

the old friends and supporters of this office, in particular, will still find it to their interest to distinguish me by their favours, which will be gratefully received, and faithfully attended to.⁵

On November 1, 1793, Angell admitted Paul James Sullivan into partnership. Little is known about Sullivan. He was active as a Mason; he was a charter member and second master of the Concordia Lodge no. 13, of Baltimore;⁶ he probably was a soldier in the Revolutionary War: he was "amongst the brave and generous warriors who left this town, Frederick?, in defence of the happy laws of this state,"⁷ but none of his military records have been found.

The partnership of Angell and Sullivan continued until June 11, 1794, when Angell inserted a notice to the effect that "The Maryland Journal will in future be conducted under the name of the public's humble servant, James Angell."⁸ Sullivan may have retired because of ill health, for he died in Frederick on September 20, 1794.⁹

On October 31, 1794, Angell announced simply that he intended to "go into a different line of business."¹⁰ He was probably employed by the Baltimore Customs
