—New City Hall

desk and a scagliola effect. Scagliola is painting over plaster to resemble marble. Mirrors in the room are original.

The office is usually used by the mayor on Wednesdays for official proclamations and meeting with residents and visitors and on Thursdays for press conferences.

On the fourth floor is the office of the president of the City Council.

When City Hall was first built, the city legislature consisted of two houses, making it bi-cameral.

One of the old chambers now serves as the present meeting hall of the one-house council. The other hall of the old chambers served as a formal meeting room.

Convenient lounges are outside council chambers.

There are three councilmen each for the six city districts. In this renovated chamber you can see the original scagliola columns capped with solid brass-work.

Gas originally lit this room and heat came from a fireplace.

The offices of the council president adjoins the chambers.

The Rotunda was the original public area and focal point of City Hall. It and two courtyards rise the entire height of the building and allow natural light into the interior.

At the top of the rotunda can be seen a stained glass work by a local artist that was part of the original City Hall.

The Seal of Baltimore is surrounded by figures representing Commerce, Agriculture, Manufacturing and the Arts. During the restoration this was uncovered.

The last stop of the visit was the lower level of City Hall where records were stored. The records were damaged by dampness.

This area will be the home of the City Law Department. Featured are original architectural details and brick arches.

This area will also be used as a display space.

City officials expect the entire structure to be operable by the end of the year.

LORMAN, Miss — John D. Holland was elected vice chairman at the recent meeting of the Alesrn State University Foundation, Inc. Board of Directors. Holland is a vice president at MP and L in Jackson.
