Mrs. McMillan named Morgan U. board head

Mrs. Enolia McMillan, the newly elected chairperson of the Board of Trustees of Morgan State University, told the AFRO, Wednesday afternoon, the board will work tirelessly with the administration to transform the institution into a first-class university.

To this end, she disclosed at the first meeting of the board, Thursday, it is the aim of the board to work with the president and others concerned to clarify the immediate and long-term purposes of the institution.

"As an initial step in this direction, I have asked the president to submit at his earliest convenience, a relatively short and concise statement of general and specific goals of the institution for our study," the Baltimore chapter NAACP president told the board meeting.

She proposed the formation of three committees: Finance and Budget; Capital Planning — Building and Grounds and Academic and Student Affairs, to deal with the university's problems.

Mrs. McMillan, described by many as able and hard-working, stated that the board should be able to communicate its goals, procedures and progress to the community, the administration, faculty and the alumni.

Strike over inmates for Sykesville

Approximately 180 inmates staged a sit-down strike at the Central Laundry Correctional Center in Sykesville Tuesday.

Citing harassment by correctional officers, "cold cuts" three times a day, poor medical care, the lack of a furlough and low pay, the inmates refused to work until their complaints were aired by center officials.

The inmates went back to work on Wednesday, after meeting with Robert McCully, superintendent of camp systems.

McCully told the AFRO that the inmates had two major complaints.

They were seeking a higher pay scale and they wanted a monthly furlough.

He said that the central office was taking under advisement the furlough requests for those under work release to obtain a furlough once a month.

He stated further that those inmates nearing their discharge dates would probably be considered for furlough.

Although the pay scales for those who work in the laundry is relatively low, $1.00 to $1.15 per hour, they are paid more money than any other group of prisoners in the state.

Those inmates who exceed a poundage quota, are also eligible for a bonus in the form of days subtracted from their sentences.

This equation can help solve America's energy problem.

You may be surprised to know that the U.S. has about half of all the free world's coal reserves.

That adds up to twice as much energy as in all the Middle East oil.

So coal is an important part of America's total energy equation.

What coal can do.

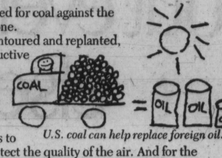
As more and more coal is used by industries like electric utilities, it can supplement dwindling U.S. reserves of oil and natural gas. What's more, by replacing some imported oil with coal, we help stimulate the economy . . . help fight unemployment.

How to make coal work.

Everyone knows we have to balance the need for coal against the needs of the environment. And it can be done.

For example, a surface mine can be recontoured and replanted, section by section, to make the land as productive as before.

Exxon has already started reclaiming operations at its uranium surface mine in Wyoming. And we plan to mine Wyoming coal the same way.



U.S. coal can help replace foreign oil.

Exxon scientists are also developing ways to make coal burn as cleanly as possible to protect the quality of the air. And for the future, we're working on synthetic fuels made from coal.

The challenge.

Producing enough coal to help solve America's energy problem is a big job. It will take experienced technical people, responsible management, large amounts of capital and the ability to plan carefully.

Exxon can help. In fact, an Exxon affiliate is already operating one coal mine and planning others. But we're just one of the companies working on the problem.

It will take time and the best efforts of all of us before America's huge coal reserves can come to the rescue. But work must begin now. At Exxon, we're doing our best to get on with the job.

What do you do when your paycheck is fouled up?

In times of economic stress, persons seeking out a living on limited funds needs their paychecks on the dot. . . . or else rent goes unpaid and someone goes hungry.

By Robert M. Matthews IV

What do you do when your paycheck does not come when it's supposed to? How do you pay your rent, buy groceries, or pay your phone bill?

Why is it persons who can least afford it are made to suffer because of a bureaucratic foul-up?

These vital questions came when over 100 city school aides were deprived of hard-earned paychecks Tuesday.

Many of them called the AFRO to complain.

* * *

One of the aides from School No. 30 said many of the aides had worked for a month and must still wait another two weeks before they will receive the paycheck that was due Tuesday.

She said that many of them are in fear of being evicted for non-payment of rent, and are in a real dilemma, because they have no money for bus fare.

