Hostages — murder — terrorism

Where will it end?

WASHINGTON — Where does it all end?

That undoubtedly is the question raised by many across the U.S. in light of this week's terrorist seige on the nation's capital—the latest in what has become a series of hostage - holding - and - demands incidents.

Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, ringleader of the Hanafi Muslims who seized three buildings and held about 130 persons captive for 39 hours, was arraigned and ordered released early today as part of a pact that ended the ordeal.

At the request of the federal government, Superior Court chief Judge Harold H. Greene agreed to release Khaalis without bond pending an indictment. He was charged with armed kidnaping.

U.S. Attorney Earl Silbert told Greene that as part of the negotiations leading to the safe release of the more than 130 hostages, the government agreed to release Khaalis on his personal recognizance until the case is presented to a federal grand jury. No date was set.

The 11 others are in custody and were to be arraigned later today.

Silbert said Khaalis had lived six or seven years at the same residence in Washington and was an officer of a jewelry sales corporation, qualifying him for release under the District of Columbia bail reform act.

"After the initial takeover the defendant negotiated on a continuing basis with authorities," Silbert said. He said Khaalis agreed to a voluntary surrender — one that was "peaceful in nature."

"The U.S. has agreed ... to the conditional release of the defendant, pending return of an indictment in this case," he said.

Greene endorsed the agreement, saying he had been contacted by government officials earlier in the day and was asked if he would go along with the

Behind all the violence

By Paul Evans
AFRO Staff Writer

Where will it end?

It seems almost every day another black male, either singularly or in a group, lashes out at society, in his historic, wounded hurt, by taking another white hostage and making catastrophic demands as a balm for his torn soul.

What is the answer?

Who has the answer?

Is there an answer?

Increasing the stature of the black male and enhancing the image of the family, at all racial, social and economic levels, were offered as admittedly broad, but important initial steps, by a leading local black psychiatrist this week, in stemming a widely discernible, rising pattern of violence in American life.

"We get a taste of violence from childhood," Dr. Addison Pope, the psychiatrist, said Wednesday in a telephone interview. "There is the cowboy with the six-shooter and the detective becoming a model for those watching. Violence is portrayed as masculine and weakness is seen as effeminate. The strong, red-blooded American is seen as the hero," he noted.

An increased media dramatization of violence provides a visual example that leads many viewers to attempt violence," Dr. Pope said.

While he hastened to add, he was not calling for a curtailment of the media, the psychiatrist did say, some television viewers "because of weak egos and weak personalities can't test reality properly."

* * *

"This then," he continued, "may lead some people to attempt violent acts. I don't think that the idea of high-jacking would have gotten as severe, had it not been for the wide media exposure. But, then this is a free society and you can't stop the media from publicizing events."

Charge credit company hassling was unbearable

A couple who charge they have been harassed, humiliated and threatened by Maryland National Bank through its affiliate Master Charge is suing the bank for $1 million.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald (Dean) Morgan of the 3800 block Callaway Ave. filed their complaint through their attorneys Elijah E. Cummings and Gerald Smith March 7 in the Court of Common Pleas.

It is alleged in the suit during the fall of 1973 because of unforeseen monetary problems and hardships, Mrs. Morgan was unable to continue to make full monthly payments as required by her schedule of payments and the couple informed Maryland National Bank.

Court records state Mrs. Morgan was threatened by

A 30-year-old man who was charged with assault and battery on Dr. Wayman Eugene Scott, 52-year-old School Board member, was found not guilty Thursday in Aberdeen District Court.

Judge Charles Kelly told the defendant, "You can't allow your emotions to get away with you." Fant, who has no criminal record was ordered to pay the $10 court cost.

He testified when he approached Dr. Scott Feb. 14 at the Hi-Fi Gas Station on Route 40 and asked him to respect his children, Dr. Scott said: "The hell with you; why don't you give your wife a divorce?"

Fant admitted he then

Agnew trial set March 14

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A federal court judge has set a March 14 hearing on whether former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's probation should be revoked.

U.S. District Court Judge Roszel C. Thomsen also released a Justice Department report which revealed that Agnew had committed at least one violation of his probation.

The report, signed by Richard L. Thornburgh, acting deputy attorney general in charge of the Criminal Division in the Ford Administration, recommended "no action" be taken against Agnew, despite the infraction.

Thomsen directed the Justice Department to prepare the report based on its investigation of Agnew's post-conviction conduct since his Oct. 10, 1973 plea of "no contest" to one count of income tax evasion. Although Agnew's probation expired Oct. 10, 1976, the judge continued jurisdiction until 1978.

The hearing is in response to a suit filed by Sam Polur, a Miami lawyer, who submitted a request for the court to

Pressman's charges 'unfounded'

The city Executive Director of the Community Relations Commission said Thursday charges that his commission gives greater speed to investigations of black discrimination than reverse bias involving whites are "unfounded."

"These charges," hurled by City Comptroller Hyman A. Pressman last week, "are unfounded in fact," John B. Ferron, the executive director, told the AFRO.

* * *

"Once the investigation commences, the only time the director would get involved would be if there is need for a subpoena; to institute legal action as result of recalcitrance on the part of the respondent; or possibly responding to inquiries made by well-meaning politicians representing the interests of their constituents.

"Never in the 23-year history of the agency has it experienced the type of extreme political pressure that it is currently experiencing. For the total community, and I emphasize the total community, I stress the fact that no case has been influenced, no case has been expedited, no conclusion has been drawn, as a result of external pressure."

Pressman made the charges after receiving complaints of cases of alleged reverse discrimination involving faculty positions at the Community College of Baltimore.

Black delegates gear for fight over death penalty legislation

By Clarence W. Hunter
AFRO Annapolis Bureau

ANNAPOLIS — The war to defeat the capital punishment bill for this session of the Maryland General Assembly has moved to the floor of the House of Delegates.

In a swift, calculated move today, Friday, by the delegates of the Maryland Legislative Black Caucus, consideration on the bill was delayed until late Monday evening or postbly early Tuesday morning.

According to Del. Arthur Murphy, who was appointed floor leader by caucus chairman Sen. Robert Douglass, the move was to allow a special committee of the caucus to create amendments to add to the bill approved by the House Judiciary Committee earlier this week.

The special committee includes Delegates Walter Dean, Lena K. Lee, Isaiah Dixon, Decatur W. Trotter, Nathaniel Exum, Lloyal Randolph and Larry Young.

* * *

Although Del. Murphy would not reveal the caucus' strategy, the black delegates' game plan seems to be to delay the bill long enough or load it down with so many amendments that the bill will die in the Senate in the last few days of the session.

There is also speculation that opponents to the bill in the Senate may be gearing up for an organized filibuster to put an end to the bill.

The bill was easily approved by the committee by a 15 to 5 vote after it underwent some major revisions. According to legislative officals, 17 amendments were added to the measure, sponsored by Gov. Marvin Mandel.

The most important amendment, which was adopted by an 11 to 7 vote, would call for two-thirds of a jury to sentence a person to death rather than the unanimous finding required by the original Mandel bill.

Del. Murphy said to offset the amendment he pro-
