BALTIMORE RETAIL FOOD PRICE REPORT

Beans in season

By Helen M. Huber Marketing Specialist Dept. of Agriculture

Budget-wise and nutrition-wise, dried beans are bargain food buys for satisfying cold weather meals. Beans are among the best sources of protein, iron, thiamine and riboflavin. Beans are a good meat substitute. When buying, figure that a pound of dried beans will make seven to nine ¾ cup servings. Store in a tightly closed bag in a cool, dry place until they are used. A quick and effectvie way to soak dried beans is to start by boiling them in water for two minutes, remove from heat, soak for an hour and then they are ready to cook.

If tomatoes, catsup or vinegar are to be added to beans, wait until they have cooked almost tender. Acids will delay their softening if added early in the cooking period.

Morgan sets Decision Day for high school grads

The Office of Admissions at Morgan State University will conduct "Morgan Decision Days" at several high schools.

Admissions counselors will be visiting Forest Park on Feb. 17 at 11 a.m. and Eastern on Feb. 18 at 11 a.m.

"Decision Days" are selected periods in which Morgan State University admissions counselors expedite the admissions process by providing prospective students with counseling and on-the-spot decisions regarding the acceptability of their applications for admission.

The on-the-spot decision requires the following: completed admissions application, ten dollars application fee or waiver request, transcript, SAT-scores, if available.

All interested students are encouraged to consult with their high school counselors concerning Morgan "Decision Days." For further information, contact the Morgan State University Office of Admissions.

This is national cherry month

This is Cherry month and Cherry Colettes are perhaps one of the most charming of French desserts.

They are a coquette's delight, very pretty and very saucy. The distinctive flavors of crunchy filberts and crisp almond-flavored maraschino blend in a Creme Chantilly which is heaped into fluted chocolate shells.

The Chantilly is just whipped cream which may be folded into the trifle or used as a topping.

A proper Chantilly garnish is never just plunked on . . . It is piped, or heaped or swirled. Delicate stemmed cherries crown the colettes.

Cherry Filbert Colettes

(Chocolate Shells with Cherry Trifle)
(Makes 8 servings)

2 packages (6 ounces each) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
2 tablespoons shortening
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
8 stemmed red maraschino cherries

Combine chocolate and shortening. Melt, stirring occasionally, in the top of a double boiler over hot, but not boiling water. Cool until slightly thickened. Line eight 2¾-inch cupcake pans with fluted paper baking cups. Coat insides of cups with chocolate and chill until firm. Remove paper cups from chocolate shells. Fill chocolate shells with Cherry Trifle, given below. Top with whipped cream and whole cherries.

To Make Cherry Trifle:

3 cups finely diced pound cake
Two-thirds cup finely chopped red maraschino cherries, drained
¼ cup filberts, chopped
¼ cup sherry, or maraschino cherry syrup

Blend all ingredients thoroughly. Spoon into chilled chocolate shells.

*If desired, 1 to 2 tablespoons sherry or cherry syrup may be folded into the whipped cream.

Brown flour in a heavy fry pan. Remove flour from pan and blend with 2 tablespoons of the butter or margarine. Brown the onion in the remaining butter or margarine.

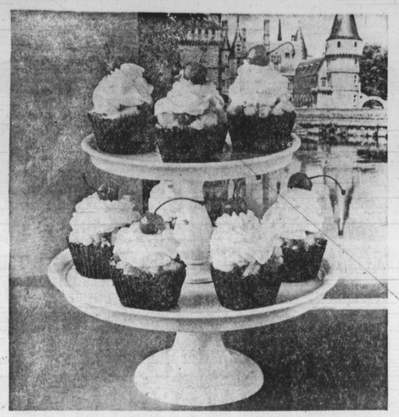
Add other ingredients, except cheese and cook about 10 minutes, add the cheese and stir until melted. Pour over thin, crisp toast, and garnish, if desired, with slices of hard cooked egg. Serves 6.

Cherries In Wine

College al vino barolo
8 pounds fresh ripe cherries, pitted
2¾ cups sugar
1 stick cinnamon
4 strips orange rind (no white part)
8 cups Barolo wine (or any good-quality Italian red wine)
½ cup currant jelly

Place the cherries in an enamel saucepan and add the remaining ingredients. Cook over moderate heat until the mixture comes to a boil. Lower heat and cook for 10 minutes. Pour into a bowl, and place in the refrigerator until well chilled.

Serves 6.



FROM THE HAUTE Cuisine of France come beautiful desserts that add an elegant touch to meals or entertaining. These are Cherry Colettes, fluted chocolate shells filled with a trifle of chopped cherries and filberts, a swirl of chantilly cream and topped with long stemmed Maraschinos.

Food clips

As you reach the end of each enriched loaf of bread, drop the crusts into your blender. You'll have bread crumbs in seconds — and they'll stay fresh for weeks in a plastic bag in your freezer.

Wholewheat and rye crumbs add zest to enriched white bread — so mix them up for a flavorful casserole topping and for other favorite breaded entrees.

Cut left-over bread crusts into cubes, pop them into a plastic bag and into the freezer. Soon you'll have enough for casseroles, stuffings, etc.

Is home canning really worth it?

Getting ready for the home canning season? Or — did you put "food by" last year and decide "never again!" Did you use the food you preserved last season?

Remember all those preserves, pickles, and tomatoes you canned . . . did that meet your family needs? Did you have enough for your extra dinner guest, too? If not, maybe you should plan differently this year.

Dr. Evelyn Johnson, of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Extension Service, suggests you plan for just one season at a time. You don't have to plan to "hold up" for the winter as most of our forefathers did.

With the cost of food going up and down you are never sure whether it will be cheaper next week (and who knows about next year!) or considerably more expensive.

Home preservation of food saves money — doesn't it? "Not always," according to Dr. Johnson.

Lack of home storage facilities prevent most families from planning too far ahead anyway, but one season is just about enough according to Dr. Johnson. You should plan to make use of your jars more than once a year — go with the time for tomatoes and then green beans and so on with your plans.

Although foods held many months are safe to eat, remember, the longer you keep your food the more chance the quality of the food may be reduced. There is almost always some loss in quality, and even in color, if you keep your preserved food on the shelf too long.

Did you have any trouble last year with food spoilage? Did you remember to date all the jars? That's important!

As you used your home canned foods, did you also check the supermarket for a comparative item to see how the costs compared to your home product? Did you actually save time, money and energy by canning? If so, how much?

If you still plan to can, get your jars and equipment ready by washing them early and checking the jars and the rings. Check the gasket for the pressure canner — is it working properly? Do you have your instruction book handy so that when you start you can be sure you're right?

Home canners should consider:

— Adequate space is necessary for storage. If your canned foods are stored in a cold area, the food may freeze and jars burst. If your canned foods are stored in an overheated storage space, the quality of the food is lowered;

— Creativity in canning and canning without exact instructions may result in food waste and possibly family illness due to food spoilage;

— Unless you are absolutely sure of your canning methods, boil home canned foods 10 minutes or more;

— Remember, some foods (for example, carrots) are available year around at reasonable cost.

Canning — still probably the most economical and practical method of preserving food in the home provides a feeling of personal accomplishment — It brings family members together in creative activity, provides security in having food within arm's reach and offers a supply of food prepared according to family preferences and spec dietary needs.

If you didn't enjoy the fruits of your labor . . . or if you "overcanned" you should contact your county extension agent for some help in planning before you start this year.
