Emergency vehicles may receive seat belts

The Maryland Commissioner of Labor and Industry invited comments on his intention to propose a standard requiring each individual riding on any mobile fire apparatus responding to an emergency be furnished by his/her employer with a fixed seat and a safety belt or harness, both of which must be used while the vehicle is in motion.

Following a recent accident involving two Baltimore City fire trucks in which eight men were injured, Commissioner Harvey A. Epstein said, "Any safety practices which can prevent injuries to firefighters should certainly be considered. Firefighting is already the single most hazardous occupation in the United States today."

Commissioner Epstein stated that such a proposed standard would apply to new equipment contracted for after July 1, 1978.

Commissioner Epstein solicits comments from all citizens on such a proposal prior to referral to the Safety and Health Advisory Board. Comment period will end July 22, 1977.

Such comments will be taken into consideration before a proposal is made to the Board which will then hold hearings on a proposed standard.

The Maryland Occupational Safety and Health Act applies only to employer-employee relationships and; therefore, would affect only those fire companies with one or more paid employees.

The U.S. Department of Commerce has begun a pilot program to label products so that consumers can make informed buying decisions on the basis of strength, durability and other criteria. The Department's National Bureau of Standards will be responsible for evaluating manufacturers' test methods.

Rev. Graham wins appeal in Florida

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — The Florida Supreme Court has reversed the 1975 conspiracy and bribery convictions of three former Dade County commissioners, ordering dismissal of the conspiracy charge and retrial of the rest.

The Rev. Edward Graham, was among those exonerated.

Their convictions were based largely on the testimony of two admitted criminals — former Miami City Attorney Alan Rothstein and George MacLean.

The Court added that "it is impossible to tell" from the conspiracy count whether the convicted persons were accused of soliciting or accepting bribes jointly or separately.

AIRBORNE—Tracy Pender, 10, leaps high in the air as he competes in the long jump at the 13th Annual Jesse Owens Games.

Family ties help fans brave hot weather

What makes more than 200 people brave 100 degree temperature and sit—or squirm—for four hours on scorching aluminum bleachers to watch a track meet? It defies logic.

A sampling of the sweating, panting but generally smiling fans at Tuesday's Jesse Owens Games at Lake Clifton, gave a few answers.

But, most of all they said above all, love keeps families together.

Michelle Cornish's mother, Elsie, understood why she attended the games. Her vigil was worth the oven-like conditions: Michelle was first in the girls' 14-15-year-old 220 dash.

Elsie Cornish full of smiles beat the heat with the help of a blue umbrella and by sitting near the top of the 10-tiered stadium, where cool breezes blew occasionally.

Her friend and neighbor, Muriel Jordan, who sweltered beside her, was somewhat less enthusiastic.

Baking, despite the shadow of her red and orange umbrella, she smiled wanly, explaining that her daughter, Stephanie Jordan, was in the high jump.

"I think she is the last one out there," mother Jordan said, desperation creeping in.

About three sections away from the Cornish-Jordon group, sat, or rather slumped, a weary Doris Erving.

Hers was the classic picture for the day;

Tan knit pants rolled up near her knees, sweating ginger ale can resting in her left hand, sun visor keeping only a small part of her forehead cool, stockings rolled down to her black shoe tops and a damp, rumpled Kleenex stuck in her blouse top.

"I've had it," Erving said. The understatement of the year, beyond doubt.

At the same time, there was at least one heat-lover in the crowd: Guynette Gasque, whose younger brother Stanley ran on the winning Ed Waters 440 relay championship squad.

"It's not too particularly hot," Guynette said easily. She was hiding something, though. "I used to run track," she revealed with a smile. And heat and track to hear her tell it is better than a June wedding.

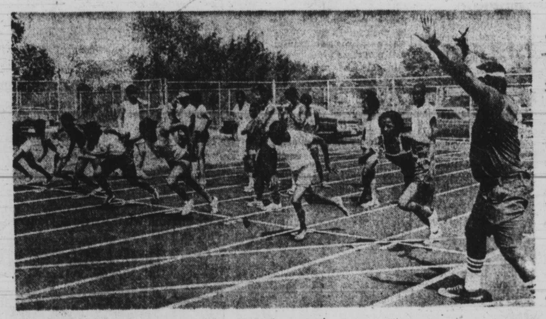
The heat doesn't mean a thing. And you don't have too many muscle pulls in this kind of heat," she explained, taking time out to say that she runs sprints for Morgan's team.

"There are a lot of amateurs out here, who probably didn't stretch right. If it was a little cooler, they might have pulled up (lame)."

So that explains it all. Whomever controls the sun machine had a very good reason for making the day of the Jesse Owens 13th Annual Games so hot.

It was for the runners, jumpers and throwers. To them Lake Clifton was simply a grand sauna box.

MARIA PARSONS (foreground) screams for her friend on the track as Muriel Jordan (L), Lilliam Quarles (C) and Elsie Cornish (R) look on.



A UNIFIED START marks this take-off in the girls 14 to 15-year-old 100 yard dash.

REGGIE JACKSON of New York Yankees, acting as if he knew the final outcome, slumped against wall as Cincinnati's Joe Morgan's leadoff solo homer sailed overhead into the stands in first inning of All-Star game Tuesday night. National League beat the American, 7.5

witness said. "He stayed there signing autographs. It was as if he was looking for affection. I think he wants to be liked. I don't understand people saying the things they did to him."

Jackson said he put up with the abuse as long as he could, then "I took off after the kid."

"I was trying to scare him. I chased him about 100 yards and he fell to the ground," Jackson said. "Just as I got to him Scotty (George Scott of the Boston Red Sox) grabbed me and said 'let's go to the car.'"

Jackson said he left and went home.

Police who investigated filed no formal charges, but 13-year-old Chris Howe charged Jackson hit him and filed a complaint of civil harassment.

following the All-Star game Tuesday night.

While signing autographs in a parking lot outside Yankee Stadium, Jackson got into a shouting match with a teen-aged boy.

The youngster shouted "you stink" at Jackson, and then followed with some less complimentary remarks about both Jackson and his female companion.

According to one man who witnessed the exchange, the remarks made to Jackson were "vicious and disgraceful."
