AFRO precincts are...

The AFRO traditionally selects precincts where registered voters are 98 per cent or more black. These are called AFRO precincts. For the Tuesday, September 9, 1974 Primary Election, the AFRO identified 100 such precincts in all sections of the city and tabulated the vote in them on election night at the War Memorial Plaza. Printed here are the results of citywide races and candidates for the City Council in the 2nd, 4th and 5th Councilmatic Districts.

What they say

Congressman Parren J. Mitchell: "If you have a lot of dramatic contests with two or three charismatic guys out there fighting each other, there is sort of contagion of excitement ... but these elements were missing tonight ... I think John Douglass put on a good, tough race and it was worth the effort ..."

Mayor W. Donald Schaefer: "I have tried to analyze the low turnout. There are a number of reasons ... that people are not interested, but I like to think people are satisfied with the type of government they have and are pleased with it ... we are very happy tonight at the margin of victory.

"I am glad my good friend Walter (Orlinsky) won ... Mr. Pressman ran a fine campaign ... and we are most grateful ..."

Norman V. A. Reeves, defeated in bid for Fifth District Council seat:

"Right now, I am very bitter because there is no way to describe it except that we were cheated.

"The thing that really hurt was the fact that some people mistakenly pulled the wrong lever for James Reeves. That was the margin of my being in fourth and not in first.

"If you add up his figures and my figures, that would have placed me first. That essentially is what knocked us off.

"The other factor certainly was that if we had been carried by the black politicians in the black community instead of carrying two whitt candidates, then that certainly would have also made the difference.

"Irrespective of that, we had the numbers except for James Reeves being on the ballot and people being confused by that. He was not a serious candidate. He spent no money. He did no campaigning."

State Senator Verda F. Welcome who heads Fourth District Democratic Club, whose organization supported candidacy of Councilperson Mary B. Adams and John Jeffries, both of whom were defeated, and Michael B. Mitchell, who led the ticket:

"We are very, very happy with the success of Michael Mitchell. Even though we have lost one, 73 3788 (Councilperson Mary B. Adams), we have won one whom we feel will be a leader in the Council.

"He called me yesterday and said, "I am the Councilman for the Fourth District"...

"I just walked in the office and what do I see here but a most beautiful bouquet of of rosebuds, a dozen of them from Mike Mitchell.

"I just feel this is the beginning of a beautiful opportunity to work together for once. I love it."

Councilperson Mary B. Adams who lost bid for reelection from 4th District:

"I congratulate the winners of a most unusual campaign and a very special thanks to all who supported me.

"I regret having lost but the people have not lost because I intend to continue to work. In fact my experience in the Council has better prepared me to meet the needs of the people.

"I shall continue to be involved with city government. The 4th District Democratic Club will still have a strong representative in the City Council through its newly elected attorney, Mike Mitchell.

"Voters who stayed at home have certainly learned that this city will not move forward until citizens show up at the polls.

"As for now I must give my attention to my new position as the assistant director of Development of Coppin State College."

Del. John W. Douglass, unsuccessful candidate for comptroller: "My efforts were rendered futile due to the extremely low black turnout."

State Senator Clarence Blount, head of the Fifth District Democratic Club, where two of his candidates won election to Council, Thomas J. S. Waxter and incumbent Alleg B. Specter: "My overall assessment of the recent election is that the black voter just wasn't there.

"In a light voter turnout the machine always wins. We have got to learn a lesson from our black voters in the South ... We have got to reassess ourselves ... WE have enough black voters to elect three black councilmen in the 5th District."

education here, was thought to be in jeopardy with the renewal of his contract set for this year.

THE BEGINNING

The fires had been set in 1974 when the then white majority of the School Board attempted to oust the superintendent in what was denounced widely as an out and out racial affair.

That ouster was aborted by the black community which stepped with vigorous action before a final vote could be recorded. Eventually the City Solicitor ruled the ill-fated attempt illegal.

Since the school system, for some time, had been out of the direct influence of the politicians, the undisguised entry of the mayor, also elected in 1971, into this non-political arena heated the matter until it burst wide open as 1975 began.

