Keep cribs on the safe side

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission has estimated that 150 to 200 infants die every year in the United States in accidents involving cribs. Another 40,000 are injured so seriously that they have to be treated by a doctor.

A new safety regulation on cribs has been developed by the Commission. It means that safer cribs have been designed and manufactured since February 1, 1974.

What are some of the important things that the new regulation says about cribs?

Crib slats must be closer together—no more than 2 3-8" apart. Babies will no longer be able to slip through the slats and possibly be strangled.

Any metal "hardware" used on the crib must be safe. For example, no rough edges are permitted. Locks and latches on the dropside of a crib must be safe and secure from accidental release or release by the baby inside the crib.

There must be strict warnings on crib's carton, assembly instructions, and headboard advising you to use only a mattress that fits snugly.

Some cribs manufactured before February 1, 1974, are still on the market. What kind of a crib should you buy? Or you may have purchased a crib before February 1, 1974; possibly you're fixing up an antique. How do you make it safe for your baby?

The Commission offers the following suggestions to parents . . .

If you're buying a new crib now:

Buy a crib with as narrow a space as possible between the slats. Take a tape measure with you when you shop.

Be sure that the mattress you buy fits the crib very snugly. If you can fit more than two fingers between the mattress and the crib, the mattress is too small.

Buy a crib with a latch or lock for the drop side that can't be easily tripped.

Buy a crib with as large a distance as possible between the top of the side rail and the mattress support. This will discourage your baby from trying to climb out. Most crib accidents occur when infants fall while climbing out of their crib.

Check the crib's metal parts and the edges of the crib frame for sharp or rough edges.

Remove all plastic packaging material and destroy it immediately.

Buy bumper pads for the crib. Make sure they (a) run around the entire crib, (b) tie or snap into place, and (c) have at least six straps. To prevent an infant from chewing on the straps (and possibly swallowing part of them), any excess length should be trimmed off. The bumpers should be used until your baby can pull up to a standing position.

If you already have a crib, or are fixing up an antique:

Check the overall condition of the crib. Is anything missing? Be sure that all slats and all bolts and other fasteners are in place. Check with the manufacturer, if possible, for replacement parts.

If you repaint or refinish the crib, only paints or finishes labeled non-toxic should be used. If the mattress does not fit the crib snugly, it would be best to replace it.

An infant can suffocate if it can wedge its head between the mattress and the crib. However, if the mattress is in good condition, you can roll up large bath towels and place them between the mattress and the crib for a tighter fit.

Bumper pads are even more important on older cribs. Many of these cribs have far too much space between the slats. As mentioned before, the bumpers should run the entire crib, tie or snap into place, and have at least six straps.

No matter what the age of your crib:

Set the mattress at its lowest position as soon as your child can pull up to a standing position.

Don't leave any toys or other articles in the crib that your child can use to help climb out.

Don't keep your child in the crib once the height of the side rail is less than three-fourths of your child's height.

Replace any damaged teething rails. They can cut your child's mouth.

The crib should not be used as a playpen.

If you put crib extenders on the side rails of your crib, they should not make the side rails taller than the end panels of the crib. The extenders should have no easily removable nuts or bolts and their slats should be narrowly spaced.

Remember: these are only precautions. Children are ingenious. There is no substitute for close parental supervision.

CCB plans program for the epileptic

The Community College of Baltimore has been awarded a special state grant which will enable it to become the first college in the nation to develop educational and counselling program for people with epilepsy, it has been announced by Dr. Harry Bard, president of the college.

The grant was awarded the Maryland State Department of Education's Division of Vocational-Technical Education and approved by the Baltimore City Board of Estimates.

The initial funding of $15,562 is for the rest of this school year for a planning phase to map out a college program to meet the vocational and education needs of people with epilepsy.

CCB would then be in line to receive an additional grant of $43,440 to be awarded June 30 to implement the program during the 1975-76 school year.

Week's food economies

It is getting near Easter holidays and eggs are for Easter, says Virginia McLuckie, food economist, Cooperative Extension Service, University of Maryland.

Eggs at Easter are symbolic, they mean new life, a new beginning and spring. Eggs mean fun and frolic with Easter baskets and egg hunts for the youngsters. No self-respecting Easter basket would dare show itself without "real" eggs. When coloring eggs, you may wish to use the white shells to get clear bright colors.

Brown and speckled shells are best suited for use with decals, transfers and for decorating with crayons, pencils or paint brushes. Some people refer to "blow" the insides from the egg and decorate the shells so they can remain on disply or hang on branches to make an egg tree for the holiday period.

Purchase Grade A eggs for hard cooking so the top quality well centered yolks can be used attractively once the colored shell is removed. Buy the size most economically priced. If there is less than eight cents difference between large and medium size eggs, the large size is the best buy.

To hard cook, place the eggs in a pan and cover with cold water to about one inch above the eggs. Simmer, do not boil, for 15 to 30 minutes, according to the number of eggs being cooked. Cool quickly and thoroughly in cold water.

If shells are not broken or cracked, hard cooked eggs may be kept up to one week in the refrigerator. Plan to use the cooked eggs in meals and for snacks as they are excellent protein food and with the cost of food, utilize every purchase.

This week's best buy list contains white potatoes, onions, celery, lettuce, pears, apples, juice oranges, frozen orange juice, corn, lima beans, peas and canned green beans, cranberry products, dried raisins and prunes. Beef roasts, ground beef and chicken are suggested meat buys.

Egg Cutlets

Three tablespoons butter, four tablespoons flour, one cup milk, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon paprika, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one teaspoon grated onion, one teaspoon chopped parsley, bread crumbs, dash nutmeg, eight hard cooked fresh eggs.

Make a sauce of the butter, flour and milk. Add seasonings and the eggs coarsely chopped. Cool and shape into cutlets. Dip in flour, egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat (360-390 degrees F.) until golden brown. Drain on brown paper and serve as a main dish.

Serves 6 to 8.
