Joseph Hall named Hopkins Univ. dean

Joseph S. Hall, executive assistant to President Dr. Steven Muller at Johns Hopkins University has been named dean of students. His appointment is effective Feb. 1.

First of his race to hold the position at the University, Mr. Hall succeeds Councilman Robert J. Fitzpatrick D-2nd District, who resigned as dean of students to become president of the California Institute of the Arts.

As dean of students, Mr. Hall will work with the undergraduate and graduate students in the Division of Arts and Sciences as well as students in the Evening College.

He told the AFRO, "I hope to improve the student life at school and also support and complement the academic programs as well."

Jokingly he added, "This job will be kind of fun but it will also be a good challenge."

Mr. Hall, 40, a native Baltimorean, attended the Baltimore city schools and was a graduate of Morgan State College. He holds a master's degree in social work from Howard University.

He worked in the Baltimore Department of Social Services and held posts as community organizer, health coordinator and social services coordinator with the Model Cities Program.

In 1969, Mr. Hall joined the staff of the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions as assistant director of medical planning and development.

JOSEPH HALL

He was named executive assistant to the president in February, 1972.

Mr. Hall and his wife, Catherine, a professor of sociology and social welfare at the Community College of Baltimore, have two daughters, Adrienne, 7 and Sydney, 18 months. Another daughter, Lisa, 16, lives in California.

Special benefit for jobless

State Employment Security Administration officials expressed concern that thousands of unemployed farmers, government workers, domestic helpers and others may not be aware that they could now be eligible for special unemployment benefits.

Under recently enacted federal legislation, persons not eligible for benefits under the regular unemployment insurance program can now receive benefits provided they have earned money in at least two 3 month periods within the past 52 weeks.

Unemployed persons in the counties who think they might qualify are urged to contact their nearest Employment Security office.

Residents of Baltimore City and Howard County can apply at a special office which has been opened just for special claims located in the Metro Plaza (formerly the Sears building) in the Mondawmin Mall, Liberty Heights Avenue and Gwynn's Falls Parkway.

The telephone number for information at that location is 462-8402.

Group wants Patuxent abolished

The Maryland Coalition Against Patuxent is seeking the extinction of the 20-year-old Maryland Patuxent Institution in Jessup.

The coalition which has more than 12 established member-organizations states members plan to lobby for the abolition of the institute built to rehabilitate "defective delinquents."

According to the coalition the institute's indeterminate sentences constitute cruel and unusual punishment and effectively grant the institute's officials the power to hold inmates for life.

They argue that the term "defective delinquent" is a vague, overly broad label without scientific validity and has been applied to only males in Maryland.

YOU and YOUR welfare

By Rudell Martin

This is a new column designed to inform readers of welfare policies. Ms. Rudell Martin, director of the Baltimore Welfare Rights Organization, welcomes questions concerning welfare problems.

Aside from answering questions, Ms. Martin will give comments to keep you abreast of any policies and revisions made concerning you and welfare.

I want to take this opportunity to thank the many readers who have responded to our column. The mail has been fantastic. We have received many letters asking us to explain the "Emergency Assistance Program."

In this article I will try to explain what is meant by the term "emergency assistance" and what the program is about.

The Department of Social Services defines an emergency as a requirement for financial, or in-kind, service to avoid a situation of destitution and/or lack of adequate living arrangements as a result of:

1. The lack of food, shelter, necessary fuel prior to determining eligibility for continuing assistance.

2. Disaster such as fire, flood, tornadoes, civil disorders, theft of possessions or money or situations specifically authorized by the Department of Social Services.

3. The complete breakdown of essential appliances and furnishings for those receiving assistance.

4. The lack of essential appliances and furnishings when meeting such needs will: (a) resolve or prevent a crisis in the living arrangements of public assistance recipients. (b) make it possible to establish a home in order to get children out of the Department of Foster Care.

5. Eviction in the form of physical put-out or issuance of a court-order directing the tenant, (applicant for emergency grant), to yield and render up possessions to the landlord.

6. Being stranded away from home.

Each local department must establish an administrative plan for handling and processing a request for emergency assistance. Most of these requests are made by people already receiving a grant because of one of the defined emergencies when they are without resources to meet it.

A request for emergency assistance shall be dealt with promptly to assure that the need is met as quickly as possible with recognition that some kinds of emergencies require more immediate action than others.

The limit for the decision is the same as any public assistance application or reconsideration thirty days unless delayed by the client, in which event a written notice at the end of thirty days explains what is needed to reach a decision.

If eligible, the written notice shall include information as to amount and what items are included. If the request is denied, the notice includes information about how the client may appeal to the State Department. I hope that this article has enlightened our readers. If not, please feel free to visit our office Monday through Friday, 8:30 to 4:30.