The highly touted evaluation of Dr. Patterson by a black majority School Board, but knowingly under orders from the mayor, was the match set to the fuse.

HELL BENT

In a political year, with blacks under-represented in power downtown, the mayor was hell-bent on firing Dr. Patterson.

The lengthy and acrimonious evaluation continued with frantic legal maneuvers by Patterson attorneys Larry S. Gibson and Charles Lee, which resounded all the way from here to the Falls Church, Va. home of native Baltimorean and veteran freedom fighter, Thurgood Marshall, justice of the Supreme Court.

Politics became directly the issue when Congressman Parren J. Mitchell (D, 7th) told the community he was considering running against the mayor in the upcoming primary. This was a thinly veiled hint that if the mayor didnt lay off Dr. Patterson, the congressman intended to wage a street campaign, his forte, which would give the mayor a good scare, if not an unexpected defeat.

The mayor refused to meet with Mr. Mitchell, so he said, on any matter except Congressional business relating to Baltimore.

ONE PERSON APPOINTED

He publicly paid no heed to black demands to delay the Patterson firing. But, he did name a black to a relatively high post downtown to stem protests over the absence of black influence in the government.

Alvin Watson, a former vice president for business and finance at Coppin State College, was named deputy commissioner of the Department of Health, at the beginning of the summer. This has been all blacks have heard on increasing major black appointments since that time.

The congressman went to the brink of announcing for the September primary, but backed down at the eleventh hour because of the indifferent attitudes of black political leaders as Councilman "Du" Burns (D, 2) who openly expressed their willingness to stick with the mayor.

The withdrawal of Mr. Mitchell from his anticipated race was the highpoint of black politics in 1975.

From the date of his withdrawal, lesser black politicians became increasingly fratricidal.

MAYOR OFF THE HOOK

The mayor was able to withstand increased and intense pressure, after the Mitchell withdrawl to place a black candidate on his ticket. The mayor resisted and countered by refusing formally to field a ticket. The other two members of the team, Council President Walter S. Orlinsky, and Comptroller Hyman A. Pressman, were left to feign for themselves. The mayor was effectively taken off the hook.

John W. Douglass (D, 45th), a member of East Baltimore's Eastside Democratic Club, was the most universally recognized candidate as far as the black community was concerned, of those who had filed for citywide office, who had any semblance of a chance to defeat Hyman A. Pressman in the comptroller's race.

BOSOM ENEMIES

Mayor Schaefer refused to place Douglass on a ticket and made no public statements in his favor, although it is widely known Schaefer and Pressman are constantly at each other's throats.

By this time, Dr. Patterson had been fired by the School Board and much of the city turned its attention to the opening of school and the expected desegregation plans about to be implemented at the behest of the federal government.

John W. Douglass was on his own.

The attention of most black politicians had turned to the councilmanic races of the second, fourth, and fifth districts where the power struggle of political enclaves which encircle the heart of black strength in this city was in earnest.

2ND DISTRICT

Starting with the second district, Mr. Burns, Councilman Nathan C. Irby (who took the seat of former Councilman Robert Douglass upon his election to the State Senate last year) were running on a unity ticket with the liberal white woman, Mary Pat Clarke.

Since his climb to the council, Mr. Burns has become a power to be reckoned with in East Baltimore. He and the mayor were widely recorded as allies during the summer.

Mr. Burns, as a result, probably of his outspoken support of the mayor during the period of the Mitchell threat, reaped a harvest of patronage which

AFRO precincts gave Douglass 79% Vote

AFRO precints gave Douglass 79% of the vote.

The total Democratic registration as of August 21, 1975 is 324,065. It is estimated that 40 per cent of this number is black and the balance of 60 per cent, white.

It is interesting to note that in the 100 AFRO precincts the votes cast for the comptroller outnumbered those for the mayor in almost every case.

Figures indicate that citywide there was approximately a 31% voter turnout — 23 per cent black and 36 per cent white.
