipation Proclamation nears, this provides opportunity for us to reflect. It is agreed that we've come a long way. But we should be mindful that we still have a long way to go.

For example, black businesses are suffering more than other businesses due to economic conditions and the energy crisis; unemployment among our citizens is as high as 50 per cent as compared to a seven per cent overall unemployment rate; 20 years after the hard-won historic Supreme Court school desegregation decision, black children are still being escorted by law enforcement officers in their efforts to obtain a quality desegregated education — and the battleground is in the North.

We have cause to be proud of our ascendency from the chasms of slavery to the fringe of the mainstream. But we must not be duped by lip service or tokenism.

The Civil Rights legislation of the past 20 years has provided the tools of implementation of our rights as guaranteed by the Constitution 198 years ago.

Neither the mobs in Boston or those in high places who seek to contain us can stop the movement forward to freedom if we are eternally vigilant.

To emancipate is to free or liberate.

We must rededicate ourselves to assuring the reality of our emancipation.

Allen pointed out that the President's Commission on Violence had predicted these developments in a 1968 report.

Allen is currently working on the grand jury investigation of alleged police espionage. After he leaves today, he expects to leave a report on the investigation for incoming state's attorney William Swisher.
