Judge rules that fathers of illegimate babies will be arrested

ANNAPOLIS — An Anne Arundel County Circuit Court judge has handed down a ruling here that may affect all fathers of illegitimate babies.

Judge Matthew S. Evans said that warrants issued for the men who sire babies out of wedlock serve an important governmental interest which is entirely reasonable.

He notes that the welfare of illegitimate children must be protected and that the financial burden on the taxpayers can be reduced if the fathers are made to provide support.

If the father fails to respond in a paternity case, the warrant may be issued and the arrest will not only assure him for trial but also keep him from fleeing the jurisdiction, the jurist said.

The decision came to light during the trial of Eric Henderson, a 17-year-old Annapolis dishwasher who was arrested last December and held in the AA County Detention Center for paternity proceedings.

A woman accused Henderson of fathering her son born the previous summer. A blood test proved he could not be excluded as the father of the child.

The case went to the state's attorney and the teenaged father was arrested.

Legal Aid Bureau lawyers contended that the law violates state and federal law and John C. Eldelman of the Leagl Aid Office said he plans to appeal Judge Evans' ruling.

In his 22-page opinion, Judge Evans cites statistics showing welfare payments to families with dependent children are extremely heavy.

He said the largest sum shows that most of the money goes for support of illegitimate children.

In the Henderson case, court records showed he had refused to answer two letters from Domestic Relations asking him to come in to discuss the paternity issue. After the state's attorney reviewed the records, the arrest warrant was issued.

Health commissioner urges caution in toy purchase

Care by parents in the selection of toys has been suggested by Dr. Jimmie L. Rhyne, the City Health Department's Assistant Commissioner of Health for Maternal and Child Health, as an excellent way of preventing accidents to children.

Most toy manufacturers and merchants are trying to improve their wares and the Consumer Product Safety Commission is still on the lookout for dangerous toys to take them off the market. However, a recent check by interested citizens in a large metropolitan area recently showed that even some toys banned by the federal government were still offered for sale in some places.

Some tips on how to buy toys that are safe are to avoid small toys that may be swallowed or toys with small removable parts when buying for the very young child. Children up to two years old put small toys in their mouths. The result can be a blocked windpipe. Most manufacturers use lead file paint on toys. However, imported toys might carry a lead paint danger. Check to be sure the painted toy is lead free.

Parents should reject toys with sharp or rough edges or toys too heavy for a child's strength. Toys such as BB-guns, sling shots, darts that could cause serious physical injury or bows and arrows can cause severe injury and blindness. Toy guns from which children may shoot projectiles at others are potentially harmful and should not be purchased until a child is old enough to know safety rules. Even then, parental supervision is strongly recommended.

• • •

Carpenter tools, construction sets, roller skates or electrical toys should not be given until a child is at least 6 years old. Even then, only underwrites laboratory approved electrical toys should be purchased.

Chemistry sets or toys that involve mixing and heating substances should only be used under parental supervision.

The best rule to help reduce the number of toy accidents, Dr. Rhne says is to suit the toy to the child's age. Many stores actually print the age of the child for which the toy was intended on the container. Such toys are likely to cause fewest safety problems but there are always some toys without an age designation. In such cases, the safety hints here can help parents to make a wise choice.

This is a GRADE 4 SUIT. At any fine men's store it sells for $200 or more. We sell it for $125. ($145 with a vest.)

What is a GRADE 4 SUIT?
Professional suit men classify suits according to the quality of the fabric used, and the amount of handwork that goes into the construction. There are 4 basic grades of suits 1, 2, 4 and 6. The higher the grade, the better the quality...and the higher the price. A GRADE 4 SUIT normally sells for $200 and up, depending on where you buy it.

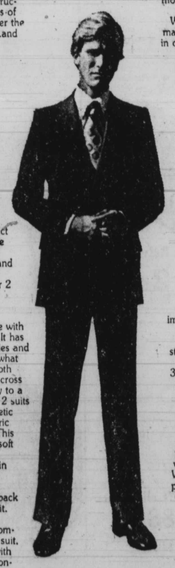
Most suits on the market today are grade 2 suits. If you're paying GRADE 4 SUIT prices you should be sure you're really getting GRADE 4 quality.

How can you tell if a suit is GRADE 4 quality?
By the way it's made. A GRADE 4 SUIT is cut in a quality manner with all parts matched. This means a perfect pattern match, not only at the seams, but also at the collar, the lapels, sleeves, pockets, and the runaround of the jacket. This is not true of grade 1 or 2 suits.

A GRADE 4 SUIT is made with open-shoulder construction. It has hand-felled (stitched) armholes and a hand-felled collar. This is what gives a suit the proper, smooth "lie" around the neck and across the shoulders, and is the key to a really good fit. Grade 1 and 2 suits are fused. This means synthetic fibers are heat-set to the fabric with machine construction. This takes away from the subtle, soft smoothness achieved by the basted-canvas method used in GRADE 4 SUITS.

A GRADE 4 SUIT can be opened up at the neck and back and resewn to improve the fit.

It is impossible to make a grade 2 suit look like a custom-fit. The next time you buy a suit, ask your tailor if it's made with the quality, open-shoulder construction and hand-finishing that distinguishes a GRADE 4 SUIT.



Where can you buy a GRADE 4 SUIT for only $125?
At T.I.Swartz Clothiers in Baltimore, Maryland, Springfield, Virginia, and the Boston area. We're a factory-retail store. We make our own GRADE 4 SUITS in our Baltimore factory, and sell them at the low factory price.

We're probably the only firm in America that sells an American-made GRADE 4 SUIT at a price you may be paying for a suit that's only a grade 2.

Is T.I.Swartz a reputable suit maker?
Yes, very. We've been in business for over 80 years in the Baltimore-Washington area. Our clientele includes some of America's most discriminating buyers...Senators, Congressmen, men in the professions, and even world-renowned figures.

What about size range and style selection?
We make and stock all the important suit styles: Traditional, Contemporary, European and Leisure. Vested and unvested styles. And size is never a problem. We carry, in depth, sizes 36 Short to 50 Extra-Long, and plenty of Portly sizes, too. You can always find what you want at T.I.Swartz.

What kind of service can I expect?
The best. Our staff is comprised of professional suit men with many years of experience. We have expert tailoring on the premises. We are open to serve you 6 days a week.