Court halts referral agency's operation in license case

Circuit Court Judge Joseph C. Howard has ruled that all rental referral agencies operating in Maryland be licensed.

The decision which was handed down in favor of the Maryland Real Estate Commission against Renton, Inc., also known as Ron Phares ended a year and half legal battle between the commission and the company.

Judge Howard said the decision was based on Article 56 of the Annotated Code of Maryland, Section 212 (a) which defines a real estate broker as "any person . . . who aids, attempts or offers to aid, for a fee, any person in locating or obtaining for purchase or lease, any residential real estate."

Donal J. Miller, associate director of BNI, Monday said "I am asking the Maryland Real Estate Commission to investigate and issue a cease and desist order against Rentals Unlimited located at 3349 Greenmount Ave., a new agency, until such time that they are licensed and comply with the law."

Return to femininity

"One of the most impressing designers in the show was Gayle Kirkpatrick . . . his cultural exchange collection features outfits we all can relate to."

By Marie P. Cooke
AFRO Women's Editor

NEW YORK — Three days in the big city — the fashion capital of the world. What fashion-conscious woman wouldn't want to experience 72 hours seeing many of the top designers spring outfits.

This writer along with AFRO fashion photographer, Benjamin M. Phillips were among the visiting press who attended the 64th Semi-annual press showings sponsored by the New York Couture Business Council.

Designs by famous names like Teal Traina, Genre, Bill Tice, Stan Herman, Fire Islander, Jaeger, just to name a few, were among those who participated. At times, the designer, himself, was present to greet the visiting editors.

Well, it certainly appears that the fashion designers finally got word that the American economy is sagging. They are now cutting corners. Shoppers will not find "big droops" on the racks come next season — nicely tailored-look outfits will hang with price tags showing a slight increase in price. Many prices will remain constant.

This is International Women's Year and the designers are carrying out the theme with hemlines that reflect the utmost in femininity. Dresses end just below the knee. Others feature mid-calf lengths.

The fabric designers certainly deserve a hand — they, too, have added to the look with soft cosmetic colors and easy-to-wear fabrics. Two popular shades next season are pale green and shrimp. There are also a variety of soft pinks and blues and a few greys.

Gayle Kirkpatrick

One of the most impressing designers in the show was Gayle Kirkpatrick who designs for Tudor Square. His styles simply go without saying — they were "out-of-sight" (putting it in down-home terms).

Mr. Kirkpatrick's cultural exchange collection features outfits we all can relate to with nice little peasant tops done in natural muslin, to draw string pants and daytime shirt dresses ... his collection is a far cry from the old days when a new Spring outfit meant red, white and blue, or a pastel-checked "Easter suit."

His passport poplins ... water-proof gear for all climates and the answer to year-round travel. His poplin group features a ¾ travel coat with zippered pockets for storing personal gear, the belted trench jacket, full circle skirts, unlined capes and the "Wind-Breaker."

Desert song ... imported tent stripes in cotton, North African in feeling. This group highlights the "wrapper" ... tent tops ... terrace skirts ... fringed shawls ... black silky sweater sets.

A group he calls the Columbian naturals is a look crafted in polished cotton muslin with peasant embroidery, natural denim of 100 per cent cotton. Among these greats are the planter's coat ... the peasant wedding shirt ... tenty tucked tops ... embroidered and fringed shawls.

On top ... with his Tudor Square Sportswear collection, Gayle features the Albert Lewis shirt line. Pretty shirts, slick little shirts, in florals, abstracts, stylized florals, pointillist prints. The fabrics are soft, soft, soft — chiffon, crepe de chine, jersey.

Marie P. Cooke

"Women are not going to buy the same old classic looks. They already have more than enough of that in their wardrobes. What they will buy is something new, something that's been given a new treatment, interpreted in a new way. This was my aim in this collection. I think I've succeeded," says Gayle.

The all-day fair will consist of exhibits and demonstrations along with educational and informative materials at booths staffed by women from each of the participating organizations.

Eighty exhibitors are scheduled to participate in three categories including, member organizations of Women Together, state and local government agencies and commercial exhibitors.

A few of the many exhibitors expected to participate are the Diet Workshop, American Cancer Society, where individuals may secure a free breast cancer testing; Planned Parenthood, Hutzler's and the Urban League.

Purposes of the organization are:

To act as a clearinghouse for the Baltimore metropolitan area with regard to legislative and community projects;

To increase each other's awareness of women's social action organizations now active in community and public affairs;

To learn about the endeavors and activities of each organization and to avoid duplication of effort in areas of common concern;

To become more sharply aware of the role of women in society and the need to develop a unified approach to problems and to unify and lend strength to one another where we have mutual goals, still retaining the character and autonomy of the individual groups.
