Mitchell to speak at memorial tribute to Hobson

Cong. Parren Mitchell, leader of the Congressional Black Caucus, will speak at a memorial service at SSA in Woodlawn July 8 for the late civil rights leader, Julius Hobson.

Mr. Hobson was a member of the District of Columbia Board of Education and a long-time activist for social change. He died in March after a long bout with cancer.

A former SSA employee with the Office of Research and Statistics, Julius Hobson considered his top achievement was bringing about an end to discriminatory hiring practices in the District. He publicized discrimination in federal employment and helped integrate hospitals in the District.

He won a landmark court suit outlawing segregated "tracking" and teacher segregation in the D.C. schools.

Mr. Hobson was the president of the D.C. chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality and was the president of the D.C. chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality and was active in the movement for statehood for D.C. He co-authored the book, "Black Pride."

Upon Hobson's death, President Carter stated: "Julius Hobson's life is proof that one person can change the world he lives in. We have lost a unique and remarkable man."

Senator Edward Kennedy, in a letter to his widow, wrote: "Julius Hobson's voice will be heard always. He legacy to his people and to our country will live on in our hearts. Your loss is our loss. Tina and I grieve with you."

The July 8 program, which will be held in the SSA Auditorium at 11:30 a.m. will also include a film, "Julius Hobson, A Great Goffer," a dramatic tribute by Verna Day and Earl Burton, and a talk by Tina Hobson, his widow.

Tina Hobson was the first director of the National Federal Women's Program and was on the board of Federally Employed Women (FEW) for several years. She developed the Federal Public Service Careers Program for minimally skilled employees. She is now on special assigment to Esther Peterson, working on the President's consumer program.

Organizations supporting the memorial include AFGE Local 1923, FEW, the Federal Women's Program and the American Society for Public Administration (ASPA).

Flyers in Italy

World War II - June 1944

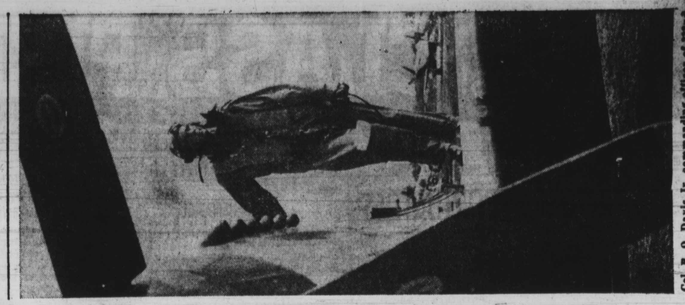
Distinguished Flying Crosses

By Art Carter

MAGAZINE AFRO SECTION

JULY 5–9, 1977

During World War II, Art Carter, publisher of the Washington AFRO-AMERICAN was in the war in Italy with the heroic black fliers of the 99th Pursuit Squadron and the 332nd Fighter Group. This is a report reprinted from dispatches he sent the AFRO.



Col. B. O. Davis Jr. commanding officer of 332nd Fighter Group poses on a P-51 at the 15th Air Force base in Italy. They provided bomber escort to enemy territory.

Squadron commanders, Capt. Charles Dickson, Washington and Melvin T. Jackson of Baltimore, led their units in the parade, which was inspected by Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis and Lt. Col. Howard T. Baugh of Petersburg, Va. Dickson received a similar award in the similar capacities for the other squadrons.

The Distinguished Flying Cross citations were read by Capt. Lawrence E. Dickson, adjutant. Five flyers received this highest aerial award.

On the basis of two awards was the extraordinary aerial performance of duty despite enemy territory.

Col. Davis' award was the result of his leadership of over escorts on the mission to hit the oil refineries on Ploesti, Rumania, the first mission on industrial targets over Munich, Germany. The bombers were attacked by enemy fighters and Italy, by over 100 enemy aircraft.

Faced with problems of perfect flying in a few days with only a few fighters at his command, Col. Davis skillfully disposed of his squadrons so that the bombers suffered losses. He led one flight against more than 15 enemy fighters while they were making repeated attacks, and his determined leadership and his men to gain five victories over German aircraft.

The group was flying its third mission with the Fifteenth AAF in P-47 Thunderbolts at the time. Colonel Davis was assistantly impressed by the skill of his men.

