Clean-Up at Post Office

District Manager Warren M. Bloomberg, in a ceremony held at the Baltimore Post Office, signed a Proclamation designating last week as Spring Clean-Up Week for all post offices in the Chesapeake District.

On hand to accept the Proclamation were Captain Charles Gress and Lieutenant Robert Snyder of the Baltimore City Fire Department, which has always given complete cooperation to the fire prevention programs of the Postal Service.

In issuing the Proclamation, Mr. Bloomberg decreed that neatness, cleanliness and orderliness are not only consistent with the policies of the Postal Service, but are beneficial to the health, safety and well being of its employees.

Activities taking place for Spring Clean-Up Week in the Chesapeake District included voluntary locker clean-out by employees; a thorough clean-up of closets, basements, storage areas, grounds and walkways; fire brigade refresher training; and inspection of postal facilities by local fire department personnel.

Frontiers hear Motsay on Pre-Trial Release

Richard Motsay, Director Pre-Trial Release, supreme Bench was guest speaker at the Frontiers luncheon meeting last week.

George Carroll presided for Dale Lee, president, and John Berry introduced the speaker. Mr. Motsay reviewed the history of his Pre-Trial Release program, how it has grown and how it relieves the City Jail which is bursting at the seams.

The program now has a staff of 90 with three different offices at Baltimore City Jail, Equitable Trust Building and in Traffic Court.

Bail hearings are held at City Jail. In seven years 63,000 persons have been released on their own recognizance. Only 887 failed to show and 644 were located.

The pre-Trial Release program has saved the city $12 million, enough to buy the Orioles, said Mr. Motsay. The program is humanitarian, keeps the family together and preserves the dignity of man.

He urged the Frontiers to write the Mayor to continue the program and see that it is fully staffed. He also urged that rehabilitation become a part of the program to cut down repeats in the jail population.

And all that jazz

By Bob Matthews

There has been discussion for a long while that the big band era no longer exists. This is to say that nothing could be further from the truth.

* * *

Maynard Ferguson blasted into town last week for the Left Bank Jazz Society regular Sunday afternoon concert. The Standing Room Only sign was posted long before the concert began.

* * *

A cross-section of the audience revealed that the great preponderance of jazz lovers on hand were youthful — college age — and thoroughly receptive to the pyrotechnics of the Ferguson organization.

* * *

A pattern seemed to have evolved. The smaller combos which play LBJS draw specialized audiences, those familiar with recordings of the group, or those who may have been exposed to the individual members.

* * *

But each time a big band has been programmed at the concerts, it has drawn wall-to-wall people.

* * *

Witness the recent appearances of Stan Kenton, SRO; The Mercer Ellington Band, SRO; and so it has been for the past two years.

* * *

It goes without saying that bands of the caliber of Count Basie, Thad Jones, Mal Lewis, and others automatically draw huge crowds. Maynard Ferguson is no stranger to Baltimore. Over the past two years he has appeared in town at least five times. He has two at the Left Bank, the Hopkins Plaza Concert Series, City Fair, and at the various colleges.

* * *

It may be that the wild free-form style of the early rock groups has begun to pale.

* * *

The structure play of the big band has captured the imagination of the youth. Bear in mind that musical trends are usually set by younger audiences. The evolvement of rock, jazz-rock, folk, etc., have been thrust to the forefront, by the wild acceptance of young people.

* * *

Old-timers like to reminisce about the golden days of the big bands, but youngsters will be able to do the same a few years from now.

* * *

As to last Sunday's concert, the Ferguson group was never in finer fettle. You had only to hear their rendition of "MacArthur's Park" to realize how captivated the audience was with screeching brass of Ferguson et al.

* * *

The personnel of the group is virtually unchanged from his last few visits and I dare say the average age was under 30.

* * *

Ferguson himself, seemed in better form than I've heard him in sometime. A native Canadian, Ferguson arrived in the U.S. in 1948, where he played with bands of Boyd Raeburn and Charley Burnett before landing a seat with Stan Kenton.

* * *

Next week LBJS presents two outstanding guitarists, Barney Kessell and Herb Ellis. Both of them are alumni of Oscar Peterson Trio.

* * *

It will be trifle more subdued but promises to be a real swinging session.

