Inner city physician 55 years is 82 today

Dr. J. E. T. Camper, physician, civic worker and humanitarian, marks his 82nd birthday today, (Friday, Feb. 27.).

He is proudest of the fact that although semi-retired, he still serves as a general practitioner in the heart of the inner city.

He and his family live at 639 N. Carey St., in west Baltimore, which is also the site of his office. This June will mark 56 years as a physician.

Relatives note that Dr. Camper's reputation as an exceptional general practitioner is equalled only by his reputation for keen understanding of his fellow human beings and his desire to help them with their problems.

Of his long life, he says, "I never expected to reach age 60. My people were not known to live long, but my wife has taken good care of me." He adds his lack of dissipation and active participation in athletics also helped.

Born John Emory Toussaint Camper, the beloved physician was one of five children of John Hayward Camper and Mary Jane Cromwell Camper, direct descendants of early free black residents, the Cromwells and Campers, who came to Baltimore from the Eastern Shore.

When he was 2, the family moved to Sparrows Point where his father was the principal of Sparrows Point Elementary School for Colored, and John was enrolled.

Three years later, because of his father's illness, the family moved to Towson in Baltimore County.

Two months after their arrival his father died. This tragedy was quickly followed by another one which saw the oldest sister, Blanche, dead six weeks later.

His mother was left to care for the family. She returned to teaching in the public schools of Baltimore where she had previously taught five years before her marriage.

A graduate of Morgan College, she was one of that small group to become the first black teachers in the Baltimore public schools.

After he completed the seventh grade, his mother moved to Baltimore in order to further the education of her son. (At that time this was the end of the line for black children in Baltimore County.

While the county supplied a four - year higt school for its white population, it made no further preparation for them beyond the seventh grade. The other children had already been placed in Baltimore city schools.)

John Emory was enrolled in the eighth grade at old P.S. No. 112, then located at Carey and School Sts. The late Mr. George B. Murphy Sr. was principal.

After graduation from the old Colored High School at Dolphin St. and Pennsylvania Ave, young Camper entered Howard University and earned a B.S. degree

He was a three letter man in track, basketball and football and an all American football player for four consecutive years. In addition, he was line coach at Morgan and later coached at Morgan College from 1921-1922.

In the spring of 1917, he enlisted in Officer's Training School at Fort Des Moines, Iowa. After which he returned to Howard University Medical School. He received his medical degree in 1920.

He married the former Louise G. Nixon. They had four children, John, Jr., Ellen Louise, Mary Cornelia and Nixon Alfred.

Some years later he married Florine Thompson Irvin and from that marriage came Jean Beverly and an adopted daughter, Elizabeth Ruth.

Dr. Camper's career as a physician from the days of the old Provident Hospital where he was a visiting staff member—is intimately tied up with the growth of the city.

For over 50 years, he has been involved not only in healing people, but in fighting to improve living conditions and opportunities for his fellew citizens.

He has been an ardent and hardworking member of numerous committees fighting for equal rights for all citizens.

* * *

Dr. Camper was a member of the Maryland Crime Investigating Commission, Criminal Justice Commission, the Jail Board, and Governor's Commission on Problems Affecting the Black Population.

He was chairman of the Citizen's Committee for Justice, a citywide organization which led 2,000 in a March on Annapolis in 1942, to protest police brutality, inequality in jobs and lack of representation on state boards and to urge uniformed police officers for Baltimore city.

He was the first to serve as a member of the board of managers of the Crownsville State Hospital, changing the image of that mental institution then known as a burial grounds for mentally ill.

He helped raise monies, secured from fellow members of the Me-De-So Club and ministers, to support the equal job opportunity drive in industrial plants during World War II. Out of this effort came a manpower training school for black job seekers.

* * *

Dr. Camper is a member of numerous organizations. He is a life member of the NAACP and for 30 years served on the Baltimore branch executive board during the presidency of the late Dr. Lillie M. Jackson.

He has been active in and served as president of the Frontiers International, the Falcon Rod and Gun Club, Zeta Sigma Chapter of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity.

He is a charter member of the Me-De-So Club, the organization of medical men mentioned above, and belongs to the Howard University Alumni Association; Monumental Medical Society- Maryland Medical Society; National Medical Society.

For his superior public service to the community without thought of personal gain, Dr. Camper won a place on the AFRO-AMERICAN's 1948 Honor Roll.

He has also won the certificate of merit from the Howard University Baltimore Alumni.

His hobbies have included hunting, fishing, trapshooting, reading, football, basketball and horse racing.

