bottles of liquor. They were half-filled.

Less than 30 hours earlier, Kevin's mother, Althelda Lewis, 29, of the 1000 Ellamont St. had been killed in front of their house allegedly by her boyfriend.

Police seek Joseph Pratt, 32, who also lived in the home.

Kevin was dazed, bitter, horror-filled. Just hours before he had tried to fight off his mother's killer.

"I tried to stop him from beating her," he said softly, "none of the neighbors could help". He then pointed to a spot on his arm where he said he had been cut during the incident.

For the most part Kevin was silent. His grandmother, Ms. Margurite Smith, 45, dominated the room.

"I got 12 years for killing a man so I don't know why they shouldn't have captured Jo Jo because there was a warrant out on him before the murder," she said.

She went on to say she "gave birth when I was 13 years old."

Had Kevin heard this from his grandmother before?

An observer could only wonder how this knowledge of old violence coupled with the terrible crime he so recently witnessed could affect this teen-ager.

With so much tragedy behind him where does Kevin go from here? It is a question for all of us these mean, hot days . . . FRED HINES an apartment in the 2700 block Reisterstown Rd. At the time Ms. Lewis was killed, police state Pratt was out on $10,000 bail for robbery.

"I have called and called the police about this man beating my daughter.

"China Doll' had taken out a warrant on him and no one did nothing. She ran out of her house screaming and crying help! help!."

"The neighbors just stood there and watched him beat her to death with a baseball bat."

Seated at the kitchen table in her daughter's home in the 1000 block N. Ellamont St., Mrs. Marguerite Smith made the above statement to the AFRO. About Althelda "China Doll" Lewis.

Ms. Lewis, 29-year-old mother, became involved in an argument with her boyfriend, Joseph "Jo Jo" Pratt Tuesday evening.

Ms. Lewis, who was called "China Doll" by relatives called her mother and said, "You know mama, Jo Jo is pointing some scissors at me. I'm afraid he may stab me."

Nearly two hours after talking with her daughter, when Mrs. Smith arrived at Ms. Lewis home, she found her daughter lying on the sidewalk dead.

Police report they are looking for Joseph Pratt, of the 1000 block N. Ellamont St. who is charged with homicide and assault.

Homicide detectives state the suspect first cut Ms. Lewis with a knife in the house and later cut her 8-year-old daughter on the arm and her 14-year-old son who tried to prevent the killing.

The children were treated and released from Lutheran Hospital and are now staying with relatives.

According to Mrs. Smith, 45, Pratt was on parole.

"Jo Jo was a nasty dude but my daughter loved him," she said.

With a quiver in her voice, Mrs. Smith added, "I could not rule my daughter's life but I had told her to leave him alone."

Mrs. Smith told the AFRO she was constantly calling Pratt's parole officer asking him what could be done.

"Now my daughter is dead, the parole officer called and said, "Ms. Smith I am sorry to hear what happened.

"Why does everyone wait until it is too late?" said Mrs. Smith.

Ms. Lewis was employed as a social worker for the Department of Social Service. Ms. Lewis was employed as a human service aid for the Department of Social Service since 1973 and was working from the Franklintown Rd. office.

The family will receive friends Sunday from 7 to 8 p.m. at William C. March Funeral Home, 928 E. North Ave. Funeral services will be held 12:00 Monday at the funeral home.

In addition to her mother, Ms. Lewis is survived by three children and a sister.

money man was coming.

And sure enough, just before the 'Fromobile' was to pull off (after Mr. Fro stopped long enough to award Thelma Spencer, of 3022 Mosher her quick $10 for her copy of the AFRO) up pulled a shining white Pinto, and out popped sister Cobbs.

"I stole away from work so I could get there before 'Mr. Fro' came," she laughed.

Laughter and joy was the order of the day, 'Mr. Fro' also rode around the corner to 940 Rosedale, where Ethel Mack was another $10 winner.

Her reward set off a ripple of interest like brush fire on the block. By the time 'Mr. Fro' drove off, all of the 900 block of Rosedale had AFRO window and bumper stickers.

