Handicapped children's committee

Governor Mandel has recently appointed a Commission to study and make recommendations concerning the funding of education for handicapped children.

The commission held its first meeting on July 16, and it was agreed to invite written submissions from interested groups on the questions with which the commission will be dealing.

If you desire to submit material to the commission, please send it to:

Mrs. Louise G. Scott, Governor's Commission on Funding the Education of Handicapped Children, 214 Jeffrey Building, 16 Francis St., Annapolis, Maryland 21404.

EDUCATION IS YOUR BEST INVESTMENT FOR EITHER TIME OR MONEY

Increase your INCOME through additional studies. Why stay at a low income level, when you can study while you work and move up in the job market.

Use your LEISURE TIME to improve your skills, and your awareness.

Invest in SELF FULFILLMENT by continuing your education. Keep your mind active and alert through study.

Learn a SECOND CAREER that can add to your esteem, self-respect and income. Even if you like your present employment, adding another skill can be beneficial.

STUDY FOR A CERTIFICATE OF PROFICIENCY OR IN A DEGREE PROGRAM. DAY OR EVENING—FULL-TIME OR PART-TIME.

Anne Arundel College has something for everybody

Whether people are seeking an education, special interest courses, entertainment, participation in sports and a wide variety of other co-curricular activities, physical fitness, preparation for a career, job promotion or upgrading in specific skills, Anne Arundel Community College has not only the programs but up-to-date facilities to support them.

Recently reaccredited without reservations for a 10-year period, which is an unusual honor, Anne Arundel adheres to an open admissions policy, which gives high school graduates or holders of the equivalency certificate a chance to measure their capacities, find their field of interest and improve their lot.

Graduates awarded the associate in arts degree may continue at upper level colleges for higher degrees or embark on careers with more confidence and better pay.

Some students focus on a one-year certificate program to accelerate entry into employment with sharpened skills.

Adults with high school far behind them join their children in enrolling at the college and receive their diplomas along with them at commencement. Others take special interest credit or non-credit courses during the day or in the evening, depending on tastes.

Many such courses provide for professional advancement in fields like real estate, law enforcement or secretarial service.

• • •

Since the college has occupied its present 165-acre campus only since 1967, its facilities are modern in all respects. Recent construction has added eight tennis courts, a student center and an Olympic swimming pool. Presently abuilding is a new administration center.

In terms of students enrolling for credit courses, AACC has grown from 1,471 in 1967 to 4,731 in 1974. This fall's enrollment will exceed the 5,000 mark, not counting those taking continuing education or senior citizen courses.

And for the sports minded, there are 14 varsity squads in which men and women compete, and 11 intramural groups in a rapidly growing program. The college's successes in athletic competition in recent years has been notable, especially in women's tennis and badminton, and in football, baseball, basketball and lacrosse.

Students at Anne Arundel Community College receive personal attention not only from their professors but also from trained counselors prepared to assist in whatever problems they face.

CCB offers variety of courses this fall

By Dr. Sidney Kobre

Blue-collar workers from the Bethlehem Steel, General Motors and Western Electric plants will sit alongside white-collar employes of banks and insurance companies when classes begin for the fall semester at the 20 off-campus college centers of the Community College of Baltimore.

"Responding to the requests of residents in all sections of the city each year the Community College of Baltimore expands the number of career and general educational courses at the district centers. The fall of 1975 follows this pattern," said President Harry Bard.

"People are definitely interested in advancing themselves on their jobs, taking self-enrichment courses, or completing study for their degrees," said Paul Beckham, director of Off-Campus Centers of CCB's Division of Continuing Education.

"These off-campus centers were established to near the homes of residents who did not want to travel to the Liberty Campus," Mr. Beckham explained.

At the Northern Center, 2201 Pinewood Ave., 24 courses for those interested in career advancement or personal educational enrichment are offered. At the Northern Center, employed, mature men and women, housewives and recent high school gradautes study such business subjects as introduction to business, accounting, principles of real estate, writing and public speaking.

CCB offers also introduction to fire protection technology and fire and arson investigation for those concerned with these subjects. Other students may select introduction to gerontology, if they are interested in working with older people, or have elderly relatives living in the house with them.

Those interested in science may choose the general biology course.

For a list of courses and times they are given, contact Mr. Beckham, CCB, 2901 Liberty Hgts. (21215) or call him at 462-5800. For day courses on the Liberty Campus, call or write Dean of Student Personnel Joseph Stein.

EXPLAINING A POINT to Miss Angela Onley, a sophomore at the Community College of Baltimore, is Professor Cortez Walker.