She stated that she was given the "run-around" by school officials when she attempted to determine what the reason was for her not receiving a check.

* * *

"This is a dirty deal. We worked all of this time and we still don't get paid," the angry aide replied to questions from this reporter.

"When they overpaid us once, they recalled the checks and had new checks issued the next day. Why can't they make arrangements to pay us now?"

* * *

She stated further: "All they do is give you the runaround. They sent me first over to Charles St. to see Mrs. Bryant.

"From there I was sent over to see Michael Karas (Director of Payroll).

"We need our money, not talk," the aide cried.

* * *

The AFRO spoke with Mrs. Loretta Johnson of the United Teachers Union who said many aides from Schools No. 29, 10, 202 and 30 called her office to complain of not receiving their checks.

She stated: "This happens every year. These are the lowest paid people in the school system, and no one cares if they are paid or not. (Basic pay for aides is about $16.01 per day).

"The bureaucrats all pass the buck. I'm sick of this happening to our people. Many of these girls are trying to stay off of the welfare rolls.

"We are going to pull all of the aides out of the schools and picket unless they develop a better system of paying them." suffer.

(Ed. note: Aides assist regular teachers in the carrying out of classroom duties.)

* * *

She states further: "There is a grudge between the Department of Education and the City and our girls are the ones who

"When a foul-up occurs in some aspect of the payroll, all the city has to do is call us back for the corrections to be made; and our people will get paid on time. They never do.

"It's disgusting, they don't care because most of the aides are black.

"We get the run-around from Mr. Francis, (City Francis City Controller) and from Mr. Dichtman, (Harry Dichtman head of City Central Payroll) who all place the blame someplace else."

* * *

In an attempt to find out why the aides were not paid, the AFRO talked with various officials of the Department of Education and the City. Below are their comments on the situation.

ELY FRANCIS-CONTROLLER'S OFFICE:

"The problems lie in the fact that payroll tickets did not leave the personnel department in time to meet the payroll departments' deadline. I've called the Credit Union to see if they could help with emergency payments."

HARRY DICHTMAN-CENTRAL PAYROLL;

"I am not really aware of the problem because I've been in a meeting all day. There is nothing I can tell you."

MICHAEL KARAS-DIRECTOR OF PAYROLL;

"People who work should get paid. In this highly nological era, we have to rely on the computer for assistance, and it requires close and strict adherence to schedules.

Some of the entry tickets for about 40 schools along with other paperwork are rammed into the computer and this could cause the delay.

"There was also a delay in the states' authorizations which causes a domino effect. We worked day and night in an attempt to get everyone paid on time.

"We are very concerned about those people who have not received their checks on time, and I have been in contact with the Credit Union and Mrs. Loretta Johnson of United Teachers to see what stopgap measures could be taken.

"I've even gone into my own pocket and lent some of the aides money for bus fare."

* * *

MRS. LAURALYN BELLAMY-PUBLIC RELATIONS DIRECTOR OF BALTIMORE SCHOOLS:

"I spoke with Robert Umphrey, who is assistant superintendent in charge of payroll. He told me that the problem was in the entry tickets not being sent down on time.

About 125 to 158 people out of a total of 1,000 aides did not receive their checks.

The procedure is for the authorization forms to be sent by the regions to the aides office, who forwards to position control.

They OK the budgeting to the personnel officer who cuts tickets and sends them to the city personnel committee.

The "Fogel Committee then forwards to Central Payroll."

* * *

This reporter attempted to reach other administrators such as assistant region 7 superintendent Mrs. Jean Owens, and Quentin Lawson the Mayor's liaison for education but was not successful.

Everyone blames the system, but this does not get the aides' rent and telephone bills paid.

The acting school superintendent makes $50,000 a year, and regional superintendents make from $26,000 to $29,700 a year. Many questions remain. Is there ever a foul-up when it comes time for them to get paid?

Why should those aides, who make only about $4,000 a year get the "short end of the stick."

Is it because they are all black? Or is it that aides are a "waste of money" and don't deserve to be paid on time as Harry Dichtman of central payroll put it?

Hunter home for blind must have $$ by Sunday

Sunday is the deadline for contributions to keep the Anna Mae Hunter Home for the Blind open.

