Brown's Supermarkets open sixth store

Brown's Suprmarkets has opened its sixth new store. Located in the Madison Park Complex at 790 W. North Ave.

With over 17,000 square feet, Brown's North offers the most modern conveniences for both shoppers and staff.

In addition, it features quality meats, fresh seafood and produce, spacious aisles with dynamic displays of a wide variety of choice merchandise.

From one store in 1956 to six in 1975 is a success story of planned growth and community support. Now, Brown's employs 275 people, 250 of whom are inner city residents. Equally important, 75 per cent of Brown's managerial staff are black.

After many years of support for neighborhood groups, on an informal basis, Brown's has expanded and solidified its assistance through the Urban Services Agency.

To help those who are helping others, Brown's has set-up an annual fund of $12,000. This money will be awarded, at the rate of $1,000 per month, to the organization rated best in its field that month. Church, civic and community groups are all eligible to compete.

A special Awards Committee, composed of residents and staff of the Urban Services Agency will choose each month's winner.

Entry Forms are available at all six Brown's Supermarkets.

Canapp gets 8 years in MTA bus 10 slaying

Donald L. Canapp, 21, was sentenced to eight years in prison for manslaughter. Judge Shirley B. Jones imposed the sentence Tuesday in Criminal Court.

Canapp, of the 1500 block W. 36th St. was found guilty of shooting Miss Sharon Clinton, 18, on a transit bus last August 18.

According to Gary Bass, assistant state's attorney, Canapp was on the MTA No. 10 bus after the Marvin Gaye concert at the Civic Center when the shooting occurred.

DONALD L CANAPP

Judge Jones told the court, "The life of a young girl who was an innocent bystander was shot through no fault of her own. The public has a right to be protected from people who roam the streets ready for action."

Miss Clinton was struck in the head while Canapp was struggling with Sammy Mayers, 21, over a gun.

Mr. Myers of 2900 block The Alameda was shot in the chest by Canapp after raining racial insults on Mr. Canapp and striking him on the nose.

After making some racial remarks about Mr. Canapp, who is white, Mr. Mayers, a black man, demanded a cigarette from Mr. Canapp.

Police alleged that Mr. Canapp handed a pack of cigarettes to Mr. Mayers but he knocked the package out of his hand. Mr. Canapp then pulled out a revolver and ordered Mr. Mayers to backoff and fired one shot, point blank into his chest. Mr. Mayers is now paralyzed from the waist down as a result of his injuries.

DESPITE SURGE OF VIOLENT CRIME

This community displays genuine brotherhood

By Beverly B. Havard

The Northeast area of Baltimore City has, in recent months, often been the subject of newspaper headlines.

An alarming surge of violent crime in this once quiet section of the city has caused residents and merchants alike concern for the quality of life in this integrated and socio-economic area where the true nature of the community is lost — amid the rash of scary publicity.

In spite of the ever-present specter of crime which hovered over all of Baltimore, Christmas Eve, 1974, witnessed another example of how one community, Govans, displayed hardy determination and a spirit of genuine brotherhood for the occasion.

The Kenilworth Neighborhood Association sponsored a Christmas Eve party in the cafeteria of the Winston Elementary School No. 209.

Charles Mason, principal, granted use of the school to the neighborhood organization whenever Mr. Campbell, the school's maintenance man, known to everyone as "Fuzzy," is available to supervise the school premises.

"Fuzzy" has always demonstrated concern for and interest in the affairs of the community.

Music for the affair was provided free of charge by two neighborhood bands, both organized and supervised by Mr. Campbell, also in his spare time.

The evening began with the Annual Neighborhood Caroling Event, led by young Granville Wright and Santa, in the person of Leslie Bullock, affectionately known to area residents as "Mr. B."

Mrs. Edith Hare, vice-president of the Kenilworth Park Association, kept the swelling group organized as children and adults filed from their cheery, holiday-lit homes to follow Santa, Pied Piper fashion, to the beautifully decorated school cafeteria.

* * *

Inside — fun, dancing and enough food to amply feed the nearly 300 persons who attended.

The menu, prepared by residents and members of the association, consisted of hot dogs, sauerkraut, baked beans, cookies and punch.

Also, reflecting the multi-ethnic composition of the community, was an especially delectable dish, Panzit, a Philippine rice dish containing rice, shrimp, pork and chicken.

It was prepared by Mrs. Francis Dulduluau — a native of the Islands. Mrs. Dulduluau also created many of the beautiful 3-dimensional ornaments which graced the festivities.

