Lemons, oranges, watermelons show decrease in price this week

Food shoppers are in for a pleasant surprise this week provided they are looking for good buys for Fla. oranges, lemons, watermelons, corn, medium Grade A eggs and calves liver. All of these market items have decreased in price since last week, says Helen Huber, marketing specialist at the Department of Agriculture in Annapolis.

AFRO readers are encouraged to review the Baltimore Retail Food Price Report BEFORE leaving for the grocery store. This report is intended to alert readers as to how much they will be paying for market items. It is a public service to this newspaper.

Business, industry fields Profitable for blacks

By Cynthia K. Grandison
Reflecto[illegible]

June [illegible] graduates as themselves, "Where will I work? What will I do with the knowledge I [illegible]"

They wonder if the economic status will worsen or improve.

In a speech given March 3 to student teachers of Coppin State College, James Thornton, career and placement director said: "You may not get the type of job you want and you may have to work much harder to find one, but the outlook isn't as bad as it might be."

Profitable fields

The most lucrative fields for blacks was the subject of this reporter's interview with Mr. Thornton.

Engineering, business administration, accounting, and sales were among the particulars named. Generally, these fall under the broad topics: science, chemistry, biology and math as areas where blacks can excell and secure stable jobs.

For a long time, blacks did not get into these areas which accounts for the present day openings. Business and industry now want to employ competent blacks before they are forced to. To date, a large percent have been forced.

"The government acplays a valuable role hecording to Mr. Thornton, cause "if they had not stepped in . . . we wouldn't have had as many people in the positions they now occupy."

Mr. Thornton sees computer maintenance and sales as an up-and-coming field.

"Sales is really one of the most lucrative fields for anyone," he added.

There are no restrictions as far as a college graduate's major area of study is concerned. Computer manufacturers will train their employees, all they require is a college degree.

Pharmaceutical sales is also wide open. This job involves selling medicine to doctors and nurses. In addition to commission, some companies will provide an expense account and sales vehicle. Depending on the company, one might earn in the neighborhood of $[illegible],000 a year.

In the mathematics area, accounting and accounting positions are available. Devising pension and sick leave insurance plans are two examples of what an accuturary does. A salary of $[illegible]0 a year is not uncommon.

Electrical and mechanical engineering are excellent fields. Designing electrical systems, working with diesel engines and cars are the basics of these occupations.

Safeguard yourself

As a career and placement officer, Mr. Thornton's function is to help students in their early years to get ideas of what opportunities there are in the career they are pursuing. He counsels when necessary and tries to find employment for seniors by bringing recruiters on campus.

"My hope is that we are able to do more [illegible] of workshops, seminars, more practice with resumes and interviewing and experience tests."

Coppin's workshops have involved the Youth Motivation Task Force which consists of 17 people representing the National Alliance of Businessmen.

[illegible] visit colleges and hold [illegible] about their experiences. Past sessions were very productive and Mr. Thornton hopes that the alumni will become involved.

Whether you be in high school or college, consider taking a business related course. Typing, accounting, bookeeping, shorthand are all good skills to know. Not only will they help you secure future employment in hard times, but, they are useful in everyday tasks.
