Crash pilot charges delayed

(UPI) — The pilot whose small plane slammed into Memorial Stadium minutes after Sunday's Colts-Steelers playoff game complained of chest pains Tuesday, delaying his transfer from the hospital to police custody.

Police awaiting the transfer of Donald Kroner, 33, were told by Union Memorial Hospital officials that he was being held for more tests.

Kroner, who suffered facial cuts and chest injuries in Sunday's crash, will face state charges of reckless use of an aircraft and destruction of property and a city charge of flying over the stadium during a stadium event, Federal charges are pending.

Police spokesman Dennis Hill said Kroner may have a bail hearing Wednesday in Northern District.

Hill said Kroner hired photographer Margerite Rosenberg to take pictures of him flying over the stadium and that police were awaiting a processed roll of 35 mm slide film that was taken.

Meanwhile, the National Transportation Safety Board and the Federal Aviation Administration are jointly investigating the crash, which occurred about 10 minutes after the game ended.

More than 60,000 fans watched the game, but the upper deck section where the Piper Cherokee 140 crashed had cleared of spectators who left before the end of the 40-14 Pittsburgh win. Two policeman were slightly injured.

Raymond Myers, one of the three FAA officials investigating the crash, said he expected Kroner to be charged with careless and reckless operation of an aircraft "if all evidence points to the fact that he didn't have a mechanical problem."

He said it will probably be four to six weeks before investigators determine if Kroner violated FAA regulations.

A safety board spokesman said it might take several months for investigators to check the aircraft's systems, radio conversation prior to the crash, flight plan, and "in this case, his medical history."

The FAA revoked Kroner's medical certification in 1971 for psychiatric reasons. He attempted to regain it three times before it was reinstated last October, according to an FAA spokesman.

The FAA revoked Kroner's commercial pilot license after Sunday's crash.

REPORT CLAIMS

Basic skills needed in minority businesses

The Policy Committee of The Johns Hopkins University's Center for Metropolitan Planning and Research represents a commitment by the university to the utilization of its research capabilities for the benefit of the Baltimore Metropolitan area.

Committee members include a cross section of Baltimore's business, civic and professional leadership. At its Dec. 13 meeting the Policy Committee announced the completion of a report on minority business development in Baltimore City.

This report was based on the work of the Task Force on Financial Institutions and the Minority Community, a study group comprising local banking officials, businessmen, including minority businessmen, and private citizens.

Sam Daniels, executive director of the Council for Equal Business Opportunity (CEBO) served as chairman. The Task Force was established several months ago to explore the ways in which local financial institutions could expand their capital and loan initiatives in support of minority business development.

It documents previous efforts; identifies major problems found in the activities of banks, local business development organizations and federally supported programs; and develops recommendations to both improve opportunities for and overcome obstacles to the future growth of minority businesses in Baltimore.

While the findings of the Task Force covered the period 1973 to 1975, many of its findings are also applicable to prior years.

The report highlights the tration; an increase in available capital resources; improved coordination and delivery of technical and managerial services by CEBO and the Small Business Administration; an increas in needed business skills; and the development of information on growth areas suitable for minority business opportunities.

It also points to the need for prompt bank reporting of delinquent loans to the district office of SBA so that immediate assistance can be provided, and lessening the communications gap between the banks and CEBO on loan packaging procedures and requirements.

Undercapitalization and the lack of equity capital are among the major obstacles to successful business development as identified by the Task Force.

For example, there currently exists only one Baltimore-based high risk capital resource, the Baltimore Community Investment Company. In this context, the Task Force points to the need for flexibility in traditional lending criteria in order to provide minority borrowers access to reasonable levels of credit.

However, banking officials indicated that adjustments of this kind would have to be accompanied by high quality technical and managerial assistance, as well as support services.

During the time period covered by the report, SBA direct loans, amounting to $4,526,450, were 65 per cent of the total value of all SBA loans ($7,003,750) to minority businesses. SBA guaranteed bank participation loans, totalling $2,477,500, equalled 35 per cent of the total dollar value of all SBA loans to minorities.

SBA direct loans to minority businesses in the service sector amounting to $2,964,350 represented 65 per cent of the total dollar value of all SBA loans; while guaranteed loans to such businesses, equaling $1,569,500 were 67 per cent of the total dollar value of all service sector loans to minority businesses.

Thus, a substantial percentage of both direct and guaranteed loans were provided to minority businesses.

Thus, a substantial percentage of both direct and guaranteed loans were provided to minority businesses in the service sector of the local economy.

Other recommendations include:

1. — That the business and financial community of metropolitan Baltimore make public policy endorsing and participating in those private sector agencies effectively representing and supporting black business development.

vide all minority business loan applicants with "fact sheets" detailing information required to develop and package loan requests.

3. Banks should provide minority entrepreneurs with specific information pertaining to loan requests which, in the opinion of the banks, are unbankable.

4. — Banks should assist in the identification of viable business opportunities and growth markets in order to broaden and expand minority business participation in the local economy.

5. — The creation of a committee to explore the development of criteria by which minority business success and failure rates can be determined and realistically evaluated.

United Fund, CICHA hold campaign talks

Representatives of the United Fund and the Commerce and Industry Combined Health Appeal (CICHA) are taking part in a series of talks to finalize future campaign plans.

The talks were the result of a letter sent to Richard W. Single, president of CICHA by Robert L. Weinberg, president of the United Fund, stating that both organizations could not reach an agreement to continue their combined commitment to the community before the Dec. 31 deadline.

The deadline stated in the July 1, 1974 agreement calls for the termination of the group's combined effort to provide agencies and services with funds.

The letter stated while the agreement calls for the termination of the two groups joint assistance it made no provision for drawing up an amendment to the agreement or an entire new agreement.

Weinberg, told Single that the United Fund is willing to draw up an amendment to the 1974 agreement and the Board of Directors is empowered to agree on the terms.

However, he also stated the CICHA Board must wait for separate agreements from each of its member agencies.

The letter explained while neither organization can agree on the proposed amendment, Weinberg believes it would suffice until an agreement can be reached.

ASSASSINS are made of just that kind of gall.

WHEN WE WERE IN ATLANTA for the King funeral long ago, many black citizens told us much about the assassination that could not be printed then. The world was crying on its knees and would not listen to anything.

NOW, an investigation that will cost $13 million in taxpayers' money is about to uncover just what we knew then.

They could ask folks on Main Street in the black section of Atlanta and find out quick.

THE RICH PEASANT LOOK is the coming fashion according to Paris shows. Taken from the Russian's historic costumes, the dress of the landowners and royalty included brocaded holiday satans worn with blouses, aprons, jackets, shawls and rich furs embroidered in gold and silver and decorated with jewels and pearls.

BRILLIANT REDS with greens are the main colors. Jackie Kennedy has edited a book, "In the Russian Style" tells it all.

IF YOU CAN'T AFFORD the velvets spangled with pearls, get out your old black skirt and embroider it with left-over pearls and jewels from your jar ring box.

Sew in strips of red and green satin at the hem and go to the 5 and dime and get you a $6.95 peasant blouse. Fake furs can look real and will be on sale soon for almost nothing. Russians preferred sable.
