Ali tosses ball to stars in plan to aid ghetto folk

NEW YORK (UPI) — Muhammad Ali, who has been proclaiming that he is the "champion of the people" since 1971, has put his money where his mouth has been.

Admitting that he has made all the money he ever will need, the world heavyweigh champion has announced that all his profits from his March 24 bout with Chuck Wepner will be given to the people of the ghettoes, with Atlanta, Philadelphia, Louisville and the state of Alabama the first to gain through his plan.

Coming across as a sincere philanthropist for ghetto people, Ali said that after disposing of Wepner he would be able to give $100,000 to Atlanta for a black bakery, $100,000 to Philadelphia, $100,000 to Los Angeles, with all money going into black businesses to supply jobs for blacks.

"I feel guilty about making so much money so easy," said Ali. "Now I'm going to spread it around."

Ali then "invited" other entertainers to join him in the crusade. He cited among others Sammy Davis, Lena Horne, Flip Wilson and Bill Cosby and introduced the Jackson Five as the first group which will go along with the program as soon as they can make arrangements with their manager.

Ali said his plan is to allocate his guaranteed money to himself with TV money from closed circuit showings going to various black organizations in the cities where they are shown.

He mentioned groups such as the Urban League, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Muslims and the black colleges.

Alimony lag jails Davis ex-Dodger

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Willie Davis, a $130,000-a-year baseball player, was sentenced Tuesday to five days in jail for failure to pay support to his divorced wife and three children.

Davis, a fleet outfielder who started in 1960 with the Los Angeles Dodgers in the majors, was held in contempt of court by Commissioner Philip Erbsen because he did not pay stipulated support of $1,750 a month to his ex-wife and children from Sept. 1, 1974 to Jan. 1, 1975.

Erbsen originally sentences the 34-year-old Davis to 90 days in jail but suspended 85 davis on condition he serve five days and make alimony and support payments.

Court records show that Davis, who was traded by the Dodgers to Montreal, now earns $110,000 a year with the Texas Rangers.

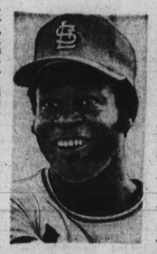
Davis and his ex-wife, Geanna, were divorced in January, 1974.

Brock parlays thievery into top Card salary

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Lou Brock, the base-stealing king of baseball, signed a 1975 contract that, at about $170,000, makes him the highest paid member of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Pitcher Bob Gibson had been at the top of the club's payroll with a salary of $160,000. Gibson took a cut for his final season this year.

General Manager Bing Devine Tuesday confirmed that Brock has become the team's highest paid player, but refused to name the figure. However, the amount is reported to be around $170,000.



Lou Brock baserunning pays off

Brock, who set a major league record last season by stealing 118 bases, now has a total of 753 steals — more than anybody else who ever played in the National League. He has led the majors in steals six seasons and has stolen 50 or more bases the last 10 seasons.

Brock, the Card's left-fielder, hit .306 last season and led the team in hits, runs and at-bats. He scored more than 100 runs for the sixth time in his career.

SCHOLAR-ATHLETE — One of the five finalists of the competition for the top award at the Scholar-Athlete dinner last week was Charles Johnson of Southwestern High School. An A 11-State and All-Metro tackle-guard and academically placed in the top ten percent of his class, Johnson was among 77 youngsters who vied for the honor, won by Michael Finley of Arundel High.

Ron Lyle admits foe was better

HONOLULU (UPI) — A disappointed but not despondent Ron Lyle said Tuesday he had fought a good fight against Philadelphia's Jimmy Young, "but he fought a better one."

Underdog Young took a unanimous 10-round decision from the No. 3 ranking heavyweight at the Honolulu International Center. Young called for a match with Jerry Quarry.

"A title fight with Muahmmad Ali is still my goal," Lyle said, "and maybe Ali won't be so afraid of me now after he reads about tonight's fight."

Lyle's loss was only the second in 32 fights.

FEBRUARY 75 (YOUR NAME) TWO HUNDRED AND 00/100 $200.00

Only Ford offers these small car advantages:
• Mustang II outsells Monza, Starfire and Skyhawk combined ... one reason might be its base sticker price which starts hundreds of dollars lower than those cars even before rebates.*
• Mustang II offers four great models to choose from including the luxurious Mustang II Ghia ... our competitors each only offer one model.
• Maverick 2-Door's base sticker price is lower than all other American compacts*—even before any rebate ... Maverick is America's best-selling 4-door family compact—outselling Nova, Valiant, Dart and all the other 4-doors in its class.
• Maverick 4-Door two, three and four-year-old models return more of their original sticker price than Nova, Valiant or Dart.
• Pinto—America's best-selling subcompact is sticker priced lower than the base VW 110 in most areas or a comparably equipped Vega.*
• Pinto one and two-year-old models return more of their original sticker price than Vega and VW Super Beetle.
*Comparisons of sticker prices including destination charges, not including dealer prep charges on the Ford and Volkswagen products and gasoline charges on Ford products which may affect comparisons in some areas.
Based on comparisons of NADA February, 1975, national average trade-in values.