The 2200 block of Druid Hill Ave. is an orange-and black-colored AFRO Clean Block. Now it is also the home of $10 AFRO in Your Home winner Garry Mapp, from 2215 Druid Hill. His red and white window sticker caught Mr. Fro's watchful eye.

His chance at $100 when he tossed the dart at the AFRO number board missed by one space. His looping throw ran out of gas at a crucial moment.

Ann Ricks, another $10 winner, didn't answer the door at first when Mr. Fro came-a-knocking, at 2411 Westwood Ave. Sister Rickie was an over-the-phone winner.

But again, just as 'Mr. Fro' was going to ride off, guess who came to the door, that's right, Ann Ricks.

"I was out in the back," she said walking toward the mobile, where her check was waiting.

And the checks could be waiting for you too. But you've got to read the AFRO to win.

It pays to read the AFRO.

MSU vice president for business and finance, said Dr. Billingsley chose to live in the house provided to the university's president by the state.

Billingsley could have asked for a supplemental housing fund of $6,000 and lived elsewhere.

Wickham reported that the MSU president had free use of a state supplied car.

However, Lassiter pointed out that the state-supplied car was a Ford Maverick and that, when Billingsley arrived, it was felt that the car would be put to better use by the university's security division.

Wickham reported that the Morgan Foundation leased a 1976 luxury-model car for the President and paid for it out of its funds.

The leasing of the car, according to Lassiter, was at Billingsley's request since he did not have a car. The payments and all costs, such as insurance were turned over to Billingsley in August 1976. The car is being paid for out his own pocket.

Wickham reported that the Foundation used funds to purchase a washer and dryer for Billingsley's home. Lassiter said the titles for both machines are in the university's name since they are state property.

In his new coverage Wickham recapped his allegations from last year that Billingsley made extensive personal use of his state supplied telephone.

In response, Lassiter said while the phone was state-supplied, the bills are being paid by Billingsley out of his own pocket.

Wickham wrote also that Billingsley made extensive use of the travel funds allocated to the Board of Regents.

Lassiter explained that the $400 allocated to the board has been spent. He said that the state only gave the school $1,105 for travel in the 1976-77 fiscal year and when officials decided that wasn't enough they asked state officials if they could use $5,000 in left-over funds from the 1975-76 fiscal year for travel use.

"The state gave us permission and the money was placed in the Board of Regents account for control purposes only," he said. "The funds are controlled by me and Dr. Billingsley and are used by the board and the entire administration only after their travel requests are approved."

Lassiter also pointed out that out of the $6,000, $3,914 was spent by the board and the administrative staff.

The university official also said the $15,000 given to Billingsley for use at his discretion, does not have to be cleared with the board of regents before being used. A social function and that the state provides the school with no funds for hospitality or discretionary purposes.

Foundation chairman Ken Wilson said that the money used for the discretionary fund is pulled from contributions donated for unrestricted use in the operation of the university.

Not only did the AFRO compare Wickham's report with school records but it also polled three predominately white schools as to their presidents' travel expenses and discretionary funds.

Billingsley received $700 from the state; $100 for in-state travel and $600 for out-of-state in the last fiscal year. All the money is gone. The school does not receive state money for discretionary or social functions.

According to Wade Shelley, financial official at Towson State University, TSU was allocated $630. Out of that money $175 was for in-state travel and $475 for out of state travel.

Shelley also said that their discretionary funds (Shelly called it holiday funds) totaled $500 and was provided by the state.

(Dr. Steven Fisher and Shelley said they were not pleased with the allocation stating that a state directive cut school travel budgets by 60 per cent each year.)

A spokesman for Salisbury State College told the AFRO that President Norman Crawford received $1,000 for travel expenses and $300 was given to the school from the state for what they called an entertainment budget.

Over at the University of Maryland College Park, John Bielec, vice chancellor for administrative affairs, said that chancellor, Dr. Robert Gluckstern was allocated approximately $2,000 in travel.

Bielec also told the AFRO that the College Park School has no discretionary funds.
