Blueberry Cream Eclairs

Blueberries make their peak seasonal appearance in your grocer's produce section during June, July and August. Take advantage of the peak supply of blueberries to make Blueberry Cream Eclairs.

Chou pastry, the general term for cream puffs and eclairs, tends to scare off many housewives because of its gourmet connotation. Actually, eclairs are simple to prepare — the only trick to remember — beat the batter vigorously to incorporate as much air, the only leavening agent used, as possible.

The eclairs puff and bake, as the air bubbles expand in the oven heat. Meanwhile, prepare the cool, simple Blueberry Cream filling from thickened lemon flavored gelatin, mixed with whipped topping and fresh blueberries. Pile the filling in and on the cooled eclairs for a welcome warm weather dessert.

Eclairs and other baked goods made from enriched flour provide three important vitamins — thiamine, niacin and riboflavin, plus the mineral iron — for a healthy lift during active summer days.

Blueberry-Cream Eclairs
(16 to 18 eclairs)

One cup water, one-half cup butter, one cup enriched flour one-eighth teaspoon salt, four eggs, and Blueberry Filling.

Bring water and butter to boil, stirring until butter melts. Add flour and salt all at once. Reduce heat. Cook, stirring vigorously until mixture is smooth and forms a soft ball, one to two minutes. Remove from heat and cool slightly. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition.

To form eclairs: drop rounded teaspoonfuls of batter on greased baking sheet, two inches apart. Spread batter into 1-inch by 4-inch eclair. Bake in preheated 400 degree oven 40 to 45 minutes, or until firm. Cool completely.

Meanwhile, prepare Blueberry Filling.

Cut tops off eclair shells and remove soft interior. Fill each shell with two tablespoons

The success of the Bicentennial in this area depends on the amount of black participation during the 200th year celebration. Considering the black population in Baltimore, well over 50 per cent, the ongoing birthday party will not be much to look back on in years to come unless we begin now to plan activities which will carry us through these historic months.

The Bicentennial Coordinating Council, a group of citizens interested in planning the participation of the black community in the Bicentennial, met for the second time on June 25 at Forest Park High School with Gwendolyn C. Brooks, the convener, presiding.

Mrs. Brooks had invited many of the city's organizations to come out to the meeting. Of the 37 notices mailed, only nine persons were present. They were Elizabeth Demby, Sara Elias, Mary Guillery, Lucia Hawthorne, Lousonia Jefferson, Edna DeCoursey Johnson, Edmonia Yates, Otis S. McNeill and this writer. The poor turnout didn't stop the meeting.

Three objectives were established: to participate in the Bicentennial; to identify activities that the organizations represented at the meeting can sponsor either as a group or as individual organizations, and to make calendar of these activities.

The group had done its homework—a list of suggested Bicentennial activities included featuring Baltimoreans who have accomplished in various fields; sell Bicentennial materials; sponsor bus tours through the black community; sponsor a workshop with enough sessions for each participating group to convene one; sponsor youth activities; tours of black churches. Each of the participants have volunteered for one or more of the activities.

(Editor's Note: The group met again on Wednesday at the Madison Avenue YWCA. Read about what happened next Friday.)

Speaking of the Bicentennial, folks did their Fourth of July celebrating at gatherings in and around their homes.

Mattie Gardner and guests were at her Randallstown home that day where friends mingled and dined in the terrace room, sipped on patio and played their favorite card games on her well manicured lawn. The affair lasted throughout the evening. Her out-of-town guests included Miss Laura Weaver of Roame, Ga. (she's the sister of Mrs. Aaron (Mary) Ellis; Mrs. Louise Gooden, Birmingham, Ala., and Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt Griggs of Detroit, Mich.

The big Bi Fourth was filled with an atmosphere of fellowship as the city burst forth with more bright and colorful parties, beginning with Dr. and Mrs. Robert Phillips who started the day with a pool-side brunch for their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Saxton from Cleveland, Ohio.

