Y classes begin session

Dance classes are taught by Pam Garnett

Classes in modern dance and ballet for teenaged girls will begin the winter session on Tuesday, Jan. 7, 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., at the YWCA, 1912 Madison Avenue.

Members of the class have formed themselves into a troupe known as the "YWCA Dancers." They appeared at the Kwanza Bazaar on Dec. 7 and at the Soromundi Festival, Dec. 1, at the Madison Avenue YWCA. A May dance recital is planned.

Places are open in the class; new members are welcome. Fee is $10 for eleven sessions. For information the number to call is 669-1881.

The classes are taught by Pamela Garnett. She was a contestant in the Miss Black World Pageant at Cape May, N. J. (Dec. 26 to 29, 1974). She was first runner up in the Miss Hemisphere Contest, Buena Vista, Fla. in the fall, 1974, and was Miss Black Teen Age Baltimore in 1971.

She has danced for television audiences on the "June Thorne Show" and on "Kumba," a showcase for Baltimore talent, both on Channel 2, WMAR, weekends. She has also danced for the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority on three occasions in the past two years.

Miss Garnett danced in a benefit program at Columbia, Md. for the "Save the Children Fund," in the fall, 1973, and she represented the YWCA on the United Fund Stage at the Baltimore City Fair, 1974.

Miss Garnett began training in dance at Danny Diamond's Studio when she was three and a half years of age, followed by training in ballet and modern dance at the Wally Saunders Studio and one year at the Peabody Conservatory.

Presently a student at Western High School, she plans to attend the American Conservatory, Washington, D.C., to study dance, modeling and journalism.

A peak at Spring

"Looking up to warmer, happier days ahead, here are the shapes that shine."

The Spring '75 woman radiates confidence. She's sure of her own individuality and knows how to use fashion to express it.

Sure of herself as a woman, she wants strictly female clothes . . . more dresses than ever, more ruffles, more flower-garden fabrics, more glamorous Chinatown looks — good clothes, well made, that last and last.

She wants multi-purpose wardrobe stretchers that work hard for many seasons in many climates. She knows when to wear tap pants and skimps, when to wear frou-frou chiffons, and when to leave well enough alone.

The Fashion Optimist knows that elegance is in the spirit, not in the clothes, and that fashion captures the spirit of the times.

In '75, there's a time for every fashion . . . we're seeing more job clothes, dress-up clothes, play clothes, less of a sportswear look in the evening. She now wants to change her mood with the hour.

Sure of what she buys, there's much less impulse buying. This is the era of the well-thought-out wardrobe, investment jewelry, dual-purposes in everything. She's open to new ideas . . . to layers of skirts, to wide full shapes, to light bright colors.

There's room for all in her fashion-life.

Loose and Free

Looking up to warmer, happier days ahead, here are the shapes that shine. The big loose look: in tops, blouses, skirts and coats, often tied or belted for control. There's something optimistic about wearing lots of fabric, these days.

Details make the difference. Everything counts: necklines that tie, have collars, eye-catching cuts. You can also look at wide elbow-length puffed sleeves, cut-in armholes, bloused bodices, ruffles. All done in soft fabrics with no linings. Some spring characters: the rich peasants, with budget price tags.

Nannette Brock has cosmopolitan style

"I intend to continue my way through the fashion world . . . I'll never settle for less."

AFRO model of the week

By Benjamin M. Phillips

In Baltimore, there are basically two types of models — those who model for the entertainment of the garment, and those who model strictly for the advertisement of garments.

The only difference between the two is the emphasis which is placed on the garment. Both types of modeling are important in our city. It all depends on the purpose of the show.

One of the top models in Baltimore who deals strictly with the advertisement of the garment is Nanette Brock. Her style and purpose of modeling concern themselves strictly with promoting the garment. As she says, "When you do a fashion show, you are doing advertisement and advertising clothes."

This is the main type of modeling done in New York and really all around the world. The purpose of such modeling style is to promote and sell the designers garments.

Mrs. Brock classifies her style as a "Cosmopolitan-style lady. "It's a very fashionable conservative quiet style with the look of elegance."

She is a nine year veteran in the field. She first started with Diana Kane in 1965. By 1966, she finished her formal training and became Ms.Kane's top model. In 1967, she worked for Pauline Brooks.

Recently, she went to Patricia Stevens who polished her up and put her under contract. As a result many doors have opened for Mrs. Brock in Baltimore. She feels her next step will be the top in this city.

Mrs. Brock feels that formal training is very important to everyone who wants to get into the field.

"It taught me how to be composed at all times. How to speak, stand, poise, and all types of movements." "I really got my style from my grandmother who is an all around women.

"It takes a different individual style to be a top model. Also, since so few people make it as models, you have to have something eye catching and special besides being in the right place to make it.

"Modeling is not as easy as it appears, you are constantly in a learning situation." As Mrs. Brock points out, "Everything I learned got me where I am today. You pick up different styles by working with different people."

Modeling is Nanette Brock's profession. She loves working in the field of modeling. She is also an interior designer. She had decorated apartments and houses. Her speciality is modern designing. She loves plenty of colors.

In another branch of the fashion field she has worked as make-up consultant for the Florie Roberts and Fashion Fair lines.

One of the most important things to remember in the modeling field, in her opinion, is you have to keep up with the constant changes in fashion.

Don't be afraid to experiment, all things cannot work for everybody and all people.

Standing 5'7½" with a figure of 34-22-34, and weighing 110, Nanette Brock wears an "impossible 3, better 5 or 6, and a losing 8.", she says.

In her spare time, she likes to sing and coordinate clothing.

She even coordinates her husband's Manson Brock, wardrobe as well as her five-year-old daughter's Tatya. She describes her husband's dress as very fashionable in the middle of modern and conservative. "Simply, he looks handsome when he gets it together."

Mrs. Brock is planning a trip to France in May to further her career. Since everyone goes to New York, she wants to go the other way. She points out that designers go to Europe to discover new talent.

In her own words, "I intend to continue my way through the fashion world to the top and being the best, and knowing myself, I'll never settle for less."

The AFRO Model of the Week spotlights a professional fashion model in each Friday edition. Names are taken from a master list and are selected at random. Area models are invited to submit their names for consideration. Write: AFRO Model of the Week, P. O. Box 1857, Baltimore, Md., 21203, Attn. B. Phillips.
