Morgan offers history on TV

"We are ecstatic about the initial responses," said Mary Ann Franklin, Assistant Dean of the College of Morgan State College, as she described a new program of outreach on television.

Beginning February 8, the College will offer its pioneering "The 'Negro' in United States History — An Afro-American Approach" on WBAL-TV twice each week. The Course, which has been available to Morgan students for at least a half-century is being prepared in an interdisciplinary television format so that students throughout the state of Maryland will be able to take the course for three college credits. Another unique innovation of the course is the use of more than twenty scholars, many of them internationally famous, who will serve as "Visiting Professors" each week.

The Course will begin on Channel 11 on February 8, and be viewed each Saturday and Sunday mornings from 8:00 to 8:30 until May 18. Examinations will be held during the regular period of examination week, May 14-21.

The Coordinators producing the television course are two MSC faculty members, Thomas Cripps, Ph.D., Professor of History, who has developed similar series for Westinghouse Broadcasting and other stations throughout the nation, and Mrs. Jannette Dates M.Ed., who has produced Black History programs for the Baltimore City Schools and for the long - running WBAL-TV program, "North Star."

James Lewis, director of the Morgan State College art gallery, Clifton Cox, floor director, Joe Sullivan, technical director, Jan Dates and Dr. Thomas Cripps, co-producer of the pioneering TV series "The 'Negro' in United States History — An Afro-American approach".

Among the distinguished authors in the series are Professors Benjamin Quarles, Howard Bell, Roland McConnell, George Sinkler, Philip Butcher, and G. James Fleming.

Creative artists and musicologists include James Lewis, Calvin Lampley, and Nathan Carter of Morgan. In addition to other Morgan faculty, the series will feature Professors Franklin Knight of The Johns Hopkins University; Bettye Thomas of the University of Maryland in Baltimore County; Bettye Gardner of Coppin State, and Jean Scarpaci of Towson State.

Three-hour career special on Channel 67

Careers Ahead, a live special focusing on six major career fields, will air Monday, January 20 from 8 to 11 p.m. on channels 67, 73 in the Metropolitan Baltimore area, channel 28 in Salisbury, and channel 31 in Hagerstown — stations of the Maryland Center for Public Broadcasting.

During the three-hour special, Maria Broom, head of the Eyewitness News public defender unit, will interview experts from the fields of sales, military service, and construction in an effort to inform young people about current and projected career opportunities. In addition to Ms. Broom, Mac McGary of "It's Academic" program will moderate discussions in the fields of health, government, and industry.

Julio Leto, Clarence Reynolds, Earl Cooper, Wilbur McKinley and Andre Teasdale from Dunbar High School will appear on the program, titled Careers Ahead, to discuss the problems young people face in seeking work as they complete high school or college. Experts representing the business and industrial community will provide straight answers to the students' questions.

The three-hour special is divided into six subject areas, as follows: Health, sales, government, military, industry, and construction.

The program is aimed at both young people about to enter the job market and also adults with responsibility for guiding toward career decisions.

Dr. Cook becomes Dillard president

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Dr. Samuel DuBois Cook, former professor of political science at Duke University, has assumed the presidency of Dillard University. Dr. Cook was named president of the 105-year-old liberal arts college last March.

The Griffin, Ga., native had been on the Duke faculty since 1966 when he was named associate professor of political science. He also served as director of undergraduate studies in political science at Duke.

Dr. Cook earned his bachelor's degree from Morehouse College and his masters and doctor of philosophy from the Ohio State University. He has also done post-doctoral study in philosophy.

Dr. Cook's professional experience includes serving as associate professor of political science at Southern University in Baton Rouge, and as professor of political science and chairman of the department of political science at Atlanta University.

He also served as a visiting professor at the University of Illinois and the University of California at Los Angeles.

From 1969 to 1971, Dr. Cook was a program officer in higher education research for the Ford Foundation.

ANNAPOLIS — Judical, juvenile and scholarship reform are in the making.

There will also be a public prosecutor's office responsible for investigating cases dealing with political corruption. The prosecutor would be appointed by and answerable only to him.

So said Gov. Marvin Mandel, today (Friday). He was giving his State of the State address before the General Assembly here.

The governor also presented a proposed $3.1 billion budget. He explained it would be financed through $1,654,000 in general funds, $793 million in special funds; $699 million in federal funds.

A capital budget of $83 million was also outlined.

The governor, who begins a second four year term struck a sombre but optimistic note amidst pomp and ceremony, during his inaugural address Wednesday. Over 1,000 persons sat in the cold, brisk January air to hear the governor's message and later jammed the halls of the State House for the public reception held in the old Senate Chamber.

The state's chief executive cited the horrors of Watergate, inflation, cynicism and pessimism, which he said seems to have enveloped the state and the country.

He said, "Truly the past few years have been filled with disappointment, bitterness, treachery, arrogance, abuse of privilege and trust—all at the highest levels of our government, all by a handful of narrow men who place their own survival above the nation's.

* * *

The governor also pledged himself to rise above the pessimism and paralysis which has struck so much of the government and urged the people of Maryland to do the same.

He pledged: "I stand before you as one who will not be shaken by distrust, who will not be reduced to inaction by the current notion that are too weak of will, too sick of spirit to endure and to conquer the problems before us.

"Though the future is uncertain and unknown, the lessons of the past teach that we have the strength and the courage to meet and test, to face and adversity that challenges us as people.

"Will we give up now? I don't think so."

Another highlight of this week's General Assembly activities was the speech by Del. Arthur G. Murphy Jr. (D.-41). The occasion was the annual message to the House commemorating the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Speaking from the podium, Del. Murphy said: "Forty-six years ago, a man was born in the cradle of segregation, reared in its ever present shadow and deprived of the opportunities that were supposed to be guaranteed to all men under our constitution.

"Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., was a dreamer of dreams, a holder of reality and one who thought that in America, all things are possible if we only believe. His belief was that all people must work together to make equality a reality.

"Let us also remember his ideals, his philosophy and the things for which he stood. Therefore, today let us rededicate ourselves to the task of helping to make this great state the first to reach the mountain top in the achievement of equality and dignity for all men through the use of the democratic process."

His 140 fellow members of the House gave him a standing ovation as he stepped from the podium.

Del. Kenneth L. Webster (D.-41st) honored the late Dr. King by participating in an assembly program sponsored by the Annapolis Senior High School.

This was the first of such programs held by the well integrated high school.

Highlight of the school program was a panel discussion on the topic, "What does Dr. Martin Luther King's dream mean to me?".
