Working with people

Waxter Center cites volunteers

By Weldon Wallace
Special to the AFRO

Nearly 200 men and women, almost all of them over 60 years of age, were honored recently for contributing their time and services to the many different programs of the Waxter Center for Senior Citizens.

The top rank of volunteers, those who gave the most time to the center during the past year, included Margaret Hicks, 74, who spent 2,500 hours helping frail or handicapped persons with their lunch, and James Love, 65, who put in more than 3,000 hours in the kitchen and dining room, performing tasks, vital to the serving of meals to as many as 350 persons daily per meal.

Mrs. Margaret Hicks

Mrs. Hicks and Mr. Love assist in making the federally funded program known as Eating Together, function smoothly.

In ceremonies held at the Waxter Center, certificates were awarded to all persons who have given service to this facility on a regular basis during the past year. Those who contributed more than 500 hours received pins in addition to the certificates.

Special commendation was given also to many persons whom Waxter officials deal with regularly throughout the city in carrying out the center's programs for older people. Some of these were members of agencies or business firms. In other cases, they were individuals acting on their own.

All the citations were made in the Mason F. Lord Room of the center.

This was the opening event in a week - long celebration of the Waxter Center's fourth anniversary. The theme of the observance was "From Waxter With Love." All week the emphasis was on thanking people who have cooperated with Waxter to help make its programs go.

Leon M. Woolf, the center's director and other officials of Waxter, led the ceremonies. A dance for all opened the day's observance in midmorning.

The volunteers themselves express enthusiasm about what they get out of participating in Waxter programs.

"I enjoy every minute, every hour, every day of it," said Mrs. Hicks.

Explaining the service she renders, the 74 - year - old Mrs. Hicks, a slender, lively and snappy lady, said, "I take care of the handicapped. I get their trays for them (from the food - serving line) and carry them to a table. If they are unable to use their hands, I open their cartons of milk or get coffee and bring it back to them."

She has been performing these services for the past two years, working five days a week from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Talking about her earlier life, Mrs. Hicks, who lives at 633 Carrollton Ave., said she had worked 23 years as a companion to a woman in Riderwood. In 1962, after her employer's death, "I retired."

For some years, she found an outlet for her energies through teaching arts and crafts to children in a number of churches. But while she loved the children, she found after a time that "they got on my nerves. I wanted to be with grownups."

The problem was how could she start a new life at her age?

A friend had the answer. "She said to me, 'Come on, Hicks, join the Waxter Center, and you'll have some places to go.'"

Mrs. Hicks finally agreed to "come down and sit and see how it works."

For five days she sat at the edge of the dining room in the main lobby of the center at 861 Park Ave. Then she made up her mind. She would be active at the center — but only in the dining room.

"I love people," Mrs. Hicks explained, "and I like to be amongst people." For that, she decided, there was no better place than the place where people meet to eat.

After two years of steady service there, it is still a fresh experience.

"Every day I see something new amongst people," she said. "There's no two people have a disposition alike. I try to observe each one and understand each one, so that it's not my fault if I can't get along with you.

"I try to make myself happy within," she added. "If you have a burden, you throw it on the other fellow, but if you're happy within, you make the other fellow happy."

James Love

James Love has found the diningroom at Waxter equally satisfying — getting so much out of it that he works there seven days a week from 9:30 a.m. to 3 or 3:30 p.m. daily.

"I wash dishes, help clean the tables, sweep the floor, do a little of everything," said the portly, neatly dressed Love.

The Congress Hotel is his home. But the Waxter Center gives him some place to go each day; to go and to do something for others.

Baptists to hold convention

The United Baptist Missionary Convention of Maryland and Auxiliaries will have its 52nd annual session May 23 - 26 at Mount Moriah Baptist Church, 2201 Garrison Blvd. The Rev. Arthur Benn is pastor.

Nearly 130 churches are members of the UBMC and more than 500 Baptists are expected to attend the four day conference.

Rev. Alexander will be speaking on May 23 and installation of officers will also be the same day. Formal opening of the women's auxiliary session is scheduled for May 24. Their theme is "Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Love."

The young people's department of UBMC will meet May 24. Their theme is, "Jesus, the Hope of the World, His Peace, His Power, His Presence Our Hope Secures."

Venetoulis says Justice Department 'bungled' minority hiring investigation

Baltimore County Executive Ted Venetoulis accused the Justice Department of "bungling" its investigation of minority hiring and denied charges in its discrimination suit filed against the County.