The Phillips entertained many of their friends who were Bob's classmates at West Virginia State along with his birthday which was the third at their Eleven Oaks estate in Randallstown.

A big slash was heard at Helen and Clit Gattis' house palacial Tulsa Rd. home complete with beautiful pool and country club lawn setting of bright umbrella-covered tables along with an assortment of colorful decorations and leisure-living furniture.

The George Carrols decorated in red, white and blue for their special guest, Audrey Hurst from Washington, D.C. at their luxurious Liberty Rd. home.

Mr. and Mrs. George White (Bernice) marked their 30th wedding anniversary and blessing of their new Callaway Ave. home. Pictured here in Grandmother's arms is 18-month-old Marla Leigh Baskerville.

The Reginald Matthews' of Catonsville opened their sprawling lawn with a bang to friends for a real intimate get-together with a special touch for the Samual Blackwells whose recent loss is recalled by all.

Folks were on hand to celebrate the Fourth at the home of Mrs. Olivia Minor Forney of Havre de Grace. The event was highlighted by the arrival of many family relatives from out-of-town to help clebrate this reunion.

Those on hand were Dr. and Mrs. James W. Peaco, Esq. and son, Washington, D.C.; Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Wiggins, University, Pa.; Mrs. Joyce Peaco, Mrs. Rose Peaco, Mrs. Caver. from Wilmington, Del.

From Baltimore, Md. guests were Mrs. Valerie Johnson Lee, niece of Mrs. Forney; Mrs. Pauline Johnson, sister; Mrs. Jeanette Tubman, Warren Stanley and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Chapman, Darlington, Md.

The hostess helped to celebrate the country's 200th birthday with an elaborate setting she arranged.

Citizens Committee for Black History Exhibits (an affiliate of the Peale Museum) is sponsoring its second annual Garden Party on Sunday, July 13 in the lovely garden of the Carroll Mansion on Front and Lombard Streets.

The program is unique and interesting with its focus mostly upon International Women's Year. Special guests are Carolyn Campbell, Miss Black Maryland and runner-up, Danielle Brooks.

Women of the Past will be represented by tributes to Mary McCleod Bethune and Dr. M. E. Thompson, while 14 young people (really teenagers and history makers) have been selcted because of their aspirations for the future. They will entertain in dramatic presentations, music and skits.

Participants include Judy Dorsey, Barbara Braxton, Carolyn Holmes, Carla Richardson, Judy Carter, Susan Cole, Dana Richardson, Vernita Hairston, Joseph Howard Jr., Bernard Christmas III, Michael Kane and John Dorsey. Soloist is Loretta Young and a special model is Annitte Regis. Walter Fisher will give organ music as he did so beautifully last year.

Chairperson, Philathia Carter Hall, who has had a bout in the hospital, is now on the job. The Black History Committee is headed by Viola C. Jackson.

Dwight Ransom, tenor, a native of Baltimore, and a former student of the Opera department at the Peabody Institute of Music is making the Music Scene in New York. One of the outstanding features of Mr. Ransom's recent New York concert was the works from two famous composers; J.

R.S.V.P. with Marie

Dwight Ransom, a tenor from Baltimore, is making the music scene in New York. He visited the AFRO on Monday.

Rosamond Johnson whose works were published in 1873 and Florence C. whose works were published in 1888 but are just receiving prominence through Mr. Ransom's research for such fine unrecognized composers.

I remember Dwight when he was a student at City College—we're the same age. So when he visited the AFRO this week I remembered the good times we had just a few years ago. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ransom Jr. of this city.

Mr. Ransom's youthful career includes outstanding performances as "Saint-Saens Oratorio" at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, "Bach's B Minor Mass" with Byrne Camp's Orchestra and Chorus, "Mand'ls Te Deum" with the New York Chamber Orchestra and chorus under the direction of Maestro Lawrence Harris.

Also, "Haydn's Creation" with the Queen's College chorus and orchestra, "Handel's Messiah" with the Pace College chorus and orchestra, performed with the New World Symphony, under the guidance and direction of Leontyne Price along with Byrne Camp and Everett Lee of the Philamonic Hall, and with the American Opera Co. at the Lincoln Center.

