Measles shot deadline catches 9,000 students

Thursday was the deadline for all secondary school students to present proof of immunization against measles and 9,000 of them got caught without that proof.

So, as far as school officials are concerned they are truant students.

The students received "notice of exclusion" forms telling them they would not be allowed in class. It also provided a record for school officials in the event daytime curfew violations occur.

Individual schools were ordered by school officials to keep a precise list of students who did not comply with the state immunization law.

Dr. John L. Crew, school superintendent, will decide early next week what to do with those students.

Herring Run Junior High School at 5001 Sinclair Lane and Edmondson Senior High at 501 Athol Ave. will open clinics Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for all students who have not been immunized.

Earlier this week, Dr. Robert Lloyd, assistant superintendent for pupil personnel services, said he expected 16,000 students to be barred from classes.

The 9,000 students represent 12 percent of the 73,900 secondary students.

The state began a full scale promotion of immunization last May when 718 cases were reported during 1975-76.

A large number of cases had been reported in Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Howard, Frederick and Washington Counties.

The city schools began its campaign at the beginning of the school year by sending home questionnaires to be filled out by parents.

However, by mid-October only 60 percent of the secondary school students turned in the forms and it was later determined that the forms were too complicated and a simpler form was issued.

Dr. Lloyd reported 10 schools reported 95 percent or more of their students have received measles shots.

New homes for elderly

A $3.9 million housing development for the elderly will be built in the next three years in the predominantly white Wicomico County.

Vivian Benjamin, of the Maryland Department of Economic and Community Development (DECD), said Pine Buff Village will house approximately 80 percent white residents and only about 20 percent blacks and 2 minorities.

The $3.9 million financing will come from the sales of tax exempt revenue bonds by the department's Community Development Administration, which will be repaid from proceeds of the project rather than with tax revenues, according to DECD Secretary Joseph G. Anastasi.

Specifically designed for the elderly and the handicapped, the development will be fully sheltered.

All areas will be connected by enclosed walkways, each apartment cluster has an intercom connected with a central area and emergency pull cords are spotted throughout the complex.
