Dr. Holmes says he'll keep westside animal hospital

Dr. Eugene Holmes says, "I am quite optimistic at this time that I will be able to get the money and make the necessary adjustments that will keep the hospital open."

The soft spoken veterinarian thus informed the AFRO he is making every effort to keep the North Fulton Animal Hospital open for the residents of that West Baltimore community. The hospital is located in the 2200 block North Fulton Ave.

A question of the hospital's future arose some weeks ago when the Board of Veterinary Medical Examiners recommended that unless Dr. Holmes' hospital brought its sanitary conditions up to par the hospital be closed and he be removed from the board.

At the time Dr. Holmes announced that if he were not able to meet the standards he would "resign or relocate."

* * *

However, developments of recent days have been encouraging.

He told the AFRO, "I have been working with a couple of institutions on loans and I believe that in a couple of weeks the situation will be taken care of."

Dr. Holmes, one of only two practicing medical veterinarians in Baltimore and of five in the entire state is the first black vet appointed to the Board of Veterinary Medical Examiners.

He became a member of that body, which conducts examinations for license in the state and reviews complaints, on July 1, 1975.

* * *

He has been a practicing veterinarian in Baltimore since 1965.

A native of Delaware, Dr. Holmes came to Baltimore in 1962 after graduating from Tuskegee's School of Veterinarian Medicine. Before opening his hospital he worked in public health, Research Gerontology, at City Hospitals.

Upon his announcement that he would resign if unable to meet sanitary standards, Dr. Holmes said, "The issue of sanitation is shown all out of proportion.

* * *

"My number one problem is not sanitation but space. Recent rulings require special equipment, more space and specific purposes for that space. To meet that obligation I have bought the building next door." Once the loans are confirmed Dr. Holmes plans to expand his hospital to include space in the adjoining building.

When asked about the obvious lack of medical veterinarians practicing in the city and state Dr. Holmes said, "In the beginning blacks just missed the boat; we were not interested. Now that we are, it's almost impossible to get into veterinarian school."

He said the main difficulty in getting in is overcrowdedness.

Ford's club, others still investigated

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A prestigious Montgomery County Country Club Monday agreed to cooperate with a state attorney general's investigation of discriminatory membership practices by surrendering copies of its club roster.

The Kenwood Country Club is one of 20 Maryland clubs, including Burning Tree where President Ford golfs, which have been threatened with loss of substantial tax breaks over the discrimination issue.

The state began checking the tax status of the clubs after they either made incomplete responses to a state questionnaire or indicated that their membership was homigenous.

* * *

During Monday's hearing, club officers said that although the club has no black members, blacks are allowed as guests and often participate in parties and play golf at the club.

They indicated that the guest rules have relaxed considerably since 1970 when the club was charged with barring blacks from the club.

The exclusive Kenwood Development, where the club is located, at one time was racially restrictive, meaning blacks could not purchase homes there.

The records provided by Kenwood show that its 2 075 members are draw from throughout the Washington area, not limited t the exclusive Kenwood de velopment.

Between five and 10 pe cent of the club's member ship are Jewish, according to the officers.

The question of 20 club, tax status arose because a state law allowing a tax break to encourage mint nance of open spaces ir congested areas.

According to the law, clubs discriminating cannot qualify for the tax break, which ranges from 25 to 50 per cent of the assessed valuation of the golf course land.