Mrs. Hunter told the AFRO that the school is in a terrible financial state and will be forced to close in September unless it received $3,500 from the community by Aug. 4.

She said, "We need the help of all people who care. We will be grateful to anyone who can contribute any amount of money, no matter how small or large.

The Hunter home has become a beacon of light for many blind persons in the city who have lived there since its opening in 1968.

Located at 1321 Eutaw Place, it has been an economically attractive and comfortable place for the blind of all ages to make their home.

The residents are only asked to pay a small boarding fee and other bills, such as milk, meat and electricity, are paid through the thoughtful contributions of citizens.

Mrs. Hunter told the AFRO, "Bills have gotten so high these days that we are forced to ask for more help.

"Buying meat and doing the laundry for 18 people is more expensive than most people realize."

Persons wishing to contribute to the continued operation of the home may address tax-free donations to: Mrs. Anna Mae Hunter, 1321 Eutaw Place, Baltimore 21217, or call 523-6396.

Classes are conducted each day in the following subjects: English, Black History, Mathematics and Art.

* * *

Special afternoon activities include Swimming, Roller Skating, visits to the Largo Wildlife Preserve and a concert by Gladys Knight and the Pips.

2 Congressmen ask probe of Army officer's death

U.S. Senator J. Glenn Beal, Jr. (R-Md.), has also asked for an investigation into the shooting death of Lt. Michael Mitchell, slain two weeks ago in Taylor, Texas.

Last week a similar investigation was requested by Congressman Parren J. Mitchell in order that "all the facts surrounding the death of the 24-year-old soldier be revealed."

* * *

Senator Beal told the AFRO that his office has contacted both the Department of the Army and the Attorney General in Texas "with the thought in mind that the people in Texas will have this matter looked into in more detail than it has been up to now."

The Senator said, "We anticipate a response from the Attorney General in the next few days."

* * *

Members of Lt. Mitchell's family became concerned because an autopsy had not been performed until after he was embalmed, and then it was only done at the request of the family.

Autopsy reports show that Mitchell died of gunshot wounds of the back.

Police told family members that the soldier, who was a June graduate of Morgan, that Lt. Mitchell was found beaten and shot to death in front of a bar near Ft. Hood where he was stationed.

A June graduate of Morgan State College, he was engaged to be married to Miss Myra Leach in March, 1976.

Orchard Church fair scheduled for Aug. 9

* * *

The event marks the continued effort to raise funds to restore the church for the Bicentennial and to fix it up to become a permanent museum. Mrs. W.A.C. Hughes is president and Norman Ross coordinator, along with a committee of city-wide representatives.

The fair will include a guided tour of the old church which now heads toward becoming the only monument belonging to black citizens ever to go on the National Record of Historic Places.

Now you can tell your problems to your Welfare worker by phone

By Bryan Holt

Beginning this month, income maintenance workers of the Dept. of Social Services will be allowed three half-days a week during which they will dedicate themselves entirely to telephone conferences with clients.

The new system was announced earlier this week by Mrs. Maud S. Harvey, director. Phone numbers will go to the needy in letters soon.

In a prepared statement, Mrs. Harvey said, "We hope the new system will better serve clients and will also allow the department's workers to use their time more effectively."

There has been some speculation from the community that the new telephone system is a desperate attempt on the part of the department to silence recent allegations of inadequacies and coldness in the relationship between the case worker and client.

Citizens have complained that many times when they go to the offices, they find the workers "loafing around" instead of working.

Though the criticism is certainly not new, it rose to alarming heights recently receiving extensive investigation and coverage by the news media.

* * *

A reliable source in the department told the AFRO, "The recent publicity was only indirectly responsible for the telephone system.

"We were aware of problems in the department before people on the outside and began to work on solutions. The telephone system is one of those solutions."

The source also stated that work on the new phone conversation system began before the recent publicity outbreak.

* * *

Letters are currently being sent out to over 50,000 families to inform them when their worker will be available by phone to handle problems with public assistance checks, food stamps or medical assistance matters.

When a specific worker is not scheduled, yet the situation warrants attention, another worker will be assigned to take calls.

