Rev. William D. White was founder and served as the first pastor of Concord Baptist Church in 1937. He pastored Concord at its original site, located at 907 Franklin St., until his death in 1943.

As Concord grew under the leadership of Rev. Mr. White, he saw the need for additional organizations. The Missionary Society, Usher Board, Flower Circle, Baptist Training Union and Young People's Choir were all organized then.

In 1944, the late Rev. J. M. Raynor of Goldsboro, N.C. become pastor of Concord. Within two years, the church under the late Rev. Mr. Raynor and Rev. James Wilkins, assistant pastor, paid off the entire mortgage of Concord.

It was March 15, 1960 when the Rev. Mr. Silver accepted the pastorate of Concord Baptist. When he became pastor, there were 700 members and an annual income of $16,000 for the church.

The first major problem to face the Rev. Mr. Silver was a new relocation for the church since the old building was condemned to make way for an Interstate highway.

In 1968, the church accepted $115,000 for the church property with the understanding that additional money would be sought through court litigation. The suit against the city was won when the Maryland Court of Appeals awarded Concord an additional $47,130.83 in 1971.

The church finally purchased the Liberty Jewish Center for $130,000. Fire damaged most of the new building, delaying relocation until the fall of 1969. On the second Sunday in October 1969, 327 members and scores of friends marched into the new building at 5204 Liberty Heights Ave.

The Rev. Mr. Silver states, "As we celebrate the 40th anniversary of Concord, its history has shown that God has guided the church through many a trial and tribulation.

"We as members of Concord must also realize that only with faith in God can Concord or any congregation survive the problems of today's world," he said.
