the right to call the Wednesday case into consideration.

The dictionary's definition of "stet" is "Let it Stand."

No witnesses were called, even though the Rev. Mr. McFadden had four witnesses with him ready to testify in his defense.

According to the husband's attorney, the McFaddens had agreed to a formal separation in May, 1976. They went back together in July for "a day and a half." They separated again. Mrs. McFadden doesn't like to be touched, Mr. Cockrell said.

After the ruling of the judge, to let the case lie in limbo, the couple left the half-full courtroom.

The exact wording of the incident follows:

According to police reports, after the couple began arguing in the church that Sunday, she left to go outside.

"Her husband followed her," records say; "During the continuation of the argument her husband pushed her causing her to fall into the hedges in the church yard. This resulted in her receiving minor abrasions and a blow to the head from a fall. She stated she wished to obtain a warrant.

The album will be released Jan. 10 for a debut and special press reception at the Hilton Hotel. Present will be all media including TV and radio.

Mr. Mitchell describes the "Man's Theory" group as having a sense of commitment to what is right.

Terming the young men as "very unusual", he notes they want to give concerts to help children and "our fellow men."

"They're the first in the nation to receive this opportunity. This is Baltimore's chance to do this kind of thing in the music world. There's a wealth of talent here just needing a chance." Mr. Mitchell states.

The first album of eight of their original songs is dedicated to the young men's mothers: Mrs. Blanche Pulliam, Byers Ave.; Mrs. Laura Taylor, Ridgewood Ave. Mrs. Inetta Carter, Edgewood St. Mrs. Monteray Gentry, Leith Rd and Mrs. Helen Walls, Westgrove, Pa.

NOTICE ON EVICTIONS

Don't wait until you are turned out on the street in the cold to complain. That is the word from city officials this week to citizens who may be evicted.

If you are evicted, call this number, 539-2273. It is the Mayor's Office of Eviction Prevention. The co-ordinator, Jim David, says as soon as city zens know that their unemployment or veteran's checks may be late and that they may be having problems with the rent, call him. He is there to assist. Don't wait, he says, this only compounds the problem.

Mr. David says, no evictions will take place between Dec 20 and Jan 1, a traditional agreement between the Housing Court and city landlords.

Gas and electric officials say no gas and electric will be turned off from Dec 20 until Jan. 3. "However in special cases, we will terminate services, except for Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve. But this has to be looked at on individual basis." G&E officials say.

According to the city housing code, unvented gas fires, otherwise known as space heaters, are illegal.

If citizens find themselves in apartments or homes where the landlord has space heaters, the residents can call 396-4176, the city's Housing Inspection office.

Residents who suspect backlash from their landlords as a result of complaints about housing violations, should call 383-3700 immediately.

Blast victim seeking new home for family

Mrs. Ruth Ford is looking for a suitable place to live for herself and her family.

"I can never move back there (the 600 block Hillview Rd.) because of the children's memories," she said at a press conference held Tuesday at the Holiday Inn, Downtown.

Mrs. Ford and her family were one of the three families who were left homeless by a gas explosion last Thursday morning that destroyed three houses in the 600 block Hillview Rd. in Cherry Hill.

As a result, Mrs. Ford, her three grandchildren, Wendell, Madeline and vonette Wright and her nephew, Raymond Lewis are currently staying at the Holiday Inn at the hotel's expense.

Officials at the Holiday Inn picked up the tab for Mrs. Ford's stay after the Red Cross announced its emergency funds had run out for Mrs. Ford and her family.

They stated the funds had been strained by responding to 41 house fires in the Baltimore region in the past week.

Although Mrs. Ford appreciates what the Red Cross and the Holiday Inn have done for her she wants to get her family's lives back to normal.

She told the AFRO the first thing she needs is some place to put her furniture.

"I got upset when it started to rain and my furniture was out there exposed," she said. She said she wants to put the furniture in a safe warehouse to avoid any of it from being stolen.

The second thing Mrs. Ford said she needed was a house preferably in the Greenspring Junior High School area.

"I don't want any public housing," said Mrs. Ford, who has worked for over 20 years as a saleswoman for a downtown retail chain. "I want a three bedroom house with enough space for all my furniture."

Mrs. Ford told the AFRO the reason she wanted a
