Testimonial for Henry C. Johnson

By Bettye Moss

It was 10:40 p.m. Friday when he moved to the microphone and looked out on the nearly 500 guests who had spent the past 90 minutes saluting him.

The audience at Blue Crest North was hushed as tall, handsome Henry C. Johnson began to acknowledge the accolades and to praise those who participated in the two-hour tribute.

The testimonial banquet was arranged to honor the educator for his 34 years' service to Baltimore city public schools. He retired last June as principal of Carver Vocational Technical High.

Mr. Johnson's remarks followed tributes in song, words and moving pictures by some 32 persons.

* * *

His face showed he was a happy man. His words reflected it:—

"Can you imagine my emotions at this time. I don't think you can, really, because I can't describe to you really, what it means to have my very dear friend, the Rev. Dr. William King here from Detroit, the man who saw me grow up in Lexington, Ky., and who was the greatest influence for good in my life, second only, I guess, to my parents.

"To have him here with his good wife at this stage in my career, it's certainly wonderful, to have this played before me, hundreds of people, all of whom who have had a part in my career, friends, co-workers, associates, former students, former bosses, Carver staff people, Carver workers, make me realize how fortunate I am."

* * *

There were audible 'amens,' as he continued:

I must say that this evening, I am grateful to Almighty God for giving me life, strength, and the wisdom to lead a successful life.

"I thank God for leading me into a profession where I could work with people. I am grateful, too, for a good wife who has stood by my side through the years giving encouragement and support.

"Any successes that I have had, I owe in a large measure to my good wife, Cordelia (applause.)

"We have made so many friends as evidenced by this group tonight. Friends, both living and dead, all of whom have made my career possible and successful.

"I am grateful to the Carver Vocational Technical High School and the many friends who have made this evening possible. I realize that not many men are blessed to retire and to be treated to an evening such as this. . . ."

Lloyd White, a member of the Carver faculty, presided. He set the tone for the evening when he announced, "Tonight is Henry's night". And indeed it was.

Department of Education's greetings were brought by Mrs. Ruth Pratt speaking for Dr. John L. Crew the interim superintendent; Dr. Paul L. Vance, the associate superintendent and Dr. Dr. Benjamin Whitten, director of vocational education. All three praised Mr. Johnson as an outstanding, teacher and administrator. They made specific reference to his leadership towards the improvements made at the present site located at Pressman and Bentalou Sts.

DAUGHTER — Miss Carole Elaine Johnson, pictured at testimonial for her father, Henry C. Johnson. She is a work study coordinator at Baltimore's Southwestern High.

They cited the air conditioning; designed the course in stationary engineering; and in his own right was an outstanding cabinet maker.

They recalled how students under his direction constructed a Hepplewhite Mirror Box similar to those used in 1700.

This was presented to Mrs. John F. Kennedy at a special ceremony at the White House and is still a part of the White House furnishings.

* * *

Former Carver administrators, Reuben Jones who retired as principal in 1969 and Miss Carrie A. Johnson, retired assistant principal remembered him for the help he gave them during their career and welcomed him to the largest and best fraternity in the world, "The Unemployed Retiree".

Mrs. Nellie H. Moore a family friend, used an original verse and recalled his love and respect for his mother which she said had stood him in good stead in his later life.

Frederick Edwards, a '56 graduate of Carver and a '60 graduate of Hampton, of which the honoree is also a graduate, is now a specialist in the schools.

He remembered that his class was the first to graduate from the new Carver and said of the honoree, "He was the most important teacher and influence in my life. He was a person who was interested in a student's personal development.

* * *

Dennis P. Mello, a former Baltimore City police captain recalled the cooperation of Mr. Johnson when he supervised at Western police district and provided security service for the school.

Dr. Simon Carter, the school physician talked of his "real caring for children."

AFRO publisher, Elizabeth Murphy Moss, praised him as one who was always giving loving service.

Wiley Daniels, Channel 13 news reporter talked of concern for youngsters and the contributions he made to their development which he observed on his many visits to the school when he was assigned to cover events.

* * *

Mrs. Vondalee H. Clarke, regional superintendent, area 7 characterized him as being honest, fair, courageous, possessing high standards for students and staff. "One who ran a tight ship but loyal friend and an honest counselor to me."

* * *

Congressman Parren J. Mitchell, (D-7) saw Mr. Johnson as a symbol found in so many people in our community . . . . a symbol of what we all are about fighting and working for others."