He attends Whitestone Baptist Church of which the Rev. W. H. Thompson is pastor.

Asked the proudest moment of his life Dr. Camper told a reporter, "When I graduated from high school I thought I had conquered the world. I had on my first long pants.

"I am proud of the accomplishments of my kids. I live in my children. That's really what we live to accomplish.

"In our children we expect to make a contribution in helping to make a better community. We taught our children to stand up and not be cowards; fight for what they believe in.

"My father would have been very proud of his grandchildren. I wish he had lived to see them. He wanted his children and grandchildren to help our race."

His advice to young people is "Work hard. Get a good education, understand that you are competing in a world—not just a black world."

"You must get the same tools others have in order to take full advantage of all opportunities."

About his family—Dr. Camper's sisters were the late Amanda Blanch Camper and Tryphena Maria Camper.

His brothers are A. Haywood Camper of Albuquerque, New Mexico and Dr. Douglass J. Camper, former dentist and teacher of Baltimore.

His children are, John E. T. Camper, Jr., Mrs. Ellen C. Johns, principal of

Goldseker Foundation opens headquarters

Maryland leaders in education, social welfare, culture hospitals, foundations, community agencies, businesses and other groups on Wednesday, welcome Michael S. Joyce, the executive director for the Morris Goldseker Foundation of Maryland Inc.

The reception also showed off the newly opened headquarters at 300 N. Charles St. Among trustees is Dr. Andrew Billingsley, president of Morgan State University.

Morris Goldseker, businessman and philanthropist over 50 years, willed his fortune to be used to benefit tax-exempt charitable organizations, which by loans or grants give aid and encouragement to worthy individuals for education to establish themselves in business.

With assets in excess of $10 million, distributions the first year may exceed $500,000 to go also to persons who overcome adversity, accident or illness or maintain support of themselves and their families.

Aslo eligible for funds are institutions which serve Baltimore city and the metropolitan area, Anne Arundel, Harford, Carroll and Howard Counties. The first grants will be made after May 1, 1976.

Management of assets and investment of funds are the responsibility of the board of trustees composed of Sheldon Goldseker, Simon Goldseker and the Equitalbe Trust Co.

The trustees act on recommendations of a Selection Committee, presently composed of Dr. Andrew Billingsley, Dr. Steven Muller, president of Hopkins University and J. H. Pearlstone Jr., president of the Associated Jewish Charities and Welfare Fund.

"Tonight we salute these individuals because of their untiring efforts, capable leadership and Christian spirit that has made someone else a little straighter.

"To you we say thanks be to God and may your light continue to shine."

Charles E. Coger, president of the Sunday School and Baptist Training Union of Maryland, made the above statement last Thursday.

The occasion was the annual fellowship and awards dinner honoring 44 people for outstanding service in their church.

LARGEST GATHERING

According to Coger, "This is one of the largest Baptist gatherings in the city."

The 1,150 people who attended the three- hour affair represented 97 Baptist churches.

Augutus Adair a Morgan State University instructor said, "Don't tell anybody because we are Christians we are all clean and don't need to pray sometime.

"We have come through a season of political corruption in this country and it makes Christians nervous.

"Everbody is corrupt. The churches did not escape corruption. We will never improve the church we represent being small. The Lord has called us to spread the Gospel. That is our mission."

HONOREES

During the dinner, the following persons received awards: Mesdames Ruth V. A. Bailey, Pearl Barnett, Theodora V. Boone, Sophia Chambers, Anna Coleman, Adeline Davis, Jessie Lee Douglas. Babysitter convicted of scalding boy

Ernest McFall Jr., 24, 500 block Laurens St., was sentenced to 10 years in prison for assaulting a 7-year-old boy by placing him in water that caused first and second degree burns of the buttock and legs.

Chief Judge Anselm Sodaro imposed sentence Feb. 26 in Criminal Court.

According to court records, McFall was babysitting for his girl-friend, Ms. Valerie Simpson while she was working at a school Sept. 18.

James Schneider the prosecutor, told the court large scars were left where skin was taken from other parts of his body to cover up the seared areas.

Ms. Simpson was coming home from work Sept. 18, 1975 when she met McFall and her two children on the street. McFall told Ms. Simpson Rodney had received leg burns while in the bath tub and he was taking him to the hospital.

McFall told the court he was giving Rodney a bath and had to leave him in the tub because the landlord came to look at the roof.

However, the landlord testified he did look at the roof, but McFall did not come out of the house.

Rodney's 9-year-old sister, Angela testified how her brother would scream when he was in pain. Rodny remained in the hospital for one month and is still under psychiatric care.
