Kwanza

Not so long ago Dolores B. Taylor recently hosted an African holiday celebration called — Kwanza. Her elegant Kennison Avenue home was the location of the affair.

Kwanza is the celebration of harvesting first fruits or crops. It is traditional in Africa. It is a time to come together to enjoy being. Each person brought something he grew or made. They sang, danced, and ate in an atmosphere of joy.

The guests who attended Mrs. Tayor's, Kwanza were gaily attired in African fashions.

Mrs. Taylor greeted her guests in a beautifully designed African Caftan of orange, red, silver, and whie designs with a matching gelee (headwrap). This was accentuated with a necklace of orange, red, and white and large hoop earrings. Her charming smile made each guest feel the warmth of her welcome as they arrived.

Her charming co-hostesses were: Thelma Tucker, Brenda Westry, and Lorraine Washington who circulated graciously among the many guests and displayed the charm of perfect hostesses.

Mrs. Taylor's elegant home was ravishly decorated with a decor of turquoise and white. All around were signs and symbols of Africa including — Swahilic phrases and translations. On the white linen embroidered dining tablecloth were delicacies that suited the occasion — a green bundt cake with "Kwanza" written on it, horn-of-penlty with goodies, nuts, home-made cookies, miniature home-made and jeweled fruitcakes.

A booklet of African history was handed the guests. It contained something about the celebration of Kwanza, African girls' names and African boys' names. Each guest selected an African name for the evening.

The guests were then taken to the elaborately decorated club room where the feast was to take place. Here the guests had a chance to share their delicacies with each other. They ate, sang, and danced in an atmosphere of joy. This was done with the accompainment of African instruments bongos, kalimba, wooden sticks) that were played by each guest.

This celebration started on December 26th and continued for seven consecutive nights.

Each night had the following significance: unity, self-determination, collective work and responsiblity, cooperative economics, purpose, creativity and faith.