Council 'E' observes 4th annual mardi gras

Urban Services Council "E" celebrated their 4th annual Community Mardi Gras at Lafayette Square. A surprising number of 1,000 people were present

There was lots of fun, food, games and activities for everyone.

The dynamic sounds of the guest group, Fabulous Friends plus One filled the air. Teens and adults came from everywhere to jam, jump and bump to the music of Capitol Punishment and the Maeconics.

Art displays by Mr. Mark Merchant from Council 'E' Cultural Art Center and a modern performance by the Little Lads almost took the show.

Booths were occupied by: Bur. of Recreation and Parks; Provident Community Mental Health Center; Dept. of Housing & Community Development, AMES Community Center and Baltimore Eat-In Program and the following Urban Services Agencies: Mobile Dental Unit, Self Help Housing, Optometric Mobile, Operation Champ, Project SAGA and Council 'D'.

Directors and other guests present were: Clement Nixon, Vernon Hutchinson, Maggie Quille, Ms. Alfreuine Brown, Ms. Toni Harker, Ms. Kitty Brody, Walter Stevens and Executive Director of Urban Services Agencies, Mr. Linwood Ivey.

The purpose of the Mardi Gras began as a result of visits made by the Council 'E' staff to resident homes and neighborhoods to inform and familiarize them as to the many services available through the city government and federally subsidized programs.

A large number of people neglect to confer and request assistance from the city, so the staff of Council 'E' under the directorship of Irvin Conway and Mrs. Paulette Garrison, assistant director, have diligently worked together coordinating their efforts to bring these services to them.

Staff persons are: chief com. organizer, Mrs. Daisy Brandford, com. organizers, Harris Marshall and Dwight Rogers, chief community developer, Mrs. Mary L. Byers, com. developers, Mrs. Rosa Dabney, Ms. Florence Kerr, Ms. Dianna Brown; Ms. Marian Redd; clerk typist, Ms. Lenora Cheatham, Ms. Shirley Brown, Vernon Thompson, receptionist; Ms. Dorothy Tucker, bookkeeper and Wright Dixon, custodian.

I. Conway, director of Council said, "We of Council 'E' have a profound interest in today's young Americans and desire to see those that have fallen into the canals of debilitation and degradation soar to altitudes of success and acquire depths of knowledge."

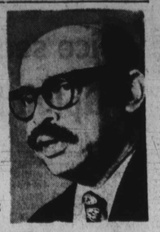
U. of Md. Law School honors Milton B. Allen



MILTON B. ALLEN

"You are about to enter the field of law at a crisis point in our society where individually and collectively you can be a force for good or evil as America struggles to right itself in a raging sea of economic and social problems."

Milton B. Allen former Baltimore city state's attorney, was speaking at Thursday afternoon ceremony where the University of Md. Law School gave him honorary membership in the Order of the Coif.

The ceremony was held in the Hilton Hotel, prior to the law school graduation.

Further, Mr. Allen said: "Injustice abounds in our legal system and it can only be set right by lawyers. Lawyers are at the crux, the axis, the hub, the heart of everything important that happens in this country and whether you become a force for good or a force for evil or a force for mediocrity, is up to you."

He advised those of the young lawyers intending to go into law enforcement to give serious thought to how much of the failure of the justice system can be laid at the door of giving lip-service only, to the principle of protecting the innocent as well as prosecuting the guilty.

"I trust you have gained a lesson from a recent case of national prominence in which the government's case failed while relying entirely on the testimony of a triple immunized, quadruple perjurer, double accomplice.

"It is a crystal clear example of the abuse of the prosecutive process and living more in fear of the press than of committing misfeasance in office."

He urged the young lawyers whom he said have seen the seamy and undesirable side of life to think about what could be done to reconstruct the image of the lawyer as a builder rather than as a destroyer.

Stating that his teaching experience gives him fondness for young lawyers, Mr. Allen said, "I find myself constantly advising them whether they want the advise or not.

"I suppose the reason is that I have always felt that dedicated lawyers held the secret solution to most of the perplexing problems of the country.

"I have seen in the last thirty years interpretation and reinterpretation of our constitution in the fields of criminal law and civil rights by just a handful of dedicated lawyers that bring us fairly close to Justice Black's repeated contention that the constitution means just what it says."
