Western forces in Angola mobilize for strategic drive

LUSAKA, Zambia (UPI) — Western-backed forces are mobilized to drive Soviet-armed troops, reinforced with Soviet tanks and more Cuban troops, from a strategic crossroads near the pro-Western capital of Huambo in Angola, pro-West army sources said Wednesday.

The sources said troops of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola were moving on the Alto Hama Junction while bush units were striking behind the lines of the pro-Communist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola.

Alto Hama controls access to Huambo, 50 miles to the south, to the National Union military headquarters 100 miles east at Silva Porto and west to the Atlantic coastal towns of Lobit and Benguela.

In an effort to break to weeks-long stalemate around Huambo, the Popular Movement is ferrying Cuban soldiers to positions northeast of the capital by helicopters, the sources said.

National Union officials in Zambia said Soviet-made fighter planes piloted by cubans Monday bombed a Roman Catholic mission at Jamba, 90 miles northeast of Huambo, killing three nuns and two soldiers.

Western journalists in the Popular Movement capital of Luanda said the Communist-backed forces this week received new Soviet T-34 and T-54 tanks and more Cuban troops were arriving to aid in the fighting.

According to Zambian sources, the Popular Movement now has more than 250 Soviet tanks and Cuban regulars in Angola have topped 12,000.

Pro-West forces, routed from most of southern Angola and nearly all their northern strongholds, have recruited several hundred mercenaries in Western Europe to help in fresh assaults.

But their efforts have been hampered by a Zairean ban imposed earlier in the week on using the Angolan neighbor as a staging post for new fighting.

(In Moscow, Soviet Defense Minister Andrei Grechko Wednesday sent "fraternal greetings" to Enrique Tiles Carrera, his Popular Movement counterpart, to mark the 15th anniversary of the Marxist lin rebels nose[illegible] in West group's struggle for power.

(The message, published in military paper Red Star, wished the Popular Movement new successes in the "courageous struggle against foreign aggression and internal reaction for their homelands freedom and territorial integrity.")

(In Johannesburg, Defense Minister Piet Botha said Wednesday South Africa has between 4,000 and 5,000 troops inside Angola patrolling areas stretching from the Atlantic Ocean to the Zambian border.

(Botha told the Johannesburg Star the troops would be withdrawn once South Africa was satisfied Angolan rebels posed no threat to neighboring South West Africa).

amount that will be requested by the Department of Labor.

"We are currently having hearings on economic projections in the Budget Committee. An area of great concern is that this summer we shall experience rates of youth unemployment ranging from 16 per cent to 24 per cent, and as high as 40 per cent in the black community. We can ill afford to tolerate or sustain this level of unemployment among our youth. For that reason, I am requesting that we work cooperatively to correct the situation."

The Second Budget Resolution provides for 475 million dollars in budget authority and 75 million dollars in budget outlays for the Summer Youth Employment Program. Put another way, the budget provides for 785,000 jobs as opposed to the provision for 900,000 last summer.

Mitchell said, "Our budget figures are merley guides and were put in to ensure that there would be a Summer Youth Employment Program." He added:

"I hope and anticipate that the appropriate committees of the Congress will request and receive much more than the 475 million dollars in Budget authority."

appointment Judge Allen said:

"I have always taken my law seriously and as the ultimate idealist, I have felt that every problem that faced this country could be resolved by proper application of the laws.

"That includes all problems from massive ones like those dealing with the environment and the impact of racism and classism on our society, to small problems like the person who gets short weighted or who is ripped off by an auto repair service.

"I've just got to believe that there's a remedy for every wrong. I must continue to believe that the Constitution means exactly what it says and there is indeed equal protection for every citizen from every other citizen as well as from the government."

Allen referred to his concern for the "gap between the granting of important Constitutional rights and the full implementation of those rights."

In the end Judge Allen made his dedication. "To all of you" he said, "I pledge an earnest effort to be the best judge that my ability as a lawyer allows me to be, to work hard, to be fair and to never lose my sense of objectivity."

At the close of the ceremony Judge Allen greeted his well wishers at the north doorway of the courtroom. His wife, Martha, his son David stood at his side.

than an hour of Testimony.

"We ask the committee to thwart all those who would use and misuse the process by passing this law," he said as the crowd erupted into applause.

The original intent of the bill, first introduced last year, was to give the commission statutory authority to award monetary damages of up to two years salary and the authority to hire hearing examiners.

Representatives of the Chamber Of Commerce, who will testify when the hearings resume next week, said they also oppose the bill, but for different reasons.

"The bill carries a lot of the reforms we asked for, but we have taken the position that we cannot support the issue of monetary damages until we get all the procedural safeguards we need," said Sam Christine of the Chamber of Commerce.

The new procedures, which are so vigorously opposed by the commission, were devised by the chamber this past summer.

Committee Chairman Edward I. Conroy, D-Prince George's, said the committee last summer tried to weigh the positions of both the chamber and the Human Relations Commission to work out a compromise.

"No one's for it, they may just end up killing the bill," Conroy said.

Edelman told the committee the Commission would be better off with a simple bill to clear up the statutory problems with the monetary damage awards and another measure to provide hearing examiners to handle a huge backlog of cases.

Banktron.
The sensible way to get your money under control.

These days, a lot of people—maybe you?—feel they aren't in control of their own money. And some banks just add to the confusion. They make you juggle all kinds of paperwork and different account numbers for checking, savings and loans. They make it tougher than it should be to balance your checkbook. You write checks in a nice orderly fashion—one, two, three, four—and they show up on your statement listed three, one, four, two. On top of all that, you have to pay to write checks on your own money. Does that make sense? Of course not.

What does make sense is Maryland National's Banktron account. Banktron is a flexible program revolving around an interest-earning savings account. Flexible because it gives you enough options to pick and choose the money-managing services right for you. And the options keep increasing as we create more and better ways to serve you. In more ways than one, Banktron is the sensible way to control your money. These are the ways:

The basics:
- No-charge Checking (with $500 or more in Banktron savings)
- One Account Number for Checking, Savings, Loans
- Consolidated Monthly Statement
- Sequential Check Listing
- 5% Daily Interest on Savings, Paid Monthly

The options:
- Telephone Transfer
- Notification of Higher Interest Eligibility
- Automatic Savings
- Overdraft Protection
- 24-Hour BankQuik Stations

Call or visit a Maryland National office today for full details on Banktron. You'll see why we say it's the sensible way to get your money under control.
