—'Peaches' arrested

The suspect was arrested at her home in the 1800 block Aisquith, the Eastside area where the dead man resided and not far from the tavern where he was slain with one blow in the throat with a knife.

"Peaches" is charged with murder and was detained Jan. 12 at Central Police Station.

According to information on file in the offices of Criminal Investigation Chief Col. William F. Rochford, the slaying occurred shortly after 10 p.m. Jan. 6 while Carter was a patron in a bar at 2006 Harford Rd. No motive has been given.

Col. Rochford states a widespread hunt for a woman suspect was initiated before midnight Jan. 6 and Homicide Sgt. George Christian and Det. Bryn Joyce and Gregory Policastro were assigned to investigate.

Among many reports received on the whereabouts of the suspect was one which described her as wearing light brown knee boots, a matching shoulder bag, grey pants and a rabbit fur jacket and travelling from one bar to another in the area of Greenmount, Biddle and North.

Other reports described a woman accompanied by a man nicknamed "Johnny Cake."

Ella Peaches' actual arrest came some 60 minutes after the funeral services for the slain man ended at the Grace Memorial Baptist Church, Eden and Chase Streets.

The Rev. Alfred C. D. Vaughn, pastor, presided at the last rites and at the Thursday morning services at the graveside in Arbutus Memorial Park.

More than 3,000 persons attended the last rites, a total which includes hundreds who stood in line at the church the entire afternoon Wednesday while the body was on view.

Long before the family hour began at 7 p.m., Morgan student, teachers, friends and relatives from three states lined up at the church doors and filled the auditorium to standing room only.

Mrs. Smith, known nationally as an author, poetess and lecturer on African and black American history sat on a bench near the foot of the casket with her son's fiancee, Ms. Laverne Woolfok and other family members. She was dressed in white and wore a white African headpiece.

The four-page program entitled "Commemorating the Passing of Ricardo Rogers Carter" was designed by his mother.

On the front spiece was a sketch of "Ricky." The last page held her farewell poem entitled "Ricky" and signed "Ma."

The message expressing her grief reveals Mrs. Smith "loved him more than anyone else on earth."

The poem also disclosed the fact that the mother has compassion and pity for the person who struck down her only child and caused her to bow down her head between her knees in mourning.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Smith wrote, "I am thankful to lift my hands and release my son to God who fully understands."

In addition to the Rev. Mr. Vaughn, participating in the last rites were the Rev. Leroy Fitts, pastor of Mrs. Smith's First Baptist Church; Jerry Goethe of the Kittamaqundi Community Church which Mrs. Smith helped found in Columbia, Md.; George Crawley, pastor, St. Paul Baptist Church. Also, Dr. Lucia Hawthorne, Ms. Joan Gross Coursey and Mrs. Audrey Phillips.

James Rouse, founder and developer of the Columbia city, who for many years has been an avid supporter of Mrs. Smith's writings, was among the mourners. He and hundreds of Columbians joined her at the Kittamaqundi Church each Sunday.

Young Carter, employed as a rigger at Maryland Drydock, was known as "Ricky".

Born Feb. 17, 1948 in East Baltimore, he was the son of Mrs. Smith and the late Ulysses J. Carter.

He was graduated from Morgan May 8, 1977 and received the Creative Arts Award. A member of the Grace Memorial Church, he was an enthusiast of health foods, sports car racing and weight lifting.

He and his financee had planned a spring wedding.

Mrs. Smith told the AFRO when she learned of the death of her son, she had just returned from an extended holiday speaking engagement at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

The longtime AFRO Honor Roll member and noted lecturer also scheduled several appearances this month to mark the Jan. 15 birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King and the February Black History month.

When the tragic news reached her at her home, she went to the bar where her son was killed and knelt in prayer.

Active and honorary pallbearers included Barry Wilson, Samuel Mitchell, Preston Hurtt, Tony Olando, Edward O'Neal, Meredith Brothers, Craig Darrow Simmons, Douglas George Stevens and Donald Stevenson. Funeral arrangements were by relatives, owners of the Reese Mortuary in Annapolis.

Then Branch and Watkins, with some suggestions from the AFRO, began working out a joint program directly aimed at curbing crime.

In a joint statement the next day, Jan. 11, BHCD and the police department stated the following:

Deputy Commissioner Frank Battaglia, acting for Police Commissioner Donald Pomerleau, had given the necessary orders to the police that representatives of Tactical, Narcotics Unit and Central District officers form a task force with the idea towards eliminating the crimes in the Murphy area."

In cooperation with the Murphy Homes security force, the Police Department Task Force will make it a goal to eliminate "the narcotics dealing and other vicious crimes at the Murphy Homes."

Watkins said a special STOP squad under the Police Department's Tactical unit was placed on duty in the Murphy area as of Jan. 12.

Police also asked that persons with any information of any illegal activities taking place on the grounds notify the Baltimore AFRO or the police department. A police official said "many citizens concerned about crime are reluctant to give us information out of fear, either of police or neighbors. The AFRO can protect their identity."

Branch and Watkins, after the AFRO meeting said they would work out a program whereby buses supplied by BHCD on days elderly persons and women who receive their Social Security and other checks on the first, third and eleventh of each month would be provided free for those individuals who want to cash checks. Police escorts would accompany the citizens from their doorways to the bank and safely home again.

While BHCD officials acknowledged that there are problems at the Murphy Homes they said there are on - going programs of improvement in Murphy.

They include: replacement of dryer units with individual ranges and refrigerators; installation of showers and improved stairtower windows and completed insect screens, exterior lighting, heating plant improvement and burglar alarm systems.

Such programs were made available with a $2,052,692 federal grant that is about to run out but one BHCD officials hope will be restored.

The grant came out of Federal Target Project Program housing monies ear - marked to help troubled public housing projects by coordinating physical improvements with social services activity.

The Murphy Homes were opened for occupancy in 1963 and are two developments housing 758 units with 658 units housed in four high rise buildings, and 100 low rise units.

Contained in 14.9 acres is a population of 2583 individuals. Of that total, 931 are adults and 1,652 are under age 17.

The average gross family income is $3,396 and the average net income is $2,464. Because of this 81.4 percent of the total Murphy Homes population receives some form of income assistance.

Considering the above statistics released by BHCD on the Murphy Homes, "the police units have their work cut out for them.

—Judge Baylor

"It is my firm intention to continue to dispense justice so much that no one can say anything (such as race, sex, age) was a handicap to me," Baylor said after being robed and escorted to the bench to sit among his colleagues.

With unemployment among black teenagers at 40 percent and growing, and an 80 percent black prison population in Maryland, Judge Baylor has his work cut out for him.

On another note, the newly crowned Supreme Bench judge told well-wishers of his roots. "The church has had a greater influence on me than any other institution," he said.

It was only sad for those not present that no cameras or other recording devises were allowed to take pictures and record the ceremony.

Del. Isaiah Dixon, D-Baltimore, credited Blount with turning around the mood of many of the legislators. "What began as a very humdrum session has turned out to be very exciting," Dixon said.

The bill went to the House of Delegates Wednesday for action on it.

The present welfare payment to a family of four is about $254 a month, or 81 percent of the state standard of need.

In his veto message, Mandel said it would cost the state about $26 million in grant increases and another $22 million in caseload increases associated with grant growth.

The Senate also overrode Mandel's veto of bills that prohibit the installation of sanitary landfills in Baltimore County within a set distance of residential areas and allow the committee on administrative, executive and legislative review to approve regulations on an emergency basis.

It was a tough day and unusual. If it continues at such a pace, something may get done and the lingering Mandel spell might disappear.
