—'77 General Assembly

(FROM PAGE ONE)

Arthur G. Murphy Sr.

Del. Murphy, who is the frontrunner for the Caucus chairmanship, underwent surgery early last month and is still recovering at home.

Murphy stated that he is considering drafting a letter to the Caucus asking that the elections (held a week or ten days after the assembly starts) be postponed until he can be present.

Del. Murphy said one of the things he will be doing this year with Del. John W. Douglass will be to recommend to the Caucus to take a position on legislation concerning the Maryland Human Relations Commission.

The proposed package legislation which emerged from Robey Committee hearings held during the summer asks that the commission be resturctured and that the method of appointments to top level positions be changed.

Murphy states this package should be the most important issue of the entire session.

Del. Murphy also said he will be working along side Del. Lena K. Lee to study the matter of reviewing sentences by the high court and sponsoring a bar exam study bill, an interest rate bill and a bill to regulate the sale of bullet proof vests.

Del. Walter Dean intends to introduce a negative income tax bill, to help those with no or low paying jobs; a bill to protect evicted persons and permit them to borrow money from the state to pay their rent and bills to beef up the state welfare system and give contracts to minority businessmen.

Del. Troy Brailey's bills will include permitting high school graduates to draw unemployment if they do not plan to go to college and can not find a job six months after they graduate and a proposal to increase the minimum wage to $3 an hour.

A spokesman for Sen. Douglass stated he will be working on his alcohol tax bill, a bill to supply transportation for non-public school children a nursing care bill and his hand gun bill.

Del. Ike Dixon's bills will focus on the issue of insurance to citizens and a request that all income tax preparers register with the state.

Ded. Hattie Harrison intends to refile her consumer protection bill that bogged down last year and is also working on another to regulate debt collection.

She has also prefiled a bill to create taxi stands in Baltimore and has expressed an interest in education from the attendance point of view and a resolution advocating community education.

Nurses NOW orientation meeting set

Nurses NOW, a task force of the Baltimore Chapter of the National Organization for Women, will hold an orientation meeting for nurses interested in learning about the activities of the group Thursday, Jan. 13, 7:30 p.m., at the Baltimore NOW office, 2318 N. Charles St.

Members of the task force will outline the activities of Nurses NOW, present example of sexual stereotyping within nursing schools and the nursing profession and discuss the need for assertiveness training and consciousness raising groups for nurses.

Nurses NOW was created to eliminate sexism in the nursing profession, to change the image of the media and to help rection of misconceptions of the mdeia and to help modify the health care system to better meet the needs of the consumer and nursing practitioner.

Karen Muller is chairperson of the Nurses NOW task force. For further information please call 889-0083.

LAURENS STREET

RAPID TRANSIT STATION
OPEN MEETING

THE MTA
will hold a Public Information Meeting to introduce interested citizens, community groups and businesses to the final design phase of development of the Laurens Street rapid transit station. The purpose of the meeting will be to acquaint area citizens with the principle transit representatives who will be involved with the design of the station and trackway section, and to explain the steps required to design and construct the laurens Street Station. Citizen's questions will be addressed and comments will be heard with regard to the transit station, its utility and visual impact on the community area it will serve.

FINAL DESIGN TEAM
will present the general activities to take place within the community in connection with the design and construction phase of the Laurens Street Station. An approximate time schedule for design and construction and for additional meetings with the community will be discussed. It is expected that commentary from the community at large will assist the station Final Designer and Architects in addressing the concerns of community and business individuals in the project area.

INTRODUCTION
This Mass Transit Administration Introduction Program on the Laurens Street Subway Station has been developed to accommodate the needs for community reaction and response. All questions and requests for additional information should be directed to the Community Relations Department of the Mass Transit Administration Rapid Transit Division.

MEETING PLACE
FURMAN TEMPLETON ELEM. SCHOOL NO. 125
