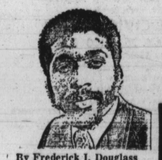
For The Record
Horace Silver



By Frederick I. Douglass

Horace Silver, one of the dominant jazz pianists for nearly a quarter of a century, currently has two excellent albums on the market: "Silver 'n Brass," a musical tribute to the late great Duke Ellington; and "Horace Silver," which is part of the Blue Note Re-Issue Series.

Both albums are on the Blue Note recording label, a company that has pioneered in recording jazz artists and that has provided a sterling setting for the Silver sound during his more than twenty years of recording on the label. The two albums combined provide an illustrative history of where Silver started on his musical career, the path that he followed and where he is now. Both records are of interest to the jazz aficianado who has been a fan of Silver for a decade or two as well as the cat who has just had his coat pulled about Silver's keyboard wizardry.

The Blue Note collection of Silver begins in 1953 with "Opus De Funk" which features Art Blakey on drums and Percy Heath on bass. The collection then jumps to 1957 when Silver recorded "Home Cookin'" with Art Farmer, trumpet; Hank Mobley, sax; and Louis Hayes, drums.

Other selections from the 50s include "Cookin" at the Continental" and "Peace," featuring Blue Mitchell, trumpet; Junior Cook, sax; Gene Taylor, bass and Louis Hayes, drums. These tunes were selected from albums that Silver recorded during the 50s and offer a somewhat limited perspective of how heavy he was jamming during those halcyon days.

Silver's playing during the 60s is represented by such tunes as "Song For My Father," "Strollin'," "Cape Verdean Blues," "Nica's Dream," "You Gotta Take a Little Love," "Silver's Serenade," "Serenade to a Soul Sister," "Nutville," "Psychedelic Sally" and "The Jody Grind." The personnel on these recordings reads like a Who's Who of jazz and includes musicians such as Bill Cobham, Randy Brecker, Bennie Maupin, Charles Tolliver, Joe Henderson, J. J. Johnson and Stanley Turrentine to name a few. Most of these people are playing these days with people like Herbie Hancock or are leading their own groups.

The Blue Note Re-Issue of Horace Silver's Music during the decades of the 50s and 60s is fairly representative of his style during those periods. However, if you really want to get into Silver, you have to purchase "Six Pieces of Silver," "Stylings of Silver," "Serenade to a Soul Sister," "Song For My Father," "Further Explorations," "Horace-Scope," "Cape Verdean Blues," "Tokyo Blues," "Total Response," "Running of the 27th Man" and "At the Village Gate," just to name a few possibilities. Of course, you can also get into his new jam, "Silver 'n Brass."

"Silver 'n Brass" represents the realization of some things that Silver has wanted to do for many years. Silver states:

"The augmented group that is heard here represents an idea that I've wanted to bring forth for quite some time. The compositions and arrangements are written by myself, but it took some time before I found someone that I felt could orchestrate them exactly the way that I heard them without losing that Silver touch ... Wade Marcus, who arranged the horns, is that man and we have worked closely together to bring forth pure unadulterated Silver on an augmented level."

The musical collaboration of these men has produced a fine LP. My favorite cut on the album is entitled "Kissing Cousins." Also worth listening to repeatedly is "The Sophisticated Hippie," Silver's tribute to the Duke. The entire album is excellent — high grade silver encrusted with diamonds and other precious jewels.

Esther Hinds

The Baltimore Choral Arts Society will present Handel's "Messiah" in the Kraushaar Auditorium of Goucher College, Dulaney Valley Road, Towson, Maryland on Sunday, May 25th, at 7:30 p.m.

Although it is undoubtedly the best beloved and most often performed choral work in all Western musical history, the "Messiah" is rarely heard in its complete form, as it will be in this final performance of the season by the Society.

Esther Hinds soprano is one of four nationally recognized and acclaimed vocal soloists featured in the production. She was born in Barbados, W.I. and came to this country at the age of nine. She lived in Brooklyn, attended the High School of Music and Art and graduated from the Hartt College of Music of the University of Hartford, West Hartford, Connecticut.

She has performed throughout the country in both opera and oratorio productions, and has received numerous awards for her singing. Last spring, Ms. Hines appeared in the role of Ariadne in "Ariadne auf Naxos," at the American Opera Center, and last fall played "Donna Elvira in "Don Giovanni," with the New York City opera. Most recently, she has received rave notices for her portrayal of Cleopatra in the American Opera Center's new production of Samuel Barber's "Anthony and Cleopatra," under the direction of Gian Carlo Menotti.

Rev. Dr. John Bryant, 32, new pastor of Bethel AME

By Pam Widgeon

"It's good to be home," the Rev. Dr. John Richard Bryant, 32-year-old new pastor of Bethel AME Church, said Thursday.

The Rev. Dr. Bryant, a lifetime member of Bethel, was introduced last Sunday at the 11 a.m. services by Bishop Henry W. Murph, presiding bishop of the Second Episcopal District.

Bishop Murph told the 200 worshippers, "You have had some great preachers here. The pastor (the Rev. Walter T. Hildebrand) who just left was a great preacher and friend. I thought the time had come for a change at Bethel, but many of you thought different."

* * *

The presiding bishop can transfer a minister after serving one year in a church.

Bishop Murph stated, "The church needs a man who can deliver the word. He shall not be looked upon as dear John. He is a preacher and a man sent from God. Bethel will change and achieve new height under his administration."

The Rev. Dr. Bryant says he knows God wanted him to come to Bethel. Born in Baltimore, he explained when he was a child he would stand in the pulpit and pretend he was the minister.

While speaking last Sunday, there were shouts of amen and hallelujah as the Rev. Dr. Bryant told his members, "They tell us this nation is crowded. There is no room and no food. We have been taught there are too many people. We can house folk, we can feed folk, because God provides. The problem is America does not know how to share."

* * *

The Rev. Dr. Bryant graduated from Morgan State College and served two years in the Peace Corp in West Africa as a teacher.

He received his masters degree in theology from the Boston University and just earned his doctor of ministry degree from Colgate Rochester School of Divinity.

He is the son of Bishop and Mrs. Harrison J. Bryant. Bishop Bryant is the presiding bishop of the Fifth Episcopal District.

* * *

The Rev. Dr Bryant is married to Mrs. Cecelia Williams Bryant and the father of two children, Jamal, 2 and Tama Semon, 18 months old.

The Rev. Mr Hildebrand, former pastor of Bethel AME Church for seven years, has been transferred back to the church where he originally started as pastor in 1941 and is now pastor of Ward AME Church, 241 42nd St., NE, Washington.