He is scheduled to sing with the Detroit Symphony in August.

In spite of his busy schedule, Mr. Ransom finds time to coach voice students and to continue his training under the masterful voice coach of Benjamin Matthews who will sing with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra in February.

Three generations of family members from Baltimore journeyed to New York to support the young singer's concert at the Little Theatre, St. Martin's Episcopal Church. The family members included: his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Ransom Jr.; sister, Cheryl Ransom; grandmother, Mrs. Evelyn Humphrie Ransom; great-grandmother, Mrs. Mary Humphries; great-aunts, Mrs. Lillian H. Dantley, Mrs. Pauline Pope, Mrs. Peggy Murphy, Mrs. Elsie Lawson, and Mrs. Thelma H. West;

His two aunts, Mrs. Gloria Tucker and Mrs. Beverly Johnson; great-aunts, Mrs. Vernie Clash, Mrs. Virginia Ransom of Virginia, Mrs. Mabel R. Brown, Mrs. Beatrice Ransom, Mrs. William Ransom, and great-grandaunt, Mrs. Estelle Nickens; great uncles, Sidney Ransom, Justice Jones, William Ransom and Percy Brown, Robert West.

Cousins included Janet and Alfred Woolridge, Edith Robobolt, Gay Tucker, Mrs. Barbara White, Miss Sarah Williams, Mrs. Hazel Campbell, Mrs. Etana Blackwell, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Richardson, Mrs. Antoinette Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Merton Keyser and Mrs. Charlotte H. Freeman along with a special friend of the family Dr. William H. Beaman.

Word came to this desk on Wednesday that the George Whites (Bernice) observed their 30th wedding anniversary on Saturday in a unique kind of way. Their invited guests filled the Callaway Ave. home the couple and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Smith occupied a year ago. The affair was a dual celebration, the anniversary observance and presentation of the home.

There were special prayers for the dedication and the renewal with the Rev. A. J. Payne, minister of Enon Baptist Church presiding. Guests joined in the Litany of Dedication. There was appropriate music for the candlelighting ceremony, dedication and renewal of vows by Margaret Lindsay. Annette Houston was at the piano.

Four generations of the family were present: Mrs. White's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, who occupy the spacious second floor apartment; the White daughters and son-in-law, Myra L. White and Mr. and Mrs. James Baskerville (former Marlene White), and 18-month-old Marla Leigh, daughter of the Bakervilles.

going to New York and began studying the fashion shows there. Then I created my own techniques and decided to open my own modeling studio."

Winkey's studio now occupies the first floor of a brown shingle house in the 2500 Liberty Heights Ave. Negiotiations for purchasing the property are currently underway.

Some 200 students ranging in ages five through 45 have trained under the 29-year-old director and his two staff members, Ellen Gaither and Eric Von Adams, who also attained their skills and techniques from him.

Two productions are given each year, namely graduation exercises and fashion show in October; Student Model of the Year contest in January, and for the first time this year, Designer of the Year Contest to be held in December.

Although Winkey and his instructors and students maintain a close-knit, one big-happy-family type relationship, Winkey insists that they respect him as a businessman. "No one calls me Boodie inside the studio."

His name is Travis — Travis Winkey.

Church usher board sends kids to camp

by Marjorie R. Green

The Senior Usher Board of Concord Baptist Church has finalized plans to sponsor two inner city children to attend the YMCA Camp King's Landing in Huntingtown, as part of Outreach program.

This is the second year the church group has reached out into the community to help enrich the lives of area youngsters. Campership committee members are Grace Flippin, Reginald Ingram, Mozelle Parks, Shirley Smith and Frank Roseborough.

Members of the Concord Baptist Church Usher Board working in the Social Security Woodlawn complex along with this writer are Phyllis Reeves, Grace Wallace and former employee, Mary Wall Gibson.
