Dr. Whitten's Vocational Ed. Division has something for everyone

Carpenter, baker, cabinet maker

Dr. Benjamin C. Whitten is executive director of one of the most important divisions of the Baltimore school system, the Department of Vocational Education.

In this day and age, preparation to enter the world of work is a must and many students realize they must get an early start.

Parents and the town's citizens were invited to become acquainted with the division's curriculum and accomplishments toward this end during this past week's open house at all the vocational schools.

Dr. Whitten's role as administrator was also accented as the vast program was opened for inspection.

• • •

The six vocational schools are James Addams, Fairmount Hill, Carver, Mergenthaler, Samuel Gompers and Woodrow Wilson.

Some 45 courses are available to teach skills in needle trades, business, cosmetology, carpentry, baking, automobile maintenance, electronics and upholstery.

Each school has job placement counselors, Mergenthaler and Carver's national prize-winning programs offer college entrance background.

A highlight was the Parents' Workshop Wednesday morning. Panelists were Dr. Whitten, Mrs. Lucille Goreman, chairman, Region 2 Advisory Council; Region 2 Superintendent Mrs. Thelma Cox, Elzee Gladden, Fairmount Hill principal, Robert Lee and Fred Nims, officials in vocational education.

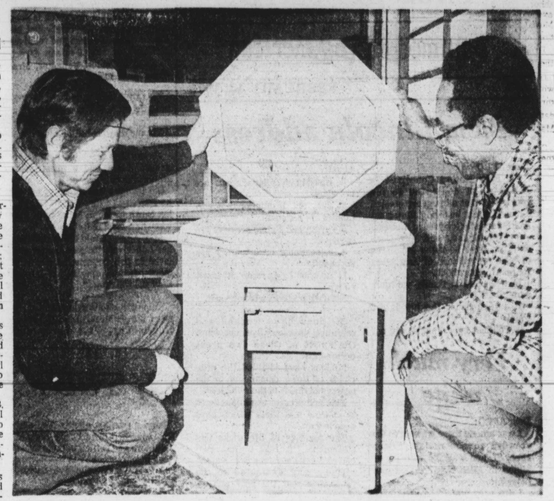
Dr. Whitten's duties as central office chief came in 1973 after he had served three years as area superintendent for Vocational Education. From 1968 to 1970, he was director of the division.

He was from 1966 to 1968, the principal of Cherry Hill Junior High and 1964 to 1966, principal at Granville T. Woods, a general vocational junior high vocational school.

Previously, he was Carver vice-principal and at the beginning of his career in 1948, a woodwork teacher at Druid Hill and Houston Junior High Schools. He earned a doctor of education degree in industrial arts education at Pennsylvania State University in 1961. A resident of Morgan Park, he and his wife have one son.

In addition to being a member of the board of the Baltimore Junior Achievement Program and many other organizational and service leadership groups, Dr. Whitten is president of the National Association of Large City Directors of Vocational Education.

DR. WHITTEN and Lloyd Alston beam with pride at the artistic hand of Miss Cheryl Williams, 18, as she styles Miss Lydia Washington's hair.



CABINET MAKING INSTRUCTOR Erno P. Schultz and Dr. Ben Whitten admire the finely carved piece a Mergenthaler student fashioned.

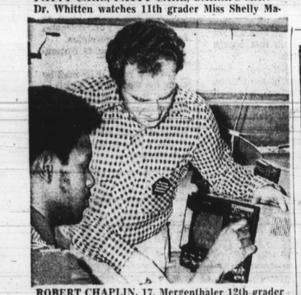
Vocational Ed. Week

Dr. Benjamin Whitten heads the city school's Vocational Education Division, a department which has some 4,000 students engaged in learning valuable skills in trades.

This week was open house in each school as parents and citizens from the community arrived as guests to look and see for themselves.

Demonstrations and tours were featured as the students proudly showed upholstery, electrical mechanics, needlework and beauty culture.

PATTY CAKE, PATTY CAKE, BAKER'S MAN— Dr. Whitten watches 11th grader Miss Shelly Mason 16, and 12th grader Donald Trish, 18, baking.



ROBERT CHAPLIN, 17, Mergenthaler 12th grader works with an oscilliscope while Milton S. Wilson, computer technology instructor watches the operation.

EVERETT B. JOHNSON is education specialist in trade and industry for the department.

Dr. Joyce named head of Goldseker Foundation

DR. MICHAEL JOYCE

Michael S. Joyce, social scientist, educator and author, has been appointed executive director of the Morris Goldseker Foundation of Maryland, Inc.

Dr. Joyce is serving as the first executive director of the new foundation, which will be one of the three or four largest foundations in the State of Maryland.

• • •

Created by the will of the late Baltimore businessman, the Morris Goldseker Foundation of Maryland, Inc., will make grants to organizations and programs located in the greater Baltimore metropolitan area consisting of Baltimore City and Baltimore, Anne Arundel, Howard, Carroll and Harford Counties. Qualifying institutions must adhere to non-discriminatory standards of equal opportunity as to race, creed and color.

Mr. Goldseker's wish was that special consideration should be given to aid and encourage the continuation of education, establishment of persons in business, overcoming adversity due to accident or illness and maintenance and support.

• • •

To aid the trustees in selecting and determining the charitable organizations to which distribution shall be made, the trustees have formed a selection committee comprised of the president of Johns Hopkins University, currently Dr. Steven Muller; president of Morgan State University, currently Dr. Andrew Billingsly, and the president of the Associated Jewish Charities and Welfare Fund, currently Jcak Pearlstone.

Now residing in downtown Baltimore with his wife, Maureen, whose family lives in Anne Arundel County, Dr. Joyce comes from Cleveland, Ohio, where he was Assistant to the president of the Educational Research Council of America.

Memphis landlord to pay $157,000 in bias suit

The Department of Justice obtained a consent decree requiring an apartment management firm in Memphis, Tenn. to pay upwards of $157,000 in free rent or cash to black persons who were denied apartment rentals.

Attorney General Edward H. Levi said a housing discrimination suit and the decree resolving the issues were filed in U.S District Court in Memphis.

The settlement was negotiated with Fogelman Management Corp., which manages 34 apartment complexes containing 7,000 units in the Memphis area.

The money damages are the largest ever obtained in a fair-housing case brought by the Justice Department.

The suit charged that Fogelman violated the Fair Housing Act of 1968 by pursuing a policy and practice of racial discrimination in the rental of apartments including the refusal to rent to blacks and the misrepresentation to blacks that there were no vacancies.
