Spareribs delight

Broiling and barbecuing, two different sides of the same culinary coin, both involve cooking relatively close to the source of heat. Traditionally, the heat source is above the food for broiling and below for barbecuing, although with some of the newest equipment even this distinction can be blurred.

In other words, then, the barbecue recipes we love so much outdoors can come inside with ease when the weather chills, and indoor broiling favorites move outdoors nicely in the spring and summer. With some recipes, however, a few minor adjustments would have to be made in deference to the location of the source of heat.

Olive Pepper Ribs, a flavor cousin to the French gourmet speciality Steak au Poivre, is an all-seasons dish of extraordinarily good flavor. The pre-cooked spareribs are covered with a peppery olive-flavored paste that turns the mat into a hot and spicy culinary delight. Serve the ribs indoors or out with a crunchy bread and a cold kraut relish.

Sherry Beef Burgers is another dual purpose recipe. Sherry and tangy pimiento-stuffed olives give the meat mixture an exotic flavor to make these burgers a welcome change from the usual barbecue — or broil specialties. Indoors, serve the burgers without the buns for a nutritious low-cost main course.

Olive Pepper Ribs
(Makes 1 servings)
2 racks (about 2½ pounds each) spareribs
Boiling salted water
1 tablespoon peppercorns
½ cup pimento-stuffed olives
1 clove garlic, peeled and quartered
¼ cup olive or salad oil

Simmer spareribs in water for about 1 hour or until tender; drain. Place spareribs on broiler pan with meaty side up. Place peppercorns in electric blender and whirl until cracked. Add all remaining ingredients to blender; blend until thick and fairly smooth. Spread mixture on meaty side of spareribs. Broil or grill about 6 inches from source of heat for 5 to 10 minutes or until browned. Serve spareribs garnished with parsley sprigs and sliced olives.

Or, crush peppercorns with the side of a heavy knife and mix with the oil and ground or very finely chopped olives and garlic. Mix to form a paste.

Just right for friends that drop by for the Labor Day festivites is 'Olive Pepper Ribs.' A hot and spicy olive-flavored pepper sauce gives broiled or barbecued spareribs new taste appeal.

Career planning

better at such subjects as grammar, domestic science, typing, English literature and boys excelled in mathematics, science and mechanics. In high school and college, if they insisted they wanted a career, young women were advised to aim for fields that were "women's work" — nursing, stenography, teaching and home economics.

We cannot afford to let that happen to the women workers of tomorrow. Nine out of ten of them will work at some time in their lives — even though they marry, even though they have children. More and more women are combining homemaking with a career.

They will be working for the same reason most women work today, because they or their families need the money. But they should not have to settle for the low-skilled, low-paying jobs in which women workers are now concentrated.

LABOR DAY, MONDAY, SEPT. 1, BALTIMORE'S BIGGEST EVENT

Over half-million to see parade, 25,000 to march

Baltimore will be the site, Monday Sept. 1 of the largest celebration honoring all American Workers and their achievements in the building of our nation.

It is expected that more than half a million people will show up for this days long event consisting of: America's largest Labor Day Parade, A National Union "Label" Show, and a Celebrity Salute to the "American Worker."

The event will be full of color, music, history, and celebrities that will make it a unique and entertaining television special.

THE PARADE

Some 25,000 marchers representing the AFL-CIO, United Auto Workers, and the Teamsters, will highlight the Largest Labor Day Parade in America.

Floats, Helium Balloons, Bands, and Historic vehicles will make up the rest of the parade.

The parade will culminate at Federal Hill, a landmark to the workers of America.

Federal Hill was the spot where thousands of tradesmen gathered to celebrate the ratification of the American Constitution. It was also a defensive fortification for the Port of Baltimore and overlooks famous Fort McHenry.

On Sept. 1 Federal Hill will become the home of the first Labor Day Monument to the American Worker.

THE NATIONAL UNION LABEL SHOW

The National Union Label Show will demonstrate the skills and products of the American Worker which have so heavily contributed to the development and prosperity of the American Way of Life. Almost every skill and artifact indigenous to the American Labor Scene will not only be displayed but will be demonstrated and taught in a living collage of Americana.

The National Union Label Show will chart the history of American Labor from the simple to the complex machine; from a simple, basically agrarian society to the complex industrial society of today.

Some of the exhibits will include: "Mass Transit Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow," a collection of Mass Transit vehicles from the past, present, and future; a working clothing factory in which clothing will be made and given away to spectators; the Communications Workers of America's Exhibit on "How a Telephone Works," and "How to Climb a telephone pole"; Bakers' demonstration of how to bake bread and decorate cakes; the steelworkers will build a special structure inside the exhibit area; and the AFL - CIO, UAW, and Teamsters will set up a museum showing the history of the labor movement.

CELEBRITY SALUTE TO THE AMERICAN WORKER.

The Celebrity Salute to the American Worker will be a variety show in which comedian Phyllis Diller, singers Smokey Robinson, Theodore Bikel, and Melba Moore, actress Penny Singleton, and comedy team "Untouchables" will salute in comedy and song "The American Worker."

Highlights of the show include: The First American Female Garment Worker. A special award to the outstanding national labor leader (selected by the rank and file workers); and a sing-a-long of famous labor songs. More than 13,000 people are expected to fill the Baltimore Civic Center for the two hour show.

STELLAR BAND — The Burke High School Band from Charleston, S.C., will be one of the starring attractions in Baltimore's Labor Day parade. The band has received invitations to Europe and to the Mardi Gras in New Orleans. Other bands will include the Hampden Drum and Bugle Corps and the Naval Academy Marching Band.
