Court consolidation might hurt - Dixon

(AFRO Bureau)

ANNAPOLIS — Chief Judge of the Md. Court of Appeals, Robert C. Murphy has proposed the consolidation of the circuit courts of Md. under the state government.

However, some black persons contend this move could be detrimental to the future of black judges in Baltimore City and across the state.

Under the consolidation plan judges from the circuit courts might have to run statewide for election.

Del. Isaiah "Ike" Dixon (D-38) of Baltimore City said, "I take exception to a unified circuit system, unless there is a quota system for minority judges. I hope the task force will take that into consideration."

Judge Murphy lists among his reasons for calling for court consolidation, "Extreme disparities in resources available to these courts."

Further, he claims, fiscal resources and budgetary policies of local jurisdictions have such varying effects on the ability of the trial courts to perform their functions adequately."

He has called for a task force to develop a "blueprint for consolidation."

Judge Hammerman wants experience in other courts

"I have been toying with the idea for several years. I love the work here and tend to let it ...

I love the work here and hope to return here. I intend to remain very active in the juvenile field."

Juvenile Court Chief Judge Robert I. H. Hammerman made the above statement to the AFRO concerning his leaving the Juvenile Court.

Judge Hammerman says the Juvenile Court is his "first love." However, he wants to have a few years sitting in other courts and "become much more rounded as a judge and then return to Juvenile Court."

Commissioner Pomerleau recently condemned Juvenile Court and the Department of Juvenile Services for not adequately taking care of the rise in juvenile crime.

Judge Hammerman told the AFRO, his leaving Juvenile Court has "nothing at all" to do with the statement made by Commissioner Pomerleau.

Judge Hammerman, who says he is "a very young 46" has been in Juvenile Court eight years. Prior to that, he served in the District Court for six years.

The Supreme Bench judges rotate every September with the exception of the Juvenile Court judge. According to Judge Hammerman, he will be president in Juvenile Court until September.

"The Supreme Bench has not decided how to treat this with my moving out," said Judge Hammerman.

Judge Hammerman was on the 1971 AFRO Honor Roll for his unprecedented action taken in regard to Juvenile detention centers long needing attention in this city.

Restriction on write-in may be unconstitutional

By Angela Chatman
(AFRO Bureau)

ANNAPOLIS — Sen. Joseph S. Bonvegna's bid to restrict write-in candidacies may be unconstitutional.

This was revealed Thursday by Willard Morris, state administrator of the Board of Elections, in a hearing on Bonvegna's bill before the Senate Constitutional and Public Law Committee.

Morris said that the Assistant Attorney General has said that you can't deny anyone the right to vote for the person of his choice.

When this was revealed, it was agreed that the bill should be held over and a new one introduced.

* * *

Supporting the bill, which would prohibit candidates who lost in a primary from running as write-ins in the general election, are members of Baltimore City's Board of Supervisors of Elections.

Here to testify in favor of the bill were president of the board, John C. Donahue and Chief Clerk Frank McQuade.

McQuade listed as reasons for restricting write-ins the fact that only four of the eight write-in candidates in the city received the necessary one per cent of the vote; the counting of the votes was "unbelievable".

Further, he said election workers had to be given compensatory time off for working overtime; an estimated $7.50 was spent for each paper roll; that each name took up two inches on the rolls and that 5,535 votes were thrown out.

Sen. John A. Cade, (R-33), observed all the problems McQuade listed were "those of the mechanics of a write-in rather than of the candidacy."

He said, "You would have all those same problems if the candidate didn't run in the primary."

ISD investigation begins next week

By Angela Chatman
(AFRO Bureau)

ANNAPOLIS — The investigation into charges of police spying by the Baltimore City Police Department Inspectional Services Division will begin next week.

With the passing of Sen. Verda F. Welcome's Senate Resolution 1, the committee on Constitutional and Public Law is now free to carry out a full scale probe.

Sen. Welcome, who saw support for a measure that would have placed her on the committee as a voting member erole on the floor of the senate, is determined to sit in on every hearing.

When asked if she would have witnesses to bring before the committee, she said, "That's the committee's duty. But I will sit in every day as the committee meets on this."

Sen. Clarence M. Mitchell, III (D-3a), however, does intend to call witnesses before the committee. "I'm not at liberty to reveal them yet. I am in the process of contacting people, former officers end a Judge from the District Court."

"I had evidence of police interference with the judicial process."

When asked if Cong Parren Mitchell had plans to bring witnesses before the committee, Mitchell said, "I'm sure he does."

Meeting set on suspended students

Parents of students who have been suspended from school over any period of time are invited to a public meeting at the Dunbar High School complex at 11 a.m. Feb. 1.

Dr. Roland Patterson, Mayor Schaefer and Congressman Parren J. Mitchell will be present to discuss and review problems of "unwarranted arbitrary suspensions and expulsions," according to Anthony Williams, legal assistant with the Legal Aid Bureau.

States sue HEW for holding funds

National Black News Service

WASHINGTON (NBNS) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has been charged in a suit by state governments with improperly withholding funds for the program for Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

The joint suit, filed in U.S. District Court here,charges that regulations denying states funds if they make more than a permissible number of errors in their AFDC roles, are illegal and improper.

The states ask that HEW be ordered to stop enforcing the regulations approved in October under which the funds are withheld and to restore funds held up so far.

The Challenged regulations provide for and reductions for those states that fail to reduce the percentage of erroneous AFDC payments to certain levels by specific times.

The suits charges that the regulations "substantially penalize states on account of errors that are not the fault of the states, including errors that are the product of federally imposed standards."

The suit also contends that "the challenged regulations impose uniform requirements nationwide without regard to circumstances bearing on the rates of error in the AFDC programs in particular states."

It contends that the percentage of error allowed is "unreasonably low" and is "arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable and otherwise unlawful."

The Aid to Families with Dependent Children is the principal federal assistance program for the country's poorest families, and has been the target of economy efforts in both the Nixon and Ford Administrations.

Indiana inmate clubs make bicentennial plan

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. (UPI) — Indiana State Prison inmates have their own ideas about how to celebrate the U.S. Bicentennial.

At least five prison clubs have applied for and received official Indiana bicentennial endorsements for prison-based programs, including a bi-monthly "rap" session to steer youths away from drugs and trouble.

The state bicentennial commission has authorized inmate Bill Durant to do a hand-lettered replica of the Indiana constitution and J. Kunz is fashioning a bicentennial chess set, with George Washington and his wife as the white king and queen and King George III and his spouse as their counterparts in black.

The Michigan City Bicentennial Commission elicited the prison participation. Among convict organizations participating are the Friendship Stamp Club, the Braille Department, the Department of Education, the Fin and Gill Club and the Lifer's Club.

Club members worked with Del. Black, Chicago regional director of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration, and assistant prison warden Jack Duckworth in outlining their projects plans.

Prisoners also outlined a program aimed at reaching teenagers and their families in efforts to prevent the same kind of mistakes that sent the convicts to prison.

Through bi-monthly "rap" sessions and closed-circuit videotaped programs, prisoners hope to counsel youths about the perils of drug abuse, police misunderstandings and domestic problems.

Bicentennial officials believe the program is the only one of its kind involving prison inmates.

"These projects offer a positive avenue for creative self expression and foster a cooperative attitude among the inmates," Duckworth said.

"This team work can only aid in the rehabilitation of the men and improve their chances for reintegration into society by helping them to become part of the mainstream of American life," he said.