A cousin, Mrs. John B. Murphy came with her husband from their home in San Antonio, Texas, where she is a retired teacher.

She brought greetings on behalf of the family.

The Rev. W. Judson King, came from Detroit with his wife. He formerly pastored First Congregational Church in Mr. Johnson's hometown, Lexington, Ky., the church formerly pastored by Mr. Johnson's father, the late Rev. William L. Johnson.

He remembered the honoree as one who gave promise of going somewhere. "He had a mind of his own and his peers did not dictate his morals. He showed promise early and that promise has come to fruition."

* * *

Presentation were made by Mrs. Patti Page for Hampton Alumni; Mrs. Josephine Brown from the Carver faculty; Mrs. June Cooper, the Congress of Parents-Teachers; Harrison Fuller, Omega Psi Phi Fraternity.

There were also presentations to Mr. and Mrs. Johnson from the Douglas Memorial Church, Carver Alumni, the Cornelias Club.

J. Milton Belcher, present principal of Carver praised staff and guests for their contributions and hailed the honoree for leaving him big shoes to fill but noted the job was easier because Mr. Johnson had served and served well. The Rev. Marion C. Bascom, misister of Douglas Memorial, said the prayers.

* * *

The arrangement committee included, Mrs. Sara P. Johnson, Mrs. Doris Jackson, Mrs. Ethel Bond, Mrs. Kathryn Bradford, Mrs. Josephine Brown, Mr. Clyde Bryant, Ms. Patricia Harcarik, Mrs. Katherine Barnes McCargo, Mrs. Rosalind McIntyre, Mrs. Ruth Ricks, Mr. Stephen Warminski and Mrs. Alethia Williams.

Columbia Capers

. . . by Pinnie L. Ross

Dr. Jesse Clay, assistant to the president for academic affairs at Howard University, is on a nine-day mission leave in Liberia, West Africa. The Rev. William O. Jackson, father - in - law of Dr. Clay, is missionary president of the Afro-American Crusade and has a mission station there.

"Good things come to those who wait" and it happened to Dr. Clay. According to his lovely wife Yvonne, he has always had high hopes of visiting Liberia.

While in Liberia Dr. Clay will set up an educational program and hire qualified staff to operate it. He will also do missionary work, which is a total part of him to visit the sick and shut-in. Dr. Clay is chairman of the Workshop Task Force at St. John's Baptist Church, an ardent church worker.

A reception was held last week in honor of a former Columbian, Arthur Fletcher. The affair was held in the Senate Caucus Room in the Old Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. It was sponsored by The Council of 100, an organization of black Republicans.

Fletcher has been appointed as the deputy assistant to the President for Urban Affairs. Prior to this recent appointment, he held many outstanding positions: Former assistant secretary for Wage and Labor Standards, delegate to the United Nations, owner of a private consultant firm and as a consultant to the Republican Committee.

Standing close by Mr. Fletcher's side for much of the evening was his charming wife, Bernice.

Comments were received from Senator Edward Brooke, Hugh Scott, John Tower of Texas, House Minority Whip John Rhodes, Congressman Charles Diggs. All speakers admonished black representatives to seek congressional office in the upcoming election.

Fletcher is a native of Wichita, Kansas, and a former Baltimore Colt football player.

Samuel C. Jackson, Esq., former assistant secretary of Housing and Urban Development, is chairman of The Council of 100.

These beautiful college students are tome on their short breaks and are having a "living ball—" shopping sprees, and just relaxing at home. Donna Hill, freshman at Princeton University, where she plays on the basketball team, tells me she has been "hooking it" for the pass three days, but plans to have fun over the weekend. She is the daughter of Don and Ethel Hill.

Beth Woodland kept her mother, Ada, quite busy during her break. She is a graduating senior at Tufts University, Boston. Beth is George Woodland.

Karen Cornick, a freshman also at Tufts, is keeping herself extremely busy while at home. Mother, Helen, says she barely gets to see her. (Cuff note) I known what you mean, when you have a daughter who is popular, that's what happens. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs Delroy (Helen) Cornick (Mr. Cornick is a Morgan State instructor and Mrs. Cornick is a D.C. school teacher).

Celonia Walden was home from Howard University. She is a freshman there and thinks it's the best school and is doing extremely well. Why not, Mom and Dad both are graduates from Howard. They are Dr. and Mrs. Emerson (Celonia) Walden.

Freddie Barnes, son of Barbara Barnes, C. A. 's financial executive, flew in from Ohio where he is attending college. He is a former Oakland Mills basketball star.