Only Ford offers all these rebate features:
• Rebates are on '75s best-selling line-up of small cars. $500 on Mustang II Ghias and Mach 1's. $350 on SuperCab pickups. $300 on Mustang II hardtops and 2+2's. $200 on Mavericks and Pintos.
• Rebates can be applied toward your down payment.
• No complicated details like weekly cut-offs and trade-in requirements.
• No factory limit on the number of vehicles you can buy or lease from your local Ford Dealer.
• Ten models to choose from—plus the SuperCab—the only pickups with a rebate offer good from now until February 28.
• Ford rebates cover new '75 models sold and delivered between now and February 28.

1,000 worshippers attended founder's day services

Founder's Day was observed last Sunday at Douglas Memorial Community Church, Madison and Lafayette Ave., where the Rev. Dr. Marion C. Bascom is pastor.

There were 1,000 worshippers who attended the services. The church was originally named Cosmopolitan Church. Later the name was changed to Douglas Memorial Community Church.

The Rev. Frederick Douglas was the founder, with the first services being held in the basement of the old Shiloh Baptist Church on George St. It later moved to a theatre on Pennsylvania Ave. until the building became too small to house the growing congregation.

On August 10, 1925, the old Army Post Building, 1112 Madison Ave., was purchased for $35,000. The church later moved to the present building which was purchased for $87,000.

The Rev. Darneau V. Stewart of Detroit, Michigan was the speaker for the 8:30 and 11 a.m. services. Mrs. Emily Bryant presided at the 8:30 services and served as co-chairman.

Mrs. Muriel Fulton, chairman of Founder's Day, presided at the 11 a.m. services. Mrs. Fulton stated, "In 1925 the people had a mind to work and in 1975, the good people of Douglas Memorial Community Church are still working."

Members of the 1955 Douglas High School graduating class attended the 11 a.m. services. Certificates were presented to all members who have attended the church for 50 years.

Honored members were Mesdames Marie Jones, Muriel Fulton, Edith Dun Moodie, Frances Lockwood, Elsie Griffin, Viola Jones and Sophia Brown.

Other honored members were Walter Jones, Mesdames Ethel Barthcroe, Ellen Boykins, Eva Brown, Rachel Ryrd, Catherine Carroll, Margaret G. Cepha, Georgianna M. Chester, Margaret Cromwell, Fellie Derby, Nancy Fibley, Grace Giles, Grace Halstead, Hattie Lockett, Violet M. Marshburn, Mamie Queen, Elizabeth B. Telly, Hazel Turner and Catherine M. Wilson.

Also, Mesdames Bertha W. Cross, Margurite Crigler, Titus Cole, Fannie E. Jackson, Edythe Burke, Ethel R. Payne, Ruth Gray.

Mrs. Edna Owens, Sadie P. Brooks, Edythe M. Blake, Elenor Barrett, Rose Barnet, Nettie Davis, Blanche S. Day, Amanda Figgs, Elizabeth Larkins, Pearl Hall, Juanita Young, Eliza Roberts, Edna Scott and Emily Bryant.

The Rev. Dr. Bascom stated, "I rejoice greatly entering into celebration with you the people of God.

"As we pause to remember on the occasion of the 50th year of the founding of Douglas Memorial Community Church, how good it is to remember. It is a long way from a borrowed church basement to a theatre on the Avenue to a refurbished Elks Hall to our present home. The Rev. Dr. Bascom has been pastor of the church for 25 years.

THE STATE OF THINGS

Justice in the schoolhouse

By Don and Val Hymes

Every day new episodes of juvenile crime shock and sicken the community.

Every year a national poll shows that the public's greatest concern about the schools is "discipline."

And every time a court decides a case involving young people, it gives them more and more the rights of adults.

All of this may sound contradictory, but it's a fact of life. Recent decisions merely build on the position laid out in 1969 when the Supreme Court decided in favor of demonstrating students in the landmark Tinker case: young people do not "shed their constitutional rights" at the schoolhouse door.

The latest example came three weeks ago as the Supreme Court ruled that students are entitled to a "hearing" before they can be suspended from school. The howl that followed may have been more symbolic than substantive.

* * *

The decision evoked immediate images of a judge's bench in every cafeteria and optional black robes for principals. But all the court was trying to say was that before a youngster is booted out of school, the principal must tell him, informally will do, what he is accused of and ask him what he has to say for himself.

