Lost rapport said reason Pistons fired Ray Scott

According to the management of the Detroit Pistons, it was neither the team's 17-28 nor a disagreement with center Bob Lanier that triggered the Monday night firing of Ray Scott as coach.

The action by co-owners Bill Davidson and Herb Tyner, and general manager Oscar Feldman reduced by one the number of black coaches in the National Basketball Association.

Scott, who was the winningest coach in Detroit history, was replaced by his assistant, Herb Brown.

Ray Scott
all-time best record

"We felt now was the time we had to make the change," Feldman said. "We felt it was in the best interest of the team. "There was a lack of communication, a lack of rapport, whatever you want to use. It came down to human relationships."

Human relationships, getting along with his team while getting his ideas across, were something Scott prided himself in as he compiled a 151-130 record in his three-plus seasons as coach of the Pistons. It was the only above-.500 record a Detroit coach has ever had.

Though Feldman said "his termination certainly had nothing to do with our losing streak" and Detroit was only a half-game behind first-place Milwaukee in the NBA's Midwest Division, it is almost certain Scott would have stayed had the Pistons' record been the reverse.

The club has been fatally plagued by injuries since Dec. 9, when sparkplug guard Kevin Porter suffered a knee injury that required surgery. Various other injuries have struck nearly every other player on the club from time to time.

There had been rumors of strife between Scott and Lanier but that is typical in two such strong-willed men. Both have admitted differences of opinion but said it did not disrupt their relationship.

"Bob Lanier had nothing to do with the dismissal of Ray Scott," Feldman said. "We had no discussions with Bob at all. It was a breakdown in communications and I don't want to talk about it."

Scott, a former star forward for the Pistons and their No. 1 draft choice in 1961, inherited the job the same way Brown gets it. He was elevated from being an assistant when Earl Lloyd was fired seven games into the 1972-73 season.

The Pistons turned around under Scott, going from a league doormat into a NBA power. Detroit's best-ever 52-30 record in Scott's first full season earned him coach of the year honors.

Run-ins with Dave Bing, since traded to Washington with a draft choice for Porter, and Don Adams, cut soon afterward, opened the 1974-75 season and heralded the start of the turmoil, strife and injuries that have trademarked the Pistons ever since.

Frazier thinks it over then refuses to retire

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joe Frazier did exactly what he said he was going to do after his fight with Muhammad Ali. He did a lot of thinking about retiring.

He talked about it with Eddie Futch, a man he respects, and with two ladies he respects, his wife and his mother.

He spoke with them all and came to a decision about retiring. He's not going to do it.

"No reason why I should," he said at the National Cartoonists Society where he looked in his usual superb physical shape the other evening.

"Boxing is my occupation. I enjoy doing it more than anything else, and I'm not an old man. I turned 32 the other day. That's not old! I'm going to keep fighting."

Big George Foreman, the man took his title away three years ago in Jamaica and flattened Ron Lyle Saturday, shapes up as Joe Frazier's next major opponent, with the winner getting another shot at Ali.

You say you couldn't take a fourth Ali-Frazier meeting. Why not Gene Tunney and Harry Greb tangled five times, and a lot of people still kept coming out to see them . . . Richman.

She won cash as a 'chaser'

Gloria Ratliff now has something beside a fifth of scotch on her list of winnings.

The attractive Mrs. Ratliff is today's winner of the AFRO "Were You There" game, played for cash in each edition of the Baltimore AFRO. Her picture was snapped by photographer Ben Phillips at a recent Baltimore sports event and she came to the local office with the clipping Tuesday morning to collect her $5 check for being in the right place at the right time.

Mrs. Ratliff is the youngest of four daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Edward (Ruth) Owens. She also has nine brothers.

The only prize she had won previously, Mrs. Ratliff told the AFRO, was a fifth of scotch at a wheel at a bull roast.

A student at the Inner City Medical Institute where she is taking courses leading to a career as a physician's aide, Mrs. Ratliff attends the St. Pius Catholic Church.

Her husband, Charles, is a policeman and they live at 1901 N. Forest Park Ave.