* * *

Willie Horton officiated as Santa at the school while "Mr. B." visited the youngsters and many shut-ins, also some of the area senior citizens — who were patiently awaiting a visit. The modern day Santa was driven on his cheery rounds by Mrs. Mary Claiborne.

The president of the Kenilworth Park Neighborhood Association is Walter White; secretary, Burdetta Ellis. Chairperson for the holiday event was Mrs. Amelia Gresham.

Proceeds for the affair came from the City Fair community booth, manned by Mr. and Mrs. Walter White.

Mrs. Simms was dean at Fisk University

MRS. MARGARET SIMMS

Funeral services were held recently for Mrs. Margaret Simms, 71, a former dean of Women at Fisk University.

Mrs. Simms died Dec. 29 at the Hillhaven Convalescent Home in Tennessee. Mrs. Simms, a native of Lerham, Tex., often came to Baltimore.

She ended several careers with her work as assistant in the department of Development at Fisk University from 1970-1972.

Mrs. Simms had formerly served as associate dean of women at Fisk from 1951 to 1972. During World War II, she entertained troops as a singer with the American Red Cross.

Mrs. Simms was married to the late John A. Simms. Mrs. Simms served as program director overseas with the American Red Cross from 1942 to 1945. She was a guest soloist at the White House in 1940 at a tea given by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt for the National Council of Negro Women.

She was named as woman of the year by the City Federated Women's Clubs of Nashville and the Iota Phi Lambda Society. She has served as president of the National Council of Negro Women, the National Personnel Association. She was a member of the executive committee of the League of Women Voters and was a recipient of a YWCA citizenship award.

Mrs. Simms was also a member of the Civic Forum, the Links and the Opportunities Industrialization Center new special unemployment benefit program.

Tony Dease: Committed to helping others

....obligates himself to helping others up the ladder."

AFRO model of the week

By Benjamin M. Phillips

"I was in it when it was hardly fashionable for any man to be doing modeling. I went to all the downtown stores, and they said that I had to have some type of formal training. So, I went to Walter's Modeling School."

In his own words, this is how Anthony (Tony) Dease, 28, got his start in the modeling field. A graduate of Morgan State College with a B.S. degree in accounting, modeling wa not the easiest field to enter.

After doing a tour of Vietnam in the Army, Anthony Dease enrolled in Walter's which he feels was an "expensive nothing." "It was just a matter of getting that diploma."

"I had a female teacher who knew nothing about male models. In a sense, I taught them modeling. Don't get me wrong, I'm not against modeling schools because there are a lot of good ones."

Dease says he takes his modeling very seriously and adds that there is more than getting on the stage. "Anyone can get in clothes, but in order to be a model, you have to have a conception of clothes."

"I know people who call themselves models who cannot match colors. By conception of clothes, you should know how to match colors, how to accessorize outfits not only on but also off the runway."

"One of the things I did learn at Walter's was the importance of communication and the different classes such as personal hygiene and nutrition."

"All these are important in the field. You have to have good health and posture so therefore you have to keep your diet well-balanced."

"If there is anything I can not stress enough, is the point of being punctual for a show. The worse thing is to keep people waiting.

"There has been a great change in male fashions as we can all see. In the beginning whenever a man went out he had to wear a suit, but now a man can more or less have a variety, he is not restricted to the suit and tie bit."

This writer has been asking all the models whether or not they feel Baltimore can become a fashion capital. Anthony Dease feels it is very possible. Baltimore has all the makings and the parts, its just a matter of a little cohesion between the black boutiques, models, and designers.

"We should have some organization to bring all the models together so that everyone will not be working at cross purposes. It would also bring better cooperation throughout the field.

"A good example is Pauline Brooks, owner of Pauline Brooks Boutique. She's always helping someone along like when she featured Walburton Pulley's designs in her show this past fall."

"She does benefit shows for good causes every year. It's this sort of cooperation we need more of in our fashion field."

In his other profession, he has served on the Mayor's staff. Besides these two professions, Anthony Dease obligates himself to helping others up the ladder.

So, he spends a lot of his spare time with kids. He loves working with them.

"How many kids go to school and just don't know how to dress, personal hygiene, and nutrition. I teach them what I know and hopefully help themit don't think black children have had enough exposure. Maybe I can help a few of them get it.

"Wherever I go you can always see a car-load of kids with me and we go all over the place. It's not a matter of their parents neglecting them, its just that a lot of their parents don't have the time because of their two and three jobs to support their families."