In other words, all it called for was common decency, something most principals already practice without a court order.

As it is, the Maryland law requires a considerable amount of "due process" for suspended students. It doesn't explicitly call for a hearing before suspension, but it does mandate a conference with student and parents "promptly." The Supreme Court felt more formal proceedings were necessary for suspensions longer than 10 days. Maryland law requires them after five days.

* * *

The dissent, written by Virginia's Lewis F. Powell, objected mainly to the involvement of the high court in such matters. "The decision," he wrote, "unnecessarily opens avenues for judicial intervention in the operation of our public schools that may affect adversely the quality of education."

To which many citizens of both the north and the south might respond, "So what else is new?"

And speaking both of intervention and suspension, how about the war between HEW and Anne Arundel County over allegations that discipline there is influenced by the pupil's race?

* * *

The courts have already ruled that students are allowed to "protest" in school as long as they do not disrupt, that police may not search their lockers without a warrant, that dress and grooming codes are illegal, and that freedom of the press is theirs to enjoy as long as they don't publish obscenity or libel.

That last decision, by a federal Appeals Court on a Montgomery County case, insisted that there is an "intolerable danger" that school officials might use the guise of "vague labels" of obscenity or libel "to unconstitutionally choke off criticisms, either of themselves or of school policies . . . That they may not do." The final word on that question is expected from the Supreme Court soon on an Indiana case.

While the young people are being granted more and more freedom, the public cries for "discipline," a euphemism not unlike that strident call for "law and order" a few years ago.

* * *

So deploring "permissiveness," the General Assembly greeted the State Board of Education's ban on corporal punishment by allowing individual boards to reinstate it if they wanted. In the last three years, 19 counties have done it, but fortunately for the younger generation, the five holdout nonviolent school systems contain most of the state's kids: Montgomery, Prince George's, Baltimore and Howard Counties and Baltimore City.

"Corporal punishment," as forbidding as it sounds, means no more than paddling, a ritualistic exercise designed more to frighten than to maim. Principals won't hit big boys or any girls, so the victims are usually small boys. Hardly justice in action, but its reappearance on the books shows how desperately the community wants to deal with young hoodlums.

* * *

But meanwhile the last decade nationally has seen students increasingly being involved in decisions affecting their own education. The State Board of Education here has mandated liberalized student rights policies, and many counties have moved in that direction.

The point to remember is that most young people are not hoodlums. They are our sons and daughters, being prepared to take their place in society as full-fledged citizens at the age of 18. These court decisions, in fact, give them no more rights than those granted in recent years to prisoners, parolees and welfare recipients.

There is no doubt that something must be done about the terrifying rise in juvenile crime, but those who expect the school to do it are only looking for a scapegoat.

What Maryland needs is an overhaul of its criminal justice system, especially where it deals with juveniles. Perhaps then the schools will be allowed to get on with the business of education.

$$ FROM AFRO READERS — Mrs. Rosalee Goines holds AFRO Charities check for $1,600, contributed by AFRO readers, and turned over to her Friday. An additional $102.86 received since the weekend will be mailed to her. Shown with Mrs. Goines are two of the children who survived fire in which 8 of her children and grandchildren died. They are Micha and Ronnell Goins, ages 9 and 11.

AFRO Charities turns over $1,600.86 to Goins family

"I just can't stop thanking everyone. I am very appreciative of the help of so many. God bless you all.

With tears of joy in her eyes, Mrs. Rosalee Goins, was accepting an AFRO Charities check for $1,600.86. The money represented funds contributed to this newspaper.

Mrs. Goins, 52-year-old mother of 11, lost 6 of her children and 2 grandchildren in a fire which razed their row house in the 2000 block Walbrook Ave. on Jan. 18, 1975.

The presentation of money from AFRO readers was made on Friday by AFRO reporter-photographer, Robert Matthews, assisted by a Seton Hill area resident, Kempa Thompson.

Mrs. Goins is temporarily living with a grown son, Leroy Goins, in the 2500 block of Park Heights Terrace in West Baltimore.

With a sigh, Mrs. Goins told the AFRO, "I hope to find a new place to live soon . . . I want to thank the AFRO Charities and the people who gave to it and those who have given us encouragement too. We are very grateful."

AFRO Charities, Inc. a non-profit subsidiary of the Baltimore AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers, undertook to be a depository for the Goins fund contributions at the request of AFRO readers who wanted to be sure their donations reached the proper hands.

In previous issues, the AFRO listed names of individuals and organizations which made contributions. Previous donations totalled $834.32. Following is the last list of contributions received through Thursday which total $1,702.86.

* * *

A check for $1,600 drawn on the AFRO Charities, Inc., Equitable Trust Bank account, was presented to Mrs. Goins at 2 p.m. on Friday. The additional $102.86 will be given her this week.