His citation read: "While leading an escort mission to Ploesti, Italy, Captain Hall sighted six FW-190's and ME-109's preparing to attack the bombers. Attacking so aggressively that he completely disorganized the enemy attack, Captain Hall shot down two enemy aircraft as his comrades destroyed two. FW-190's and one ME-109 in the remainder without loss or damage to the P-40's."

The citation added, "on the Sicilian and Italian campaigns, ... he has reflected great credit upon himself, and the armed forces."

Lt. Lester Holsclaw displayed "outstanding and aggressiveness and combat proficiency and destroyed three ME-109's, while escorting a bomber formation in a attack on the bombers. On the same mission, Lt. Holsclaw destroyed Elsbury's award as the result of triple triumphs in the air over Southern France on July 7.

A flight led by Capt. Melvin T. Jackson of Baltimore is credited with destroying 29 planes on the ground. One squadron provided top cover while the other strafed and coolly took time to insure the complete destruction of the crowded airfield.

Equipped initially with ammunition, the pilots swept to an auxiliary target at Albunan Field where they managed to destroy 16 more ships, thus depriving the Nazi Luftwaffe of 29 of its last airfields in Italy.

Flight leaders on the strafing job included Capt. Madison Conway, APE Dudley, Ala., First Lt. Albert N. Manning, Martsville, S.C; Herbert Houston, Detroit; John X. Dickson, Detroit; Lt. John Daniels, Chicago and Second Lt. Walter J. Palmer, New York City.

Lt. Holsclaw, age 23, of Brazil, Ind. who had completed his tour of duty and was senior flight commander, received the Distinguished Flying Cross.

His citation read: "While leading an escort mission to Ploesti, Italy, Captain Hall sighted six FW-190's and ME-109's preparing to attack the bombers. Attacking so aggressively that he completely disorganized the enemy attack, Captain Hall shot down two enemy aircraft as his comrades destroyed two. Col. Davis received the Distinguished Flying Cross in June, 1944 and six days later received the Legion of Merit on Sept. 16, 1944 from Lieutenant General Ira C. Eaker.

In a setting replete with drama that bordered on the theatrical, 332nd pilots of the Mustang Fighter group, including its commanding officer, Col. Benjamin O. Davis, were awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, September, 1944 in Italy.

The most dramatic and sentimental phase of the colorful 30-minute ceremony was the pinning of the silver wings and crossed swords on the chest of Col. Davis by his father, Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis Sr., who declared in his remarks that he felt "the happiest moment of my life."

Gen. Davis also pinned awards on Capt. Joseph D. Elsberry, 1114 W. Washington Blvd., Langston, Okla.; First Lt. Lester Lee Jr., 5329 Prairie Ave., Chicago and Jack D. Holsclaw, 2201 W. College Ave., Shreveport, La.

The setting for the presentation was perfect with silver-colored planes providing a backdrop as the honorees lined up abreast in front of a representative gathering of officers and enlisted men of the group in resplendent in the sunlit uniforms.

TELL IT TO JAN

Dear Jan:
I am 19 and I am in need of help. My boyfriend is out of a job and he doesn't know how to look for one. He feels that I am going to leave him. What should I do?
Desperate

Dear Desperate:
It's possible at 19 to be totally dependent on a man. It is possible but also unlikely that he will ever love you. He has two children by two different women. He lives with the one that has his baby and she is his girlfriend and I were friends. They had an argument about me because I was with his baby's father. I thought that we were doing something. Jan, I love him so much, please help me.

Dear Jan:
Assure him that losing his job is not the end of the world. Give him plenty of love and support. Let him know how much you love him. Next, urge him to tell his parents. If they love him, they will help him get a job or help him during this dark time. Keep a stiff upper lip; investigate your local colleges and find courses both of you can take to get a better job opportunity. Don't let your boyfriend get professional help to get a new job situation.

Dear Jan: I love with this guy, 24. I am 14. I have feelings for this guy like I never had feelings for anyone else before. He is married but he has two children by two different women. He lives with the one that has his baby and she is his girlfriend and I were friends. They had an argument about me because I was with his baby's father. I thought that we were doing something.