Venetoulis told a news conference, "It is clear the Justice Department has bungled.

"We have made efforts to hire minorities . . the suit is irrelevant in terms of what has taken place in the county," he said.

The suit, filed May 10 in U.S. District Court in Baltimore, charged the county failed to hire women and minorities and discriminated in hiring and promotions.

He said the suit came about because in the Justice Department "the right hand didn't know what the left hand was doing."

Venetoulis, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for Governor, said his office has been working directly with the government to improve minority hiring conditions in the County.

Federal funds, which the suit seeks to cut off, will not be lost because "we are right and they are wrong," he said.

In an unrelated matter, Venetoulis called the sentence given the Rev. Guido John Carcich "extremely unusual."

Venetoulis was referring to the fact that Carcich, who pleaded guilty to fraudulent intent in the misappropriation of more than $2 million raised for the poor by the Pallottine Fathers, was given a suspended sentence last week and ordered to work for one year in the state penal system.

"The reaction I have had while campaigning has not been a good one," he said.

The county executive said he did not think the case would hurt Attorney General Francis Burch, who arranged the plea bargain, in his gubernatorial campaign effort.

Venetoulis accused Acting Gov. Blair Lee III of talking rather than acting when it comes to implementing economic policies.

He said his reading of Lee's proposed economic policy for the state showed there were good ideas, many of which had been implemented elsewhere, including Baltimore County.

"The real issue is that the acting Governor, and the acting Governor, and all he has to do is act," Venetoulis said. "He does not have to wait for the General Assembly."

He said the issue for voters is whether the candidates are dealing with actions or words.

"I don't think (Lee) has proved his case," he said.

Extortion, child pornography, utility bills

Lee signs 400 bills into law

ANNAPOLIS — Actng Gov. Blair Lee III this week signed into law nearly 400 bills passed by the 1978 General Assembly, including measures to strengthen Maryland's extortion and anti - kickback laws.

The three measures bring Maryland's extortion laws closer to the more stringent federal laws.

Under the bills, a general extortion law will provide for a maximum 10 - year prison term for extortion by a public official, a $5,000 fine and a prohibition against future state employment and a kickback conviction will result in a maximum five years in prison and $5,000 fine.

The legislation was sponsored by Sen. Victor Cushwa, D.-Washington, and Senate President Steny Hoyer, D.-Prince George's.

Hoyer also sponsored a Maryland Geothermal Resources Act signed into law by Lee.

The act gives the Department of Natural Resources the authority to regulate geothermal resources in Maryland, mostly located on the Atlantic seaboard near Ocean City.

Ocean City Mayor Harry Kelly supports the bill, saying the Eastern Shore town will be the first in the country to use geothermal energy for heating and fuel.

Also signed into law was a third Hoyer measure allowing apartment dwellers to be billed individually for their electricity use — to promote energy conservation by rewarding those who use less electricity through lower bills.

A utility will still send its bill for an apartment complex to the owner, who then can bill each apartment according to use. Utility bills generally are allocated evenly among tenants, regardless of actual amount of consumption.

Lee also put his signature on measures increasing the state's aid to county school districts by about $27 million.

The money will be distributed among schools according to their student populations. Each school will receive about $33 more per pupil from the state, to be matched by local funding.

People living on low incomes were given relief through another bill signed into law. It raises the income eligibility levels for Medicaid so more people can qualify.

The use of children in pornographic movies or pictures will be prohibited under another of the nearly 400 measures signed by Lee today.

Other bills signed into law will:

—Prohibit the use of automated dialing telephone systems to solicit sales over the telephone.

—Allow the state to conduct studies of residential areas where truck traffic may be causing problems.

—Make negligence a proof of vehicular homicide while intoxicated rather than the current requirement of gross negligence.

—Require braille symbols in elevators in public buildings.

—Establish new state agencies, the Office for Children and Youth and the Office of Minority Business.

—Give colonial pipelines eminent domain to expand its pipeline in Maryland.

Think about dying for a minute.

Think about how your family would get along without you. And your income. Could they continue to live as you'd want them to?

More than likely they'd face a hard financial struggle as well as an emotional one.

But by thinking about the possibility of dying, you can decrease the possibility of that happening.

For example, if you don't already have a sound physical fitness program, now's the time to get started.

And if you don't already have a sound life insurance program, now's the time to give your agent from North Carolina Mutual a call.

It'll bring you peace of mind. Because it'll bring your family security.

It can help you live a lot easier.