Registration for spring swimming classes for children and adults may be made by calling the Baltimore Regional Red Cross at 467-9905 on Feb. 2 between 5 and 6 p.m. Openings will be filled on a first-come, first served basis.

The swimming courses, ranging from beginner to advanced life-saving, starts March 2 at Mergenthaler High School and March 3 at Northwestern High School. They will run for 10 weeks.

For further information, call Red Cross Water Safety Programs at 467-9905.

Contributions to the United Fund of Central Maryland help make this Red Cross service possible.

Baltimorean leads Springfield cagers

David Pugh of Baltimore, is the leading scorer for the Springfield College (Mass.) basketball team.

The 6-5 sophomore from Northwestern High School has tallied 236 points in 14 games as a starter, averaging 16.8 and 7.8 rebounds per game.

Star-studded array at NBA game scene

Al Attles, in his second straight year as All-Star coach, will have a star-spangled lineup on his West bench for use against the East in Tuesday's NBA All-Star game at Philadelphia.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Nate Archibald and Bob Dandridge will be joined by Rick Barry and Brian Winters in Attles' starting five. And among those in reserve will be James Wilkes, Phil Smith, Fred Brown, Curtis Rowe, Alvan Adams and Norm Van Lier.

But Boston's Tom Heinsohn also will have a scintillating group under his coaching of the East.

Starters will be Bob McAdoo, Elvin Hayes, Dave Bing and Walt Frazier, along with John Havlicek.

In reserve for Heinsohn will be Jo Jo White, George McGinnis, Randy Smith and John Drew, along with Dave Cowens, Doug Collins and Rudy Tomjanovich.

Coppin 5 seeks 20th cage win

Coach John Bates leads his highflying Coppin State Eagles to Richmond tomorrow (Saturday) in quest of their 20th win of the basketball season.

Coppin captured her 19th against two losses Tuesday night when she bounced Delaware State 99 at the North Ave. gym.

The Eagles lost to Morgan in the semi-final of the Metro Classic in early December in overtime. However, Bates and his charges insist they are the best team in the city.

Bears to find answer at SC

Morgan State University's prospects for the current basketball season may be determined in the upcoming week.

The Bear's hopes of returning to the pedestal they occupied two years ago when they gained No. 1 small college ranking, get a first answer tomorrow (Saturday) night at Orangeburg, S.C. They meet the S.C. State Bulldogs in a game that puts coach Nat Frazier's unbeaten (3-0) MEAC record on the line.

The Bulldogs are always tough on their home floor.

But the real test for the Bruins comes between Feb. 6 and Feb. 14. That is the period in which Morgan will be battling the unbeaten Feb. 6 and Feb. 14. defending champions, A and T, and N.C. Central four times in eight days.

The Aggies visit the Hill Field House Feb. 7 and then host the Bears Feb. 13 at Greensboro. The Eagles are the opponents here Feb. 6, and at Durham Feb. 14 . . . LACY.

Judge Bell knows the law

about 100 men on a 24-hour basis throughout the city. "We're in the process of informing all of our men right now," Wilson said.

F. E. Haag, manager of Burns Detective Agency declared, "We cannot get a license for special police. The governor appointed a special committee to look into this business and our association asked for special police privileges.

"We were told at that time that we didn't need it. They said we had citizens' power of arrest."

However, Lt. Clark insists "That you can't rent out police power so those men can't make arrests on the license of the agency.

"The law requires that each individual have a special police license in order to make arrests."

Why many agency owners have gotten away with the fact that the courts have simply ignored the law becomes a little clearer in looking over the requirements for special police licensing.

Section 63 of Article 41 says, in part, "No person shall be appointed a special policeman under this subtitle unless he is a citizen of the United States, of good moral character, and has not previously been convicted of a felony."

Speculation is that many security guards, hard-up for work, and agencies in dire need of men to protect business against thievery due to high unemployment, were hired without the formality of background checks.

Also, the requirements of the state are rather lengthy. Lt Clark says, "There are only 3,000 registered special police officers in the state.

"They were registered because their employers applied for a commission from the State Police. The commission costs about $10 for two years.