All workers are required to answer client calls either in writing or by phone.

* * *

Mrs. Audrey Williams of the director's office told the AFRO that though the average case worker's load is 200 to 300 clients, they do not except difficulties with telephone tie-ups.

She stated, "The workers have a lot of clients, but a lot of them never call.

"Those that call do so because they are having a problem with their checks, food stamp, or something else. Most of our clients don't have any problems of that sort, but some do.

"The phone system has been set up for those families."

Mrs Williams said that the telephone coverage goes into effect as soon as families receive notices telling them when their worker can be reached.

Firefighters reinstated by board

Two firefighters connected to a cheating scandal but acquitted by a jury were reinstated by the Fire Board this week.

According to Fire Commissioner Calhoun Bond, the decision was made to reinstate Link Perry Jr., 42, and Carl Miles, 44, after lengthy consideration based on the court's previous verdict.

"The board has been discussing the matter in person and over the phone," said Mr. Bond. "We took into consideration the affect our decision would have on the men, the department and the community."

Commissioner Bond stated that the three member board met informally after the Monday night Police Department graduation and handed down it decision.

Both Mr. Perry and Mr. Miles will receive all back pay from the time they were suspended in December when they were indicted.

The first trial, resulted in a hung jury since their guilt could not be proven.

In the second trial, which ended two weeks ago, Judge Robert L. Karwacki threw out the case against Mr. Perry and charges against Mr. Miles were dismissed.

By Pam Widgeon

The Rev. Lonnie J. Oliver was installed recently as the new pastor at Knox United Presbyterian Church, 1214 N. Broadway

The Rev. Mr. Graham retired in July, 1974 and is now living in Florida.

The Rev. Mr. Oliver 27, faces the challenge of building a new church or of extensive renovation to the present church. Knox now has a membership of approximately 175 members.

The Rev. Mr. Oliver told the AFRO, "I feel God has called me into the Christian ministry to perform a mission. The black church is the only institution we have we can call our own."

Speaking of plans for the future, the Rev. Mr. Oliver stated he will open the church during the week for people in the community because "there is definite a need for services in the community."

He has plans to get more young people involved in the church and will observe Youth Day every fifth Sunday.

* * *

Born in Hampton, Va., the Rev. Mr. Oliver is a graduate of the Johnson C. Smith Seminary of the Interdenominational Theological Center in Atlanta, Ga.

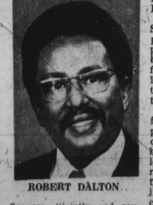
Dalton sues former campaign agents

Former state Senator Robert L. Dalton, now seeking City Council seat in the 2nd District has filed a suit in the Circuit Court that his two political agents in his last year's unsuccessful bid for re-election misappropriated campaign contributions and filed an inaccurate report on which his signature was forged.

Dalton asked the court to order Jerome Scruggs, his former campaign treasurer, and William B. Henry, former campaign manager, "to account to an auditor of this court for all sums entrusted to them of" his campaign.

Mr. Dalton who is currently seeking City Council Second District nomination, has been endorsed by the Mount Royal Democratic Club.

Filed on his behalf by his attorney, J. Michael Lehand, last Monday, Mr. Dalton's suit contends that Mr. Henry and Mr. Scruggs, "jointly and severally appropriated to their own use monies collected from (Dalton) and others intended for the political campaign without the knowledge or consent of (Dalton)."



ROBERT DALTON

He also contends that Mr. Scruggs filed an incomplete and inaccurate campaign report with the State Board of Election Laws which contained Mr. Dalton's forged signature.

The suit states defendant Scruggs has refused repeated requests for a complete accounting of the books and records and has failed to comply with the law in filing additional material with the state election board.

Stating he has been forced to pay from his own pocket legitimate costs incurred by the campaign because of Scruggs' alleged improper campaign reports, Mr. Dalton said, they are both subject to immediate criminal prosecution.

This, Mr. Dalton said, would inflict substantial and irreparable harm to (Dalton's) reputation and character."

The court was asked to require the defendants to account for all campaign contributions to a court appointed trustee who will reimburse Dalton for his out-of-pocket expenditures.