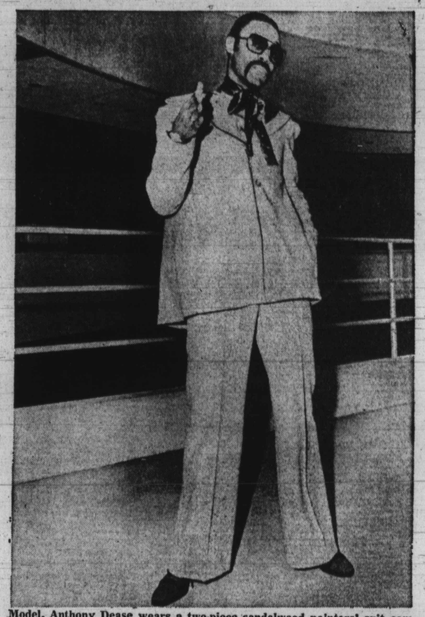
"One day I hope to open a center for the performing arts. That's why I took accounting, so when I do I will know where the money is."

Standing 6-feet, and weighing 165, Anthony Dease doesn't like to be restricted to any one style.

Actually, he traces his modeling back to his high school days at Douglass, where he graduated in 1964.

As far as those who want to enter the field or those already in the field who really want to become professional he advises, "You have to be individual, go to school to learn what they teach, but also go there to improve what they are teaching you and make it your own.

"Always try to improve on your good points."



Model, Anthony Dease wears a two-piece sandalwood painters' suit complemented by a multi-colored brown, orange, yellow and green tie-shirt and rust colored shoes. The outfit was especially made for Dease from a Vogue pattern originally created for women. Background is new Morgan State College Student Union. (Reflections Photo by Benjamin M. Phillips IV)

IN EASTERN REGION ...

Iotas form first undergraduate chapter

By Michele L. McRae
AFRO Staff Writer

Seven young women on the campus of the Community College of Baltimore recently were admitted into the pledge club of Iota Phi Lambda Sorority, Inc.

Under the advisorship of Mrs. Fannie B. Poulson, eastern region director of the national organization, the coeds became the first undergraduate group in the eastern region.

The Lomepas is the name given to them and they wear it proudly.

Organized for several weeks now, the Lomepas are headed by Carla Walker who serves as president of the club. She told this writer, "One of Iotas main objectives is to promote interest in business education among high school and college girls through planned programs and scholarships. Therefore, the Lomepas pledge group has decided to carry on their ideals and purposes."

Other members include Evelyn Harvey, Florence Kittrell, treasurer; Catherine Edwards, Stephanie Thompson, Frances Belton and Joyce Morton, secretary.

Fund-raising activities being sponsored by the group include a raffle ticket drawing with three cash prizes and a cabaret social. The cabaret will be hosted on Jan. 31 at the Alpha Frat House, Clifton and Ellamont Sts., 10 p.m.-2 a.m. Tickets may be purchased from any one of the members or bought at the ticket office located at the Community College of Baltimore beginning Jan. 27.

Proceeds will benefit Iotas scholarship fund for students of CCB.

The pledge season, which lasts only 90 days, will end for the women on Feb. 6 when they will be initiated into the sorority.

Baltimore Iota Phi Lambda Sorority, Kappa chapter, headed by Mrs. Blanche Pettiford, is also busy this season preparing to host the sorority's week-long national convention here in August at the Hunt Valley Inn.

The sorority was founded in Chicago in June, 1929, by Mrs. Lola M. Parker and six other women, all of whom were engaged in the field of business.

In addition to promoting interest in business education, the organization seeks to unite in a sisterhood qualified business and professional women; to organize chapters where a sufficient number of qualified women reside; to encourage a development of personalities for all areas of leadership and the provision of educational activities, opportunities and facilities for its members.

It also strives to establish or promote non-profit civic and social service activities for community benefits.

Through the years Iota Phi Lambda Sorority, Inc. has been recognized as an important national organization which stimulates young women to qualify for the many challenges offered by increased employment opportunities.

It is also recognized as an organization of competent women holding prominent positions in, or operating, businesses that are financially satisfying and invaluable to community progress.

The group has also been noted as a national organization whose members have a major interest in the economic and cultural progress of all women.

The sorority has more than 2,000 members and has been established in more than 85 cities, representing 30 states, the District of Columbia, and Bangalore in South India.

Iota Phi Lambda is affiliated with the National Council of Negro Women, Inc., National Urban League, the NAACP, the Leadership Conference for Civil Rights and the Conference on Human Rights.

"One of Iotas main objectives is to promote interest in business education among high school and college girls through planned programs and scholarships. Therefore, the Lomepas pledge group has decided to carry on their ideals and purposes."