"That application is investigated by the Security Section of the governor's office. If the investigation is satisfactory the man is then called into Circuit Court where he is sworn in and licensed."

The question of what are the security guards going to do now is hard on the minds of the owners of the agencies.

One thing is certain, illegally charged cases before Judge Robert M. Bell will be thrown out. Declares, in contrast: "Just because it's been done that way for a long time doesn't make it right when the law is clearly to the contrary."

The solution, he suggests is a simple one:

"What do most people do when their lives or their property is endangered by someone?"

The answer: They call a cop.

Judge Bell concludes that that is a reasonable avenue for the security guards to consider when crimes are committed at their places of employment.

Joseph asks for plan the Hamilton Jr. High School PTA stated that his community would not accept Hamilton on shift beyond this school year. He requested that the Board find some way to end Hamilton's school shift problem.

Mrs. Jeanne Lauer, representative of the Regional Advisory Committee in Region 5 also made a plea to the Board to end the shift situation at Robert Poole Elementary School. Mrs. Lauer offered several suggestions for ending the problem.

The School Board also released a report showing that there is little change in the size of a typical class in the public schools this year over last.

The study shows that the median class size for elementary schools remains unchanged at 30 students per class; for junior high schools, 34 pupils per class. In contrast to 22 students in 1974 and for senior high school class size holding steady at 29 students.

The report further showed that 50 percent of the 3,273 elementary school classes have between 26 and 33 pupils each; 50 percent of the 7,051 junior high school classes have between 23 and 38 students, and 50 percent of the 5,668 senior high school classes have 20-35 pupils each.

The Board in other action, applauded Larry Burgan, chief of school security, for the job he and his staff were doing.

In an intensive investigation by the security office and the Arson Squad, three Douglass High School students were arrested earlier Thursday and charged with setting three minor fires at the school Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The investigation is continuing.

Also heard at the meeting were a resolution honoring Robert Schaefer, approval of Booklist No. 12 and a performance by the Temple Teen Choir, led by Ms. Patrice Baylor.

fire that was incendiary in nature."

A crime laboratory officer processed the scene and recovered the oil can containing a small amount of white liquid. The charred can with the colorless liquid was taken to headquarters.

The third fire Wednesday 11 a.m. was in the boiler room. Northwestern police reports show someone placed an oil can with gasoline in the ceiling which is being repaired. The can stuffed into a hole in the ceiling was then set on fire.

Damage is described as "moderate." The boiler room is concrete.

SUSPECT

Major Allender says the school aides monitoring the halls saw a suspect who escaped capture.

He is described as about age 18, wearing a short black leather coat with a fur colar, navy levis and white shoes.

Engine Company Truck 19 responded to the scene.

Speaking of the Tuesday fire, the principal said it took firemen 15 minutes to open a door to get to the closet blaze. They discovered after the door had been removed and the fire put out, that there was a small nail stuck in the lock.

Coupled with the gasoline repeats for the three successive days, the above incident caused Mr. Hagan to say, 'It has to be someone crazy. But, until we catch up with them or him, we don't know who it is.

"We have had normal schools days, nevertheless. The students are excellent. They go on about their studies, some of them quite unaware. We have had marvelous cooperation from everyone. The investigators have given complete cooperation."

25,000 property owners warned

(UPI) — Baltimore tax officials are telling about 25,000 property owners to pay their taxes or face having their property sold at auction.

City Taxman Phillip Holzman said most of the delinquent taxpayers, about a tenth of the city's total property owners, will make good on their bills before the summer sale.

The city sold 947 properties last year and a similar number is expected to be on the block in August.

"The defense clearly has an interest in protecting itself from prejudicial publicity," said Fishlow. "But no one has demonstrated that selecting a jury behind closed doors protects that right."

It took an order from the judge, but Miss Hearst will be allowed to get her hair cut.

Acting on a motion by Miss Hearst's attorneys, who said she needed to look her best at her bank robbery trial, Judge Carter signed an order permitting 21-year-old heiress to have her hair trimmed by another inmate at the San Mateo County Jail. The inmate, a beautician.

Without the judge's order, Miss Hearst would have cut her own hair.
