House committee considering bill to speed medical payments

ANNAPOLIS — At the present time medical assistance organizations such as West Baltimore Community Health Care Corp. and Constant Care often have to wait nine months to be reimbursed for certain medical payments.

However under a bill, sponsored by Del. Larry Young, such medical aid groups would only have to wait six months to receive such payments.

"This piece of legislation is a progressive step towards the restructuring of the Medical Public Assistance Programs and for the patient in that the provider of medical services may not recover the cost from the patient," he said. "It also will help take some of the pressure off the the poor and elderly persons who are in need of these programs."

The bill has already been before the House Environmental Matters Committee and a favorable report is expected sometime early next week.

Young also said that the measure will benefit the state because state officials will be able to determine without any added work the cost of medical services.

The information could be of assistance in the preparation of the fiscal budget by providing the state with two financial accounts in one fiscal year.

• • •

Response to the bill has been favorable from two of the largest health services in Baltimore.

Dr. Harvey Webb, who heads up Constant Care, is very much in favor of the bill.

"I think the bill is an excellent idea," he said. "Anything that is going to smooth in the flow of the care to patients is a good idea."

Webb said at the present time providers of health services see the patient fills out the necessary assistance forms then waits to be reimbursed.

"If a provider has to wait to get reimbursed all the time," he pointed out, "he may end up only seeing paying patients."

John E. Waters head of the West Baltimore Community Health Care Corp., is also in favor of the bill.

"The bill will help the community because it will help determine our cash flow," he said. "If we can determine this we can judge if we're operating in the red."

Waters added that under the present arrangement payments are not received until the new budget has been submitted.

• • •

Although the response from Constant Care and West Baltimore has been favorable officials of the state Department of Health and Mental Hygiene are opposed to the bill.

Dr. Neil Solomon, head of the health department stated he recently consulted with Medicare officials concluded, "If it's going to hurt the patient why do it."

Family lawn scene of cross burning

SEVERN PARK, "/" In the mist of a personal tragedy somebody burned a cross on the lawn of Russell and Mrs. Celestine Siggers.

"I was more angry than upset," said Mrs. Siggers of Box 67 Rt. 6. "We were in the mist of making plans for our grandson's funeral and it seemed so stupid."

The cross, according to state police report, was found on the Siggers front lawn early Tuesday morning by Mrs. Siggers. The incident, police said the incident had occurred on or about 8 p.m. Monday evening.

Mrs. Siggers said her grandson, David R. Hall, had died the previous day at the University of Maryland Hospital.

Funeral services were held Thursday at the St. Catherine Episcopal Church. He is buried in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

• • •

Police said witnesses saw a car of unknown description was seen leaving the scene right after the cross was set afire.

They added that no arrest have been made and the case has been turned over to the criminal investigation division.

Blount fights to discontinue 'redlining'

State Sen. Clarence W. Blount (Balto. City, 41st) has renewed his effort to stop "redlining" by financial institutions. Senate Bill 433 was the subject of a hearing before the Senate Economic Affairs Committee last week.

"When lending institutions refuse to make loans in a specific geographic area, it is known as 'redlining,'" Sen. Blount explained.

Although the number of mortgages approved for Baltimore has risen in recent years, "The lending institutions are still arbitrarily picking and choosing the sections of the City where they will or will not make loans without basing their decision on economic factors," he said.

Lending institutions refuse to make mortgage loans in an area because they expect a decline or change in a community. The withdrawal of mortgage money from the community becomes a cause of the decline that they predicted.

"Qualified buyers are discouraged from purchasing homes in a redlined area because they cannot get mortgages, or because the only mortgages they can get for homes in the area are at a high rate of interest, for a shorter period of time, or require a larger downpayment", the senator added.

• • •

A study by Citizens Planning and Housing Association of mortgage loans made in Baltimore in 1975 shows that in Harlem Park in Baltimore, in South Edmondson Village and in Callaway-Garrison, fewer mortgage loans were made than in other areas of the city.

Sen. Blount's bill calls for a hearing if there is probable cause to believe that a lending institution is refusing to make loans in a certain geographic area.

If the respective licensing agency determines that there has been a violation they may ask the institution to cease and desist their unlawful action.

Should they refuse to do so, the matter may be turned over to the Attorney General's office for prosecution.

New effort to change campaign finance law

With the filing of House Bill 1109 by Del. Benjamin Cardin of Baltimore and eight other sponsors, the issue of campaign finance has once again come alive in the Maryland Legislature.

The 1977 bill is reported to make more manageable the campaign finance bill adopted in the General Assembly in 1974 by limiting public funding of candidates to the four top statewide offices, extending coverage to the primary as well as the general election, and by appropriating money from the state general fund to finance it.

Apparently spurred by the successful federal funding experience in the 1976 presidential election, statewide campaign financing for Maryland has been receiving much support from too political leaders and citizens groups across the state.

Cardin, the bill's key sponsor, is chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee.

Senate President Steny Hoyer has openly announced his backing of the bill as has Lt. Governor Blair Lee.

Williams S. James of Harford County, who is a former state senator, past leader of the State Democratic Central Committee and present treasurer of the state has endorsed HB 1109.

• • •

James is also listed as honorary chairman of CURE (Coalition United to Reform Elections), the statewide coalition of citizens groups formed to lobby for public campaign financing in Maryland.

Listed among the groups in CURE are AAUW, League of Women Voters, Baltimore Ministerial Alliance, Maryland Society of Professional Engineers, International Ladies Garment Workers Union, Maryland Young Democrats, Common Cause and other political, religious labor and social action groups.
